JUAREZ NORMAL FOLLOWING THE REVOLT OF ARMY

By United Press.

JUAREZ, MEXICO, Sept. 30.—Juarez was back to normal tonight after the shortest of its many revolutions.

Lights blazed from the stores as usual and in the cabarets the regular evening programs were in progress as though the "baby revolution" which the city today had the city in its grip had never happened.

General J. J. Mendez, commander of the local garrison, where a battalion said part of another revolted this morning under the leadership of a drunken captain, returned to the city this afternoon from his pursuit of the mutineers and stated that their force had been completely dispersed.

Eighty rebels were taken prisoners, practically all of whom face courtmartial and probably death. Three of the insurgents were executed this morning it was learned.

Captain Jesus Val Verde of the third battalion who led the mutiny has deserted his followers and fled with his staff into the hills Mendez declared.

Military Planes Sent Out.

Military planes have been sent out in an effort to locate him.

A special train bearing General Enrique Martinez and troops is due from Chihuahua City this afternoon. They were dispatched here when the revolt was first reported.

Col. A. Espinosa, commander of the third battalion which revolted, who was first a prisoner of his own men and then of the federals who thought he might have had a part in the mutiny, was at liberty tonight.

Ten known dead and 30 wounded was the toll of the revolt. The dead may total 20 when all are accounted for, authorities declared.

Two Americans were slightly wounded by stray bullets.

Jesus Vincente Carceres, 2[illegible] of El Paso, was shot in the shoulder and Luis Pesse, 19, fruit peddler, also of El Paso, was scratched by a bullet.

CHAMBER REVOLUTION WAS [illegible] TO OPPOSE ARMY [illegible]

By United Press.

EL PASO, TEXAS, Sept. 30.—The "baby revolution" at Juarez early today, during which the Mexican city was held for 4 short time by insurgent soldiers, was primarily a camouflage to detract attention from the real revolution being organized by General Francisco Murguia, those in close touch with the Mexican situation declared here tonight.

Friends of Murguia here predict there will be a series of revolts in northern Mexico in the near future. These will be followed by a coordinated major movement in the part of the revolutionists, they say.

This story was apparently strengthened this afternoon by a report received here that General Murguia, who mysteriously disappeared in Coahuila a few days ago, yesterday reached the camp of General Juan Carrasco, near Mazatlan, on the Gulf of California, in the state of Sinaloa.

The Mexican consul here and federal authorities at Juarez stoutly deny there is any connection between this morning's uprising and Murguia's rumored plans. They insist the incident was "merely a mutiny of drunken soldiers."

Mexican secret service operatives are at Juarez hunting for a secret agent of Murguia who is believed to have instigated the mutiny, it was learned here late tonight.

The revolutionary movement is now alive in the states of Chihuahua, Coahuila, Sinaloa, Durango and Nuevo Leon, its proponents here assert.

Reports received here today from Mazatlan say that a portion of Carrasco's forces have marched into Chihuahua and are camped near Batopilas where they are being joined by revolutionists of that section.

Federals are trying to find out what happened to the revolutionary army in a clash in Coahuila in the Big Bend district Wednesday.

Consul Francisco Zubiate of Marfa today reported 22 rebels were killed in Wednesday's battle. An unconfirmed report said that General Espiridion Rodriguez, commander of the federal forces in the clash, was also killed as were a score of his men. This report could not be verified.

NO MESSAGE IS RECEIVED FROM MEXICAN OFFICIALS

AUSTIN, TEXAS, Sept. 30.—Governor Neff has received no message from Mexican officials calling for an explanation of the uninterrupted proceeding of General Francisco Murguia from San Antonio into Mexico, where he is reported leading an uprising against the Mexican government, it was stated at the governor's office late today. Reports reached here today that such communications have been or will be sent to the Texas official. Governor Neff was not in his office today.

PRESS TREATS REBELLION AS AS OF LOCAL CHARACTER

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 30.—Newspaper dispatches from Juarez received late today tell of a summary court martial this afternoon at which three officers connected with the uprising were tried and condemned to death. It is presumed here that the rebels belong to the Murguia faction.

The afternoon newspapers treat the rebellion as of local character.

CHAIRMAN REPARATION COMMISSION RESIGNS

LONDON, Sept. 30.—Louis Barthou, chairman of and French delegate to the reparations commission, resigned, according to Associated Press dispatches from official circles.

AMERICAN NEGRO IN "BABY REVOLUTION"

JUAREZ, MEX., Sept. 30.—William Jackson, American negro serving 15 days in the Juarez jail, was an unwilling part of the "baby revolution" here today.

Captain Jesus Val Verde drafted the negro into service as a rebel when he released him from jail and forced him to carry a machine gun. He was among the first prisoners taken by the federalists.

REACH AGREEMENT ENDING STRIKE ON GULF COAST LINES

HOUSTON, Sept. 30.—Agreement ending the shopmen's strike on the Gulf Coast lines and the Houston Belt and Terminal railway is announced by D. B. Gray, general chairman of the six crafts on these lines.

Negotiations were concluded today at a conference of committees of the men from Kingsville, DeQuincy, La., and the local belt and terminal shops with W. G. Choate for the company.

According to Mr. Gray, the men will return to work with seniority and other rights as of June 30. The rights and seniority of present workmen in the shops will not be disturbed, the agreement provides.

About 400 of the 500 men who went out on these lines will return to work Monday, Mr. Gray said. Practically all the other strikers are expected to be back on the job within 30 days he anticipates.

The agreement is in conformity with other separate agreements.

Uncle Joe Cannon To Hit the Trail To the Old Home

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Uncle Joe Cannon dug into his cedar chest today for some woolen things he will wear next week when he hits the same trail westward to Illinois that he and his parents took 83 years ago in emigrating from the hills of North Carolina.

The early voyage westward was made in an old prairie schooner, out of the back of which Uncle Joe then barely four years old, watched the shifting scenery and dreamed. Even now, as he approaches 87, he remembers the nights he played around the camp fire, the hardships and the stars that peeked down at him as he slept.

There was something that resembled a tear in the veteran's eyes as he recalled today his earliest recollections of that trying trip, but they sparkled as he talked of his coming trip over the same old pike—this time in an automobile.

"After March 4 next I will make my last journey homeward as a member of the house," said Uncle Joe. "So the trip by motor, delayed and delayed and delayed, will be made at this time, and on every foot on the road my heart will beat with happiness as I think of the many honors that have come my way. I have decided I had better go now, for March is a long way off and I am growing old."

DISMISS OLDEST CASE IN HOUSTON U. S. COURT

HOUSTON, Sept. 30.—Under authority of the attorney general at Washington the oldest case on the federal courts criminal docket here was dismissed today by District Attorney Holden. It was against 13 Houston doctors, nine of whom were tried some years ago, the indictment having been returned in October, 1914. The charges involved use of the mails.

DEMOCRATIC FACTION WILL OPPOSE REED

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 30.—The Volunteers' association of St. Louis, democrats, today formally decided to oppose United States Senator James A. Reed for reelection this fall. The organization composed of followers of Breckenridge Long, formerly third assistant secretary of state who was defeated by Senator Reed at the primary election August 1, is headed by Lon Stephens, formerly governor of Missouri.

NO COURT ACTION IN PEDDY CONTEST TO SATURDAY NIGHT

AUSTIN, TEXAS, Sept. 30.—Contests against democratic and republican nominees for United States senator were considered settled here today unless court action is forthcoming following announcement by Secretary of State S. L. Staples that Earle B. Mayfield's name will be certified as democratic nominee without further ruling from the attorney general.

Supporters of George E. B. Peddy, republican nominee, however, have announced that proceedings will be brought to compel the secretary of state to certify Peddy's name. No action was filed in the supreme court today.

Secretary Staples today finished plans for printing the offical ballots but these will not be completed until probably the middle of next week. Meanwhile, court action is probable. Lists of district, congressional and judicial candidates already have been sent out.

TRIAL OF MINERS IN HERRIN TRAGEDY WILL BEGIN NOV. 8

MARION, ILL., Sept. 30.—The date of the first trial growing out of the 32 Herrin mine killings was formally set today for November 8 by Circuit Judge D. T. Hartwell. This date was agreed upon as a compromise between the defense and the state's attorneys, and after the attorneys for both sides had announced they would be ready on that day to take up the case of the 48 defendants charged with murder in connection with the death of Howard Hoffman of Huntington, Ind., one of the 19 employes of the Southern Illinois Coal company who were killed near the Lester strip mine June 21 and 22.

While State's Attorney Delos Duty and Attorney General Brundage asked that the trial begin next week, the attorneys for the defense sought a postponement of the cases to the February term of the court. It had been announced yesterday by Judge Hartwell that he would set November 13 as the day of the first trial, but the date was advanced because of his desire to have these cases settled as soon as possible.

VOTERS OF ILLINOIS TO EXPRESS OPINION ON DRY AMENDMENT

SPRINGFIELD, ILL., Sept. 30.—Voters of Illinois will express their opinion of the prohibition laws at the November election. Attorney General Brundidge ruled tonight that Secretary of State L. L. Emerson must certify to the respective county clerks of the state, the beer and light wine proposition requested in a petition signed by 600,000 voters.

The state's legal head held the public policy act of the state broad enough to include a question involving any amendment to the federal constitution.

Steamer Aquitania With 1352 Aboard Battered By Storm

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Her deck houses and outside fittings battered and twisted in a terrific storm at sea September 24 and 25 the Aquitania with 1,352 passengers, arrived in port today.

Her commander, Sir James Charles, declared that the storm which lasted 52 hours was the worst he had experienced in his 42 years at sea.

The Aquitania suffered its first heavy blow at 2 o'clock the morning of the 25th. Waves that towered over the vessel like Pike's Peak, according to one passenger, rushed aboard. Portions of the glass-inclosed promenade deck were shattered and ports 40 feet above water line battered in.

Members of the crew hastened to the assistance of terrified women and children, wrapped the water soaked ones in blankets and carried them to the lounge.

Charles A. Peters, a director of the Middle States Oil company of Tulsa, Okla., with his wife, daughter and son, occupied a suite on the starboard side of the deck. At 4 o'clock the morning of the 25th when the storm was at its height Mr. Peters said a wall of water smashed in the windows, flooding the room.

After the storm was over the passengers made up a fund of $1,000 to be distributed among the Aquitania's crew, who were praised for heroic work.

TURKS EVACUATE COAST TERRITORY TO BRITISH ARMY

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 30.—The Kemalists have evacuated Eren Keui and the British now control the whole coast of the narrows from Chanak to Kara Bournou. The latter point possesses an excellent quay, enabling warships to anchor in deep water.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 30.—The mission of M. Franklin Boullon to Smyrna where he went to confer with Kemal Pasha, has been successful, according to announcement by the French officials here. He is coming to Constantinople tomorrow by the cruiser Metz, probably to consult with General Harrington, commander in chief of the British forces.

In replying to the latest note of the nationalist leader, General Harrington requested him to direct the Turkish commander in the neutral zone to meet the British commander for the purpose of drawing a new line between the British and Turkish forces which would be without prejudice to the neutral zone.

Hamid Bey, the Angora representative here, announced this afternoon that Kemal would confer with the allied generals at Mudania early next week.

He declared, however, that the nationalists would remain in the neutral zone pending settlement at Mudania of the controversy.

The British army, now considerably reinforced, is in high spirits in the face of the Turks' deliberate intrusion into their private precincts of Chanak. A high authority likened the situation to a family which was obliged to tolerate an unwelcome guest.

Kemal's precipitate action in leaving for Angora after General Harrington had suggested a friendly conference at Mudania has caused surprise in diplomatic circles.

BRITISH CABINET HOLDS MIDNIGHT WAR COUNCIL

By LLOYD ALLEN
United Press Staff Correspondent.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—The British cabinet after having been called for a midnight war council by Lloyd George, adjourned early Sunday morning. The other ministers will convene at 10 a. m. It is understood that they considered important advices just received from General Harington at Constantinople, but decided to defer the issue of peace or war with Turkey in hope that more favorable news may be forthcoming within a few hours.

Crowds stood outside the historic Number 10 Downing street as the ministers' autos rolled up. Heads of the war, navy and air departments participated in the council.

The foreign office throughout the night received hourly communications from Sir Charles Harington, British commander in chief in Constantinople, which officials described as "unimportant although requiring immediate attention."

An air of tension hung over the foreign office.

The cabinet had met earlier in the evening, but adjourned when no news was forthcoming from Constantinople regarding the situation brought about by Mustapha Kemal's refusal to evacuate the neutral zone of the Dardanelles.

When the previous session adjourned, the premier asked his ministers to forego their usual week-end holidays to the country and to remain in London during the crisis.

High government officials were most pessimistic regarding the situation. The press frankly stated in large headlines that England was "on the verge of war."

FRENCH GOVERNMENT HAS DECIDED TO HANDS OFF

PARIS, Sept. 30.—With hostilities imminent in the near east between the British and Turks the French government tonight made known that it would not send soldiers to the zone.

The government, in case a Turkish or English soldier is shot, will not consider the incident as a justification for either power to go to war. This case would be considered the same as that of Corporal Thuget who was killed in French territory two days before the war started in 1914.

Premier Poincare wired Franklin Boullon, French envoy now in conference with Mustapha Kemal, to get Kemal's reply to the allied request that neutrality of the Dardanelles zone be respected.

NEGRO BELL BOY FOR A MEMPHIS HOTEL IS FLOGGED BY ROBED MEN

MEMPHIS, TENN., Sept. 30.—A negro bell boy, accused of having insulted a white woman guest at a local hotel, was taken to a secluded spot near the city and severely flogged by a band of white robed men early today.

The negro was called from the hotel, forced into an automobile and taken several miles into the country, where his captors were met by a masked band of 30 men, who after flogging the negro, ordered him to walk back to the city. No report of the flogging has been made to the police.

WEATHER FORECAST FOR COMING WEEK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—Weather outlook for the week beginning Monday:

Gulf states: Generally fair, normal temperature. Probabilities of occasional showers in Florida.

Pet Cat Victor In Battle With Big Rattlesnake

BALLINGER, TEXAS, Sept. 30.—"Tabby" the pet cat of Judge A. K. Doss, here today was the victor in a battle to the death with an enormous rattlesnake.

The cat was taking a sun bath near the Doss home, when the reptile appeared as if by magic, according to Judge Doss, who witnessed the encounter.

"Tabby" with fur bristling, arched its back and issued a challenge to the intruder. The snake struck twice, hitting where the cat had just been.

Then the feline did its stuff.

"Tabby" would strike and jump back. The snake struck repeatedly—into the air. The cat's sharp claws tore the snake into threads. The cat was unharmed.

Judge Doss severed the snake's five rattlers to keep as a souvenir.

Bobbed Hair Girl In Jail for Year In Trouble Again

HOUSTON, Sept. 30.—Flora Moore, bobbed hair girl, who has been held in county jail here for more than a year in connection with the killing of Morris A. Conroy, oilfield driver, is now facing a federal charge in Shreveport, La., of transporting a stolen automobile from Texas to Louisiana. Walter E. Lessery, acquitted of a charge of murder in connection with the Conroy killing, also faces a charge similar to that against the Moore girl at Shreveport. He has made bond for his appearance. A state charge of automobile theft pending against the Moore girl here was dismissed.

NEW VICTORY, OHIO, SLEEPING ON ARMS; AWAIT TWO LIONS

KENTON, O., Sept. 30.—The village of New Victory, nine miles southeast of here, "slept on its arms" tonight.

A posse armed with high-powered rifles surrounded the town to protect it against the possible return of two full grown lions seen near here late Wednesday by William Wilkerson, prominent farmer.

The posse was divided into "outposts." Some were stationed near the dense woods where Wilkerson says he saw the animals.

Others formed a line nearer the city limits should the beasts manage to pass the outposts unobserved.

"Spooning" and petting parties were not in evidence here tonight. After nightfall, the town was strangely quiet. Thirty years ago New Victory was visited by a lion. It marooned the entire town indoors for two days until it was shot and killed from a second-story window.

TWENTY CITIES 'LISTEN IN' HAVANA TO SAN FRANCISCO

CLEVELAND, OHIO, Sept. 30.—With 20 cities "listening in" after answering a transcontinental roll call, conversation was carried on over a circuit which extended from Havana, Cuba, to San Francisco last night at the convention of the Telephone Pioneers of America. A violin solo in San Francisco and chimes record played on a phonograph in Havana followed, the demonstration concluding with the sounding of taps by the same bugler who sounded taps when the unknown soldier was buried in Arlington cemetery.

Everything that transpired was heard by the audience here through amplifiers, as well as by Havana, San Francisco and the 20 other cities.

WIFE OF GENERAL OF MEXICAN ARMY COMMITS SUICIDE

NOGALES, ARIZ., Sept. 30.—The wife of General Abelardo Rodriguez of the Mexican army committed suicide today in a Mazatlan hotel here it was reported.

Mrs. Rodriguez shot herself following a violent quarrel with her husband, it was reported. Mrs. Rodriguez was an American. She married General Rodriguez in San Antonio a few years ago when Rodriguez was commander of military operations in the northern district of Lower California.

MOROCCO TRIBESMEN BATTLE WITH FRENCH

MELILLA, MOROCCO, Sept. 29.—A native rumor which has not yet been confirmed tells of a fight between the French and Beni Lilian tribesmen in the French zone. The French are reported to have suffered very heavy casualties.

NEAR EAST EVENTS HAVE A DEPRESSING EFFECT ON MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Events in the near east had a depressing effect on most securities values in this week's markets, but professional traders generally construed the reaction as a natural correction of an over bought condition. While speculators for the decline took all possible advantage of the unfavorable foreign developments and scared away a number of prospective buyers, the course of the market at times seemingly substantiated the belief that it was governed by technical considerations.

There was no striking change in the domestic situation to alter the expected moderate revival of business. Shortage of freight cars naturally has caused some concern on the part of manufacturers who are threatened with temporary curtailment of shipping facilities, and increases in wages and prices have aroused some anxiety as to their effect on earnings, but the general situation continues encouraging.

REPORT THAT KING OF JUGO-SLAVIA HAS BEEN ASSASSINATED

By Associated Press.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—An unconfirmed report has reached the Hungarian news agency in Paris that a revolution has occurred in Belgrade and that King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia has been assassinated. The news agency gives out this report "under all reserve."

BELGRADE, Sept. 30.—The Serbian press bureau issued a note today denying "the alarming news concerning a reported revolution in Belgrade aimed against the crown." It declares these reports are due to enemy activities.

"Although this news is of such an extravagant character as to need no denial," said the press bureau note, "we are authorized, owing to the publicity given the reports to declare that they come from enemy sources" launched with the object of creating confusion at the moment the question of the near east is being agitated."

UNIFIED CAMPAIGN IS INAUGURATED TO FIGHT BOLL WEEVIL

DALLAS, Sept. 30.—Plans for a unified campaign to combat the cotton boll weevil were laid at a meeting here today called by the Texas chamber of commerce and representatives of about 50 agricultural and business organizations of the state.

Destruction of the boll weevil by fighting the pest during the autumn while its vitality is lowest will be the chief method adopted by the central committee which has the campaign in hand.

Tests previously conducted have proved that the weevil can be controlled to a large extent, according to Dr. W. D. Hunter of Houston, a member of the federal horticultural board.

Ways and means of controlling the boll weevil also were discussed by George B. Terrell, Austin, state commissioner of agriculture; Walton Peter, secretary of the Texas farm bureau federation, Dallas; T. O. Walton, College Station, director of the extension department of the A. and M. college of Texas, and Dewitt McMurray of Dallas, editor of the Semi Weekly Farm News.

James Z. George, Dallas, manager of the Texas chamber of commerce, was chosen permanent chairman of the conference.

FIRST EXPOSITION GIVEN SPLENDID START SATURDAY

The first Texas-Oklahoma Fair, a sign and symbol of the spirit and energy that have worked wonders in Wichita Falls before and that did not fall short in the attainment of this, their newest objective, came into being Saturday as nearly a complete, unequivocal success as its most sanguine worker had dared to expect.

Less than three months ago it was nothing but a letter head and a hope. Saturday many thousands saw the rich fruition of that hope. To use the word success in describing this new institution is to disparage the handicaps, the difficulties that have been met and overcome in bringing it into being; considering these, it is more than a success; it is a triumph.

Complete and wonderfully interesting in its exhibits and displays, joyously entertaining in its amusement features, and efficient in its management and conduct, the Fair at once met the hearty and enthusiastic approval of all who entered its portals Saturday.

Saturday night Secretary C. H. Verschoyle of the fair association announced that the total attendance for Saturday was 28,612.

From early afternoon until late at night, the grounds were thronged with visitors. It was a gay, carnival aspect at all hours, the flags and the busy crowd during the day, and the brilliant lighting effect at night, making it such a scene as has seldom been witnessed in north Texas.

The crowd was hearty and emphatic in its approval of what it found to see. Doubtless there were some who had journeyed to the grounds expecting only a make-shift fair and who were prepared to overlook many short-comings, but officials of the fair association had locked the alibis up in a box and thrown the key away. They heard words of praise that were a rich reward for the weeks of strenuous work.

Officials Are Elated.

George Keith and C. H. Verschoyle, president and secretary of the association, were proud and happy individuals Saturday night. The realization that the fair had "gone over big" in stage parlance, was theirs, and they and the many who had worked with them were overjoyed at the start that the fair made. There were mistakes, and delays, even on Saturday, but those were buried deep under the approval that the fair as a whole met at the hands of its patrons.

Wichita Falls folks turned out in large numbers, but it could not be said that they constituted even a majority of the patrons. Autos and trains brought hundreds from northwest Texas and southwest Oklahoma points and the out-of-town representation was enormous. When these visitors carry to their home-folks the story of the glittering success of the fair, it is believed that many will follow their example in paying it a visit.

Is Formally Opened.

The formal opening of the fair Saturday morning was a brief ceremony, very brief in view of the significance of the occasion. Mayor Frank Collins spoke a few words of welcome, and there was a word of response and congratulation by President Keith and the first Texas-Oklahoma fair was on its way.

The fair is noteworthy in many ways, and among these not least is the spirit of cooperation and teamwork of which it is an evidence. Every member of every department "got in there and pitched" and as a result every department was in top notch form for the opening.

The transportation problem was a pressing one Saturday, presenting a situation that will probably be remedied before another year. The effort to limit service car fares to 25 cents each way did not succeed, drivers charging a dollar for the round trip. Shuttle trains and street cars carried thousands and there were other thousands who went in their own cars, the latter causing some congestion on the paved road. But most everybody who started got there and got back.

Vaudeville and Fireworks.

The 6,500 people who passed through the entrance gates at the fair grounds Saturday night attempted in four short hours to take in all the sights. It was merely an attempt as it is an utter impossibility to give the exhibits the proper attention and pass in review before all of them in that short space of time.

The vaudeville entertainment and the fire works were the feature attractions of the evening. It was announced after three acts were given that seven of the ten scheduled acts had not arrived but would be on hand for Sunday night and each of the succeeding nights.

The fireworks extensive and most beautiful brought the usual "oohs" from the thousands of people who occupied the grand stand seats and formed a living enclosure wall.

Not less than a thousand dollars worth of fireworks were destroyed for the amusement and wonderment of the spectators. In addition to the sky rockets, air chasers, flower pots, bursting stars, whirley gigs and other queer acting apparatus Mt. Vesuvius was pictured as it belched forth its load of lava and dirt and destroyed the ancient city of Pompeii.

Spectacular Features.

The other features in the fire works entertainment was a beautiful water fall presented in the form of fire and burning powder. Two back yard cats, the kind that attract the house slipper and the shoe were shown on the fence engaged in a jeering and howling contest ending up in a scratching and biting fight. This ended when both of the "fire-cats" fell from the fence.

From out of a mass of sparks and smoke came the distinct outline of the city street water sprinkler. When this showed up clearing against the dark background of the night the [illegible] of the [illegible] How [illegible]!

GOVERNOR EDWARDS TAKES INTEREST IN MURDER MYSTERY

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Sept. 30.—The grave has yielded the most important clues yet discovered in the secret of the Hall-Mills murder, it became known here today.

Arrest of a man heretofore unmentioned may be a matter of a few hours, detectives let it be known following revelations in the exhumation of Mrs. James Mills, choir leader, who was found slain beside the body of Rev. Edward Hall, Episcopal pastor.

Spurred by public sentiment, rewards, charges of lax investigations and the interest Governor Edwards of New Jersey is taking in the case a score of detectives began a sudden spurt of activity.

Information that a hitherto unsuspected man was being investigated followed a tearful visit of Charlotte Mills, daughter of the murdered woman, to Governor Edwards.

Reports were circulated here tonight that Miss Mills told the governor of stories she had heard of "powerful interests" working to hamper solution of the weird murder.

ONE WORKMAN IS KILLED AND FIVE MORE INJURED AT OKLAHOMA REFINERY

PONCA CITY, OKLA., Sept. 30.—One workman was killed and five injured, two seriously, when the staging about an oil still in course of construction at a refinery here collapsed this morning, throwing the men twenty feet to the ground.

Albert Pinkly of Wayside, Kan., was killed.

Smelled Alcohol Man Was Doing Family Washing

By Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Sept. 30.—Police Lieutenant Arthur W. Burroughs was making his rounds late last night when he imagined he was inhaling alcoholic fumes.

Approaching a cottage he saw a copper boiler on a gas stove and a man stirring its contents.

Sergeant Patrick McCarty, a ventriloquist, answered the summons for aid. Down on his hands and knees McCarthy clawed the door and imitated a dog's bark.

When the door was opened the officers discovered that the man was doing the family washing. "It must have been ammonia or something," explained the lieutenant.

CITY BONDS VALUED AT $35,000 STOLEN AT JAY, OKLAHOMA

JAY, OKLA., Sept. 30.—Negotiable improvement bonds valued at $35,000 were stolen last night when the safe in the county treasurer's office here was looted. Between $[illegible] and $50 in cash was also obtained.

The robbery was discovered this morning when County Treasurer W. M. Sanders opened his office for business. A clue leading to the haunt was found soon and the contents of the vault had been scattered about in [illegible].

DR. ROUTH AND MR. GARDNER AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

The Sunday services at the First Baptist church will be conducted by visiting ministers.

Dr. F. C. Routh one of the outstanding denominational editors of the south, and former pastor of some of Texas' best Baptist churches will deliver an address at the morning hour. He is regarded as a forceful speaker and his message which will bear on the world-wide program of southern Baptists will be of interest to others than the local congregation.

In the evening Mr. T. C. Gardner state director of Baptist Young People's work, will bring an inspirational message for young people and all who are interested in young people. This will mark the opening of the one week's training school for the young people of the First Baptist church, together with the cooperation of other Baptist churches of the city and county. Much interest is being manifested in this work which is under the capable direction of Mrs. Horie McGregor.

Carriages with contrivances to measure the distance traveled and count the hours spent in the journey were used in Rome in the second century.

MIDWAY DRAWS ENORMOUS CROWD FOR VARIED SHOWS

Young America—or that part of it that was lucky enough to get to the Texas-Oklahoma fair yesterday, had the time of its life. The midway—where the Wortham Shows are presenting the traveling Coney Island—was the goal of thousands. And those that visited the joy walk made the best of the opportunity.

In keeping with the anticipations of the show folk the youngsters came early and remained late. The shows opened at ten o'clock, and it was after that hour in the evening that they closed. The midway is too big to try to discuss in detail, but the whole offering is of high class amusement.

All along the south avenue of the fair grounds are strewn the many attractions. They begin with a fast ride called the Broadway Whirl and end with one four blocks away that is called the seaplanes. Between the extremes come every thing imaginable to make the midway a place of delight.

One of the fascinating places is the "crook house of the big show. This is the unofficial headquarters and the dining room of the nomadic city. It also is open to the public and many a housewife studied the dispatch with which meals are prepared and the clean way they are served.

The circus, the auto-drome, the monkey circus, the water circus and trained seals, the fat folk and all other shows got their quota of patronage. One of the show men was asked yesterday what he thought of the fair. He replied:

"Not surprised at all. It was written on the wall. With such excellent grounds and such fine spirit the fair must win. In a few years it will be on the map as one of the biggest in the southwest."

Bandit Gardner Wants Operation Money Available

LEAVENWORTH, KANS. Sept. 30—Roy Gardner known as America's most elusive bandit has applied to the department of justice for permission to have an operation performed on his brain to relieve pressure which he claims is responsible for his reign of lawlessness.

Gardner is serving a long sentence at the federal penitentiary here following his capture at Phoenix, Arizona a year ago after an attempted mail robbery. He then made an escape from McNeil Island, California.

Money for the operation has been deposited in a local bank. Funds of $250 came from an unidentified source in California.

NEW AND MODERN GENERAL HOSPITAL DOESN'T GIVE A GERM ANY PLACE TO HIDE

A hospital plant as complete as any to be found in Texas will be available for residents of Wichita Falls and Wichita county before the end of another week, when the enlarged and remodeled general hospital is opened for patients. It is claimed for the new institution that by means of it local patients can be accorded every comfort, and every convenience available in the southwest's most modern institutions.

The building has a capacity of 125 patients, without crowding and it could increase its capacity to 140 if the necessity arose. Patients, whether charity or pay, will be cared for in wards or rooms so spotlessly clean and so arranged with regard to sanitation, that one looks almost in vain for a place where a germ might hide. Tiled floors throughout the building are one important factor for sanitation, nothing is lacking that could make for greater cleanliness.

The old building had two stories and basement the new one has four stories without basement. The first floor contains a modernly equipped X-ray room, a laboratory, a nurses class room, a sterilizing room room for special nurses, nurses dining room, kitchen diet kitchen laundry ward for negro patients two prisoners' cells, boiler room and a room for the negro porters, in general it is the untility floor of the establishment. A new feature is the "jail or place provided for prisoners or insane; this consists of two rooms with steel doors and barred windows.

The second floor is devoted almost entirely to wards and rooms. Space being provided also for offices. In the wards, there is provision for from four to six patients. Another feature of the second floor is a spacious sun porch on the west side.

The third floor is almost entirely given over to private rooms. It also contains the typhoid ward, which has special sanitary arrangements, there is room for six patients in this ward.

The fourth floor is mostly occupied by the surgical and obstetrical departments such space as is not occupied by these being devoted to additional private rooms. The surgical department in the east end of the floor is a marvel of convenience and completeness. There are two operating system of windows and sky-lights affording the maximum of illumination. A utility room instrument room doctors room, nurses' room, anaesthesia room and other accessory rooms are conventiently arranged.

At the other end of the fourth floor are the obstetrical ward, the delivery room and the nursery.

Elevator and dumb waiter service are provided for the building. The lighting fixtures are of a design calculated to give a maximum of light with a minimum of upkeep expense.

The building is practically fireproof, there being nothing inflammable except the doors and window sills.

A staff of 12 graduate nurses and 20 or more student nurses will be on hand in the hospital. The city and county have acquired a building nearby for a nurses' home, and will probably build an addition to it shortly.

The hospital was constructed by the Whitehill Construction of this city. C. J. Pate is the architect. The institution is under the management of the hospital board, which consists of Dr. M. M. Walker, president, Dr. Q. B. Lee, secretary, Dr. Clark of Iowa Park, Dr. Shepard of Burkburnett, Mrs. L. B. Fain, G. C. Wood.

Whitcomb. A temporary restraining order against execution of the orders had been obtained by two Topeka corporations.

AUTOMOBILE SHOW DOESN'T FAIL TO DRAW ITS SHARE OF OPENING DAY'S CROWDS

Few of the thousands who visited the Fair Saturday failed to pay a visit to the automobile department which occupies two of the big buildings and which was an attraction for nearly everybody from the small boy who is many years from his first car to the blase folks who buy a new model every year.

The array of shining, tempting cars, polished and groomed to the last bolt is one of the best of its kind ever staged by local dealers, and the latter had already shown that they are no beginners in displaying their wares.

The following exhibits filled the two buildings:

Weaver Motor company had on display, a Lafayette phaeton, Hudson speedster, and an Essex coach.

The James Motor company, Stephens sport model and brougham.

Eckman Motor company, Hupmobile Hupmobile touring and coupe.

WILDCAT TESTS IN 2 FIELDS PROMISE NEW DEVELOPMENTS

SOUTH BEND AND ELECTRA GET OUTSIDE WELLS DURING PAST WEEK.

WATER SITUATION IS SHOWING IMPROVEMENT

Increase In Activity Is Seen at Electra; Good Completions In Archer.

Last week brought forth several new oil developments in this district, especially in the Wichita and Young county pools. Good completions were reported from the Archer, Electra and Herron pools and production for the entire district showed an increase of over 3,000 barrels since the figures of the previous week.

The outstanding features were the Hemphill well on the Corbett tract, making 3,000 barrels, in the South Bend field, and the picking up of the 1900 foot sand by the Griswold Oil company at Electra which may add a big territory to the producing area of the south field. The test is located in section 27 of the Waggoner tract, about two miles west and the same distance from any other well producing from this depth. The top of the sand was encountered at 1941 feet, showing considerable oil, casing has been set and the sand will be given a thorough test.

Among other wells completed during the week in this field were three by the Texas company on their Waggoner tract, all in the 1900 foot sand. No. 239 and No. 240 are making 80 barrels each and the company also finished No. 237 on the Morris survey with a production of 25 barrels from the sand at 1945.

On the L. P. Douglass land east of town, the Gulf Production company is preparing to drill in its lease on the north part of the land and has set casing on the 1900 foot sand. John O'Neil also finished a good well in his No. 4 on the Rio Bravo tract of the Waggoner lands, reported good for 250 barrels from the 1900 foot stratum. Many tests which have been forced to shut down drilling operations on account of the water shortage are making arrangements to resume work, a supply of water being furnished in the south field by the completion of the Texas company's new line. Several locations have been made and a number of companies are hauling material to the locations, and a general picking up of all kinds of work is seen in all parts of the territory south of town.

Two Archer Completions.

Archer county furnished two completions during the week in different parts of the field. The Sunshine Refining company's No. 1 Ferguson in the Mankins district has set casing on a good sand at 1425 feet, and looks like a producer in the Texhoma pool. Scott and Cook completed their No. 1 on the J. M. Goss tract in the sand at 1[illegible] feet and it is reported to be making 150 barrels. The same company has made location for their second test on this tract.

To the south the Texas company which completed their No. 3 on the Chance lease last week for 1[illegible] barrels, is drilling No. 7 and No. 8. The former is down to 1300 and the latter has reached the depth of 600 feet. The Texhoma company is also showing a great deal of activity on their properties in this county, on the Wilson and Gose leases. Production during the week from the county reached nearly 3,000 barrels.

Stephens and Eastland counties gained in production during the week due to some good wells brought in from the Pioneer section of the latter county by the Stable Oil company on the Black land and McCamey & Sherrin on the Brooks making 200 barrels and extending the field a short distance to the north. The Prairie company also finished a good well at 1850 feet on the Cunningham farm north of Eastland on the Stephens county line and it is making 150 barrels.

Wildcat at South Bend.

The week's sensation from Young county was furnished by the bringing in of the No. 1 well of M. R. Hemphill on the Corbett tract about two and one-half miles southeast of the town of South Bend with an estimated production of 2,500 to 3,000 barrels from a sand at 3,981 to 4,010 feet late Friday evening.

The flow of oil which was accompanied by 15,000,000 feet of gas quickly filled the 500 barrels tank which was all the available storage at hand and from latest reports is flowing in the slush pit. The well is located in the R. J. Scott survey and in the northwest corner of the Corbett ranch.

From present indications the well is the biggest producer brought in from this section of the county since the completion of the big gusher by the North American company on the J. J. Scott land a few months ago which made a spectacular flow of 5,000 barrels daily.

By the finishing of this well the deep pay is extended about one and one-half miles to the south.

Many things of interest happened in the Herron City field during the week. Possibly the most important of these was the bringing in of the Tyrell corporation's river bed well for better than 200 barrels when the sand was topped at 2,526 feet. The well looks good for 500 or 600 barrels when finished. It is one location east from the original Burton & Hopper river bed well which came in last week. Tyrell Oil corporation is drilling another river bed well east of this one in the next bend of the Brazos river while the Associated Oil Syndicate is drilling between the two making in all four river bed wells in the Herron district. It will be recalled that these wells are on state land and that the revenue derived from them in the way of royalties goes to the state school fund.

Mullen & Madden are tubing their No. 1 Hughes which was [illegible] good for 100 barrels. Tyrrell et al on the Williams found the pay at 2,257 feet. The well is now making 150 barrels of oil and 2,000,000 feet of gas from the top of the sand. It has all the car marks of a good well when completed.

The Associated Oil Syndicate got the sand in their No. 2 Hughes at 2,287 feet. The well is now making 200 barrels of oil. Dudley Miller struck the top of the sand at 2,380 feet in his Hughes No. 1 west of Herron City. The well is spraying oil.

Wells & Spelling are rigging up on their H. P. Young No. 1, at Henry Chapel. This test will be directly north and across the river from the Pilzer & West well in Wild Bend, and since it will mark the trying out of new territory in this direction it will be watched with special interest by operators in this field. Fultz & Albright are erecting a derrick on Carter No. 2 in Carter Bend, while Shepherd & Ligon are rebuilding rig on old Carter No. 1 (Roddie) in Carter Bend, which burned down some weeks ago when a pocket of gas was unexpectedly encountered at 1,445 feet.

The Texas Company Jake Jones No. 1 was given a thirty-quart shot which increased the flow to 500 barrels. This is the north offset to the big Raico-Roark well. Bond & Company No. 1 Long on the Bunger church lot is making 200 barrels. Fred Foster's Parson's No. 1 has been tubed and is thought to be good for 300 or 400 barrels. The Fred Foster absorption plant at Bunger, eight miles south of Graham, is nearing completion. The management hopes to have it in operation within thirty days. Gasoline from the plant will be piped to the nearest point on the W. F. & S. railroad, a distance of some three miles.

Lamar Avenue Baptist.

Mr. T. C. Gardner, state B. Y. P. U. director, will speak at the morning hour, bringing a special message for the young people of the congregation.

In the evening, Dr. E. C. Routh editor of the Baptist Standard, will bring a special message for the church, making a special appeal for the 75 million campaign drive which is now in progress. The pastor, Rev. A. J. Holt, desires that each member of the church attend these services, since they are of such vital interest.

CITY IMPROVEMENT BONDS ISSUES WIN AT SEYMOUR FRIDAY

SEYMOUR, TEXAS, Sept. 30.—City bond issues totaling $89,000 carried here Friday by overwhelming majorities and were apportioned as follows: Sixteen thousand dollars of sewer extension bonds received 244 votes to 40 against.

Twenty-five thousand dollars of water bonds carried 234 to 40 against. Eight thousand park improvement bonds 204 to 69 against and 240,000 for city hall and auditorium carried by 174 to 94 against.

These bonds were successfully carried last July, but on account of irregularities in election orders it became necessary to resubmit under Friday's election.

FISHER COUNTY FARMER DIES RESULT INJURIES SUSTAINED WRESTLING

ABILENE, TEXAS, Sept. 30.—Jesse Randolph Cooper 24, a young farmer of near Roby, Fisher county, died here this morning as a result of injuries received a week ago in a wrestling bout at a carnival at Rotan. He sustained an injury to the spinal column and was brought to a hospital here. He leaves a widow.

Made a Hit With Him

"My wife has taken your medicine and has been wonderfully benefited. For over four years she has had trouble with bloating and could scarcely eat any food because of this condition. Doctor's medicines did not help her and an operation was advised. Her brother, who is a druggist, sent her a bottle of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy and it helped her at once. I cannot praise your medicine enough." It is a simple, harmless preparation that removes the catarrhal mucus from the intestinal tract and allays the inflammation which causes practically all stomach, liver and intestinal ailments including appendicitis. One dose will convince or money refunded. Black Taylor and druggists everywhere.—adv.

367 Fire Alarms Thus Far in 1922, $195,000.00 Loss; Campaign Planned

October 2 to 9 has been designated by President Harding as national fire prevention week. Owing to the dates conflicting with those of the fair no plans have been made for local observation of the event in lieu of this fact the fire boys pepper a carnival will begin October 9 with a fire prevention parade, including all the equipment of the four stations in the city, the public is asked to participate in this parade. In addition to this the department has secured several prominent speakers to address the citizens on fire prevention on that date. The carnival will be held at the lake and ample amusement will be provided. Proceeds of the festival will go to the firemen's relief fund.

Fire calls and losses this year have been unusually high. The department answered 367 calls during the first nine months of 1922 with losses amounting to $195,455. This number exceeds by over 100 calls the alarms of 1921 or the previous year. The average loss per alarm has been $532.60.

In spite of a well equipped department and an efficient force, these losses will occur as long as the public is careless. According to a statement made by Chief McClure, 80 per cent of these fires are the result of carelessness. With the proper cooperation of the citizenship and attention to fire hazards, Mr. McClure believes, these figures can be reduced considerably.

Passengers on Train of Love Receive a Jolt

Passenger trains No. 1 and No. 2 on the L. O. N. L. railroad were derailed Saturday and the occupants of each severely jolted. There were no fatalities.

Aboard passenger train No. 1 was a young man and a young woman accompanied by a friend of the young man. As they turned into the switch in the cross corridor of the county court house and entered the tunnel labeled "County Clerk's Office," the mishap occurred.

"How old are you?"

"I'm 21," responded the young man.

The reply made to the response was that his looks deceived his age. The young man with him was asked to sign the affidavit that the prospective traveler on the train of love had lived the required number of summers. He said he wouldn't sign any affidavit, but he knew that the young man was employed where all employes had to be over 21 years of age. The train backed up and left.

A short time later passenger train No. 2 entered.

"How old are you?"

"I'm 21," said the young man.

Again the inquiring look by the tender of the toll gate.

"What year were you born?"

There was a pause and the lower lip of the young man quivered. Then "1902—No. I mean 1901."

Train No. 2 backed up and departed.

WHEAT CROP IN FRANCE MORE THAN FOURTH SHORT

PARIS, Sept. 30.—France's wheat crop for 1922 is more than one-fourth short of last year's production and nearly one-third under the customary annual requirements according to statistics prepared by the ministry of agriculture and published today. Rye also is insufficient, but oats and barley are more abundant than last year.

MISSIONARY HERE FROM AFRICA FOR HOME CHURCH VISIT

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Evans of Kamerunn, West Africa, Presbyterian missionaries employed by the First Presbyterian church of this city, are now in Wichita Falls, and will remain here during this week.

Mr. Evans will speak at the First Presbyterian church this morning. On Tuesday evening a reception will be held at the church for Mr. and Mrs. Evans; this was originally announced for Monday night.

The missionary church of which Mr. Evans is in charge, in Africa is supported by the local church. Mr. and Mrs. Evans are in the United States after four years missionary service. While here they are guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Culbertson.

Entertains With Birthday Party.

Miss Jeanette Rosalee Lane celebrated her sixth birthday Friday afternoon with a very pretty party. Ice cream and cake was served with red grape punch. The cake was decorated with six miniature dolls, candles which carried out the color scheme of the table decorations. Those present were: Beulah Lucas and Alfred George Lane, Clarence Harness, Cecil Bozeman, Preston and Vernon Thompson, Robert Denham, Mildred Marshall, William, Maurice and R. G. Martin, Opal Sample and Dorian and Green White. Old fashioned games and contests for which prizes were awarded led zest to the entertainment. Little Miss Jeanette was showered with presents from her young friends.

TAX PAYING WILL BEGIN ON MONDAY MORNING, OCT. 2

TAX COLLECTOR ANNOUNCES THAT ALL RECEIPTS ARE WRITTEN.

ASSESSOR COMPLETES NEARLY ALL OF ROLLS

Any and All Taxes Will Be Taken and Receipts Issued, M. L. Tittle Announces.

The tax paying season opens Monday morning at 8 o'clock. Tax Collector M. L. Tittle announces that he is in position to receive any and all taxes that property owners wish to pay. Practically all of the receipts for property taxes have been written and await the money.

The tax assessor's office force has practically completed the making of all the rolls but is still engaged in working in the odds and ends that remain after the larger rolls are completed. The rolls this year were made by a combination typewriter and comptometer.

The tax paying season remains in effect until the last day of January and as is usually the case no rush in the payment of the taxes is anticipated until after the first of the new year.

However there is usually a scramble each year for the receipt of poll tax No. 1, a large number of local citizens making a bid for it.

As has been the rule heretofore, property tax payers can pay poll taxes without paying the property tax but this rule does not work reversed. It is an iron bound rule that when property tax is paid that the poll tax must be paid

As was the case last year, two poll taxes are charged against each married man who pays a property tax and both of these must be paid. The rule that a husband can pay his wife's poll tax or vice versa is still in effect.

OLDEST DRUG STORE IN CITY BOUGHT BY A WELLINGTON MAN

H. T. THORNBERRY

Sale of the Miller Drug store, at Eighth and Ohio, by Harry T. Thornberry, who has been its proprietor for about 12 years, to J. O. Fisher of Wellington, Texas, was announced Saturday. Mr. Fisher will take charge of the store today. The consideration was $31,000.

The deal involves the oldest drug store in Wichita Falls in point of continuous ownership, Mr. Thornberry having been proprietor of the store, in its present location, since 1910. Prior to becoming owner, he was employed in the store by the late Dr. R. L. Miller, who had established the store some years previous.

Mr. Thornberry will continue a resident of Wichita Falls, having other interests here which will occupy his time

The new proprietor is no stranger to the drug business, having been owner of the Palace Drug store at Wellington for the past nine years. He recently disposed of his Wellington store and decided upon Wichita Falls as his future home. Mrs. Fisher and the four children will join him here shortly. Mr. Fisher has long been recognized as one of Wellington's most progressive citizens, and will be substantial addition to the ranks of Wichita Falls business men. Mrs. Fisher is a niece of R. L. Eads, well known farmer and oil operator, who resides in this city.

The deal for the store was negotiated through Wayne Hammon, and was closed Saturday.

CANCELLATION OF JITNEY PERMITS IS FOUND NECESSARY

At a joint meeting of the city council, representatives of the chamber of commerce fair association and service car drivers association Saturday it was decided that under the present ordinance the fair association had no authority to issue permits to drivers other than those bonded and licensed by the city.

The plan of allowing drivers to operate between the city and the fair grounds with only a fair association permit was devised to remedy an awkward situation, without question as to its legality, it was stated.

The bonded and licensed drivers brought the matter before the city officials and asked for a change in the plan. No agreement as to the fare for taxis running between the city and exposition grounds was reached.

FIVE HUNDRED BALES OF COTTON FOR JAPAN

WEATHERFORD, TEXAS, Sept. 30.—A contract for the shipment of 500 bales of cotton to Yokohama, Japan, direct from Weatherford, was recently signed by an agent of a Japanese firm with headquarters at Dallas, in this city. The deal will involve something over $50,000, it is said, and will also do much to open the local market. The cotton, according to present plans, will be shipped to Galveston from here, where it will be loaded on a steamer bound for Japan.

ODD FELLOWS AND REBEKAHS OF WEST TEXAS DISTRICT HOLD TWO DAY CONVENTION AT HENRIETTA

HENRIETTA, TEXAS, Sept. 30.—About 100 delegates from I. O. O. F. and Rebekah lodges in nearby counties held the second annual meeting of the United I. O. O. F. and Rebekah association of west Texas in Henrietta Thursday and Friday.

Delegates were met at trains Thursday and taken to the lodge room, where lunch was served from 12 till 1:30, and dinner was served again Friday at the lodge room.

Hon. Frank L. Holaday, president of the association, called the convention to order at 2 o'clock Thursday and introduced Rev. J. N. Hunt, who offered the invocation. Following this there was the address of welcome on behalf of the Odd Fellows by Judge J. S. Dickey, and on behalf of the city by Hon. W. J. Glasgow, city attorney. Responses were made on behalf of the Rebekahs by Mrs. E. I. Patton of Jacksboro, and on behalf of the Odd Fellows by Rev. C. M. Hundley of Byers

After musical numbers by Mrs Willie C Smith, Mrs. Vessie Maxwell, and a reading by Miss Orleta Payne, the annual address of President Holaday was delivered.

Reading of the minutes of last meeting, communications and receiving reports of committees brought the Thursday evening session to a close, and the night session was devoted to music and a radio concert.

Friday morning after an invocation by Rev. G. F. Jones and a musical number by Miss Jimmay Norman, there was an address by Hon. J. W. Chancellor of Bowie Strictly business matters were then taken up and continued until the hour of adjournment.

Thursday night O. T. Liles broadcasted an Odd Fellow address to the convention from the W. S Radio Supply's broadcasting station in Wichita Falls. This feature supplied an interesting number on the convention's program. Many musical numbers were rendered by local musicians in connection with the radio concert:

The officers present were: President, Frank Holiday, Henrietta; first vice president, Rev. J. A. Mathews, Sunset; second vice president, Mrs. Effa I. Patton, Jacksboro; secretary, J. R. Bryant, Jacksboro; treasurer, J. W. Lucas, Jacksboro, and chaplain, R. G. Taylor of Graham.

The following Odd Fellows and Rebekahs represented their respective lodges over the district.

Frocks for Fair Days

A fall frock is indispensible for Fair week and fair weather. Wool and silk vie with one another for popularity in the new dresses, while all of them adopt the slender silhouette. Touches of Chinese and Persian embroidery in bold rich colors lend a note of brightness to the somber shades seen so much this autumn. Sleeves split down the side expose the arm but fasten securely at the wrist.

Frocks $14.95

A special selection of dresses grouped at this unusual price for Fair week. The quality of these dresses would lead you to expect a much greater price. Both canton and wool dresses in a wide variety of styles are included in this group. Priced $14.95

Coats With Luxurious Fur Collars

Soft deep pile fabrics fashioned in the "wrappy" models with the most luxurious of fur collars. A rich note of embroidery gives the finishing touch to many of the coats. For the woman who prefers a more conservative model in her coat, we have many attractive styles. $25 to $100.00

Furs to Complete the Autumn Costume

The most charming of autumn frocks is made more charming by a soft fur choker of baum or stone marten. Or perhaps you prefer a boa—we have them in beautiful skins of good, large size. Many coats, wraps, and capes of exquisite beauty are in our collection of better furs. $15 ..... $500.00

Printed Duvetynes $4.95

A soft pile fabric in designs of the richest shades of autumn. This fabric was bought to sell at $6.95 a yard, but we are pricing it at the attractive price of $4.95

Pan Velvets $6.00

Shiny costume velvet in blue, rose, brown and black. As these velvets are 40 inches wide, just a few yards will make a dress. Priced, a yard $6.00

Paisley Silk $3.50

In printed designs in attractive new autumn colors Priced per yard $3.50

Sakawa Crepe $4.50

Silk Crepe in the new autumnal shades of Kingfisher blue, navy, jade and black, 36 inches wide, priced very special $4.50

Canton $3.50 and $3.75

In the very best quality, 40 inches wide, in all the desired colors, priced per yard $3.50 and $3.75

Kersey Cloth $3.75

A wool fabric resembling broadcloth In all the new shades as well as the ever popular conservative colors 54 inches wide, priced at per yard $3.75

A THOUGHT FOR TODAY

Counsel in the heart of man is like deep water; but a man of understanding will draw it out.—Proverbs 20:5.

Wise men are instructed by reason; men of less understanding by experience; the most ignorant by necessity; and beasts by nature—Cicero.

Texas-Oklahoma Fair, September 30 to October 4, Wichita Falls

PUBLIC SENTIMENT WILL BE AROUSED.

The Dallas News Saturday devoted a column and a half of space to an editorial discussion of the ruling of the attorney general that the name of Mr. Peddy could not appear on the republican ticket as a candidate for senator nor on any other ticket—not on the republican ticket because that party had not followed the election in holding a primary and not on an independent ticket because Mr. Peddy had participated in the democratic primary and stood pledged to support the nominees of the primary. Every line of the News discussion was full of sound reasoning and of interest and it apparently could find no fault with the ruling of the attorney general except that he would probably not have been called on to make a ruling except for the fact of the strength of Mr. Peddy's candidacy.

If the attorney general's ruling stands, as it probably will, it will serve to emphasize the obstacles offered by our present election laws to getting an independent candidate's name upon the ballot. The Terrell election law offers serious obstacles to independent voting in Texas and was probably designed to do so. Whatever may have been the expediency of such restriction at one time has now disappeared and if the democratic party is to regain its position in Texas as a virile organization devoted to great principles and measures it can only do so if it is awakened by the challenge of independent candidates when the party fails to reflect in its candidates and platforms the choice and beliefs of a majority of the members of the party.

The barring of Mr. Peddy's name from the ballot is certain to arouse public sentiment to the need of changing the election laws and while the same minority element which controlled the San Antonio convention will probably dominate the state legislature the demand of an awakened public for greater political freedom in Texas cannot long be ignored.

EARLY GATHERING OF COTTON CROP.

From reports gathered from every section of the state, W. C. Barrickman, secretary of the Texas Industrial Association, estimates that more than sixty-five percent of the Texas cotton crop is out of the fields.

This is a fine record, the more so because there has been little rain or high winds in any section of the state to cause damage to the crop. In this the dry, hot weather has had some compensation at least. The crop has been gathered at a minimum cost and without damage and while considerable distress cotton has been forced upon the market credit has been so organized and made available to the farmers of Texas that this kind of marketing has been greatly reduced

There is another very gratifying feature in connection with the early gathering of the crop and that is that it will permit many children who might otherwise be kept out of school to pick cotton to have a better opportunity for attending school.

There is also another feature of importance. It is claimed that the plowing under of cotton stalks before frost is an effective method of checking the boll weevil. The cotton plant is the essential food of the boll weevil, those who advocate this method declare. The boll weevil does not hibernate until frost, so it is claimed that if the cotton stalks are plowed under before frost the boll weevil is soon starved to death. This appears reasonable and is certainly worth trying for if it does not destroy the boll weevil it will place the ground in splendid shape to retain the moisture from fall and winter rains and to receive from the air those elements so necessary for plant growth

COOPERATION HAS MADE TEXAS-OKLAHOMA FAIR A SUCCESS.

The Texas Oklahoma Fair is a success.

It may or may not take in enough money to pay expenses, but from the standpoint of exhibits and attractions it is a Fair that reflects credit upon the community and the men who have given of their time, their thought, their efforts and money to bring it into being

It may not be the biggest Fair in Texas but it is clean and attractive and the exhibits are fairly representative of the industries, the business and many phases of the life of the people of this section They are entertaining and educational

For the first effort toward holding a fair here it is distinctly creditable But as good as it is it is but a start toward a great annual exposition in Northwest Texas.

Citizens of Wichita Falls who have put so much effort in making this first exhibition what it is are to be congratulated. They have done a splendid work. And acknowledgement ought to be made of the splendid spirit of cooperation manifested by the citizens of many communities in this section. They have given the project most cordial support and without their help the Fair could not be the success it is. It makes Wichita Falls debtor to these communities. And special acknowledgement ought to be made to the press of Northwest Texas. The papers throughout this section have manifested a strong interest in the success of the Fair and have given it more publicity than any exhibition of the character ever received in Texas. The press has shown a splendid spirit and Wichita Falls ought to have nothing too good for the editors of these papers.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

EXPRESSING THE UNEXPRESSED.

Every once in a while somebody steps out of the crowd of men and women and says something very much to the point—something that nearly everyone has felt at some time or other, but was too timid to express.

Emerson was a man who was unafraid under the thought of isolation. His was a mind rich in discoveries.

Stevenson says that "it is only by some bold poetry of thought that men can be strung up above the level of everyday conceptions to take a broader look upon experience or accept some higher principle of conduct."

The few recorded words of Jesus tell us in magnificent fashion of His power to "pioneer the unexpressed."

Rather than to be afraid of and repulse new ideas and new plans when they are placed before us, we should blush with shame that we didn't have the courage to champion them first.

There is a responsive chord in every human being that is tuned to receive the other chords of its kind.

We are drawn to him whose sympathy of heart and understanding warms our own, and whose mind helps us better to express the thoughts which we think.

But most of us are brought up under such conditions of habit, circumstance, conventionality and conformity to custom, that it is only the exceptional person who is able to break through these and express himself as he thinks, in honest fashion.

A large number of human beings wilt away through the repression route

Give a flower only half its requirement of sun and water and see how it is repressed in size and beauty. Nature has to open up. It has to have its full quota of room.

What we all need and must have to fully express the finest that is within us, is a happy background. And where is there to be found a better background than that made up of other people through whom we may work and help?

An understanding friend is able to make us express the unexpressed in ourselves.

(Copyright, 1922, George Matthew Adams)

JUST FOLKS

—By—
Edgar A. Guest

WHEN OCTOBER COMES.

When old October comes along
And sees the work all done,
The children gathered in a throng,
The old folks in the sun
Just resting up a little while
And dozing in their chairs,
The mother with a patient smile,
Forgetting all her cares
And grateful to the God above
That she has lived them through.
Perhaps he sees a little of
The tasks we've had to do.

He never knows the April snows
And rains that battered down,
He never sees the garden rose
Or tulips in the town,
He never sees the pansies bloom
Or hears the robin sing,
For old October spells the doom
Of every growing thing.
He finds the trees complete for him
To tint with red and gold,
But never feels the struggles grim
That come with growing old.

And yet perhaps he understands
How patiently we've wrought,
And sees our worn and wrinkled hands
And knows how hard they've fought
He never sees us in the fields
Beneath the burning sun—
When brush and paint October wields
The work has all been done;
And yet, as every maple glows
With wondrous beauty rare,
I think perhaps October knows
How much we've had to bear.

When comes October's angel down
To summon us away,
To robe us in his fairest gown
And rest our weary clay,
Although he has not seen us here
In times of grief and woe,
Struggling and toiling, year by year,
I think perhaps he'll know.
He'll find us with our labors done,
And with his red and gold
Will tint the trials, one by one,
That come with growing old.

Duty Well Performed.

Denison Herald: The Williamson county (Illinois) grand jury, empanelled and directed to investigate the Herrin massacre in which numerous nonunion workers were slaughtered a few months ago, seems to have performed its duty well. In a comparatively short session of investigation it returned into court indictments charging more than two hundred citizens of the community with the crime ranging from assault and conspiracy to murder to premeditated murder. In addition to presenting true bills against the defendants, its report to the court goes to the bottom of the outrage and deals unsparingly with all who were connected with it, directly or indirectly. At the door of the sheriff is laid the major blame, in that it is alleged that instead of using the powers of his office to prevent commission of the crime of which he had foreknowledge, he purposely absented himself from the vicinity in order that the slaughter might be made complete without official molestation. This official, it appears, is a candidate for county treasurer and the obvious inference deduced from the jury's report is that the sheriff, whose sworn duty it is to curb mob violence and prevent crime, made it convenient to be in another section of the county and to take no action toward preserving peace and protecting human life through fear of injury to his candidacy. It also appears that the official is a holder of a union card and by his failure to discharge his duty as the law imposes, he placed loyalty to the organization ahead of his obligation as a public official. Likewise are officials of the state, and particularly the adjutant general, scored unmercifully by the report. Without question, the report says, state officials knew or had reason to know that trouble was impending of such a nature as to call for protective and preventive measures. The adjutant general has sought to excuse himself on the plea that he was not authorized to dispatch troops to Williamson county without a request so to do from the sheriff. This is proven untrue, and it stands as an illustration of "passing the buck"—a shifting of responsibility which is quite common with a great many officials when confronted with proof of their own remissness in the performance of duty. A significant feature of the Williamson county grand jury's action in returning indictments against such a large number of the Herrin mob is the ability it displayed in identifying the guilty. In other states, and particularly in Texas, grand juries have found it an impossible task to discover or to uncover members of mobs which have committed violence, whether they were masked or unmasked. It is of historical record in this state, where the mob spirit has openly been displayed in broad daylight, the law trampled upon and society outraged by unspeakable crime, and yet grand juries with all the inquisitorial powers with which the law clothes them, have been unable to identify a single member. We have had recent demonstrations of that fact here in Texas. Unless officers to whom the public looks for protection and for maintenance of law and order rigidly and fearlessly discharge the duty imposed upon them, and unless grand juries likewise prove sufficiently courageous to indict when the law has been violated, we had just as well abolish courts and substitute for them the law of the jungle. It is a difficult matter of course for officers to go against public sentiment. That was the trouble with Sheriff Thaxton of Williamson county, aside from any sympathy he might have had and still has for the men connected with the tragedy. But, even though his sympathies be thus extended, if he had had reason to believe that public sentiment would not sustain him in his neglect of a sworn duty, he would have exerted every effort to prevent the crime. Before the laws are enforced as they should be an awakening of public sentiment must be brought about. Citizens must realize that they are important cogs in the law enforcement machine and not only must require strict performance of duty by officials but at the same time must understand that they, too, have obligations to be met which they cannot escape in seeing that the law is upheld, society protected and civilization perpetuated

REMOVE THE CAUSE

By DR. R. H. BISHOP

When one's blood contains less than the normal number of red corpuscles or lacks the normal amount of coloring matter in the red cells one says he is anemic—has weak blood.

The common symptoms of anemia are general weakness, shortness of breath on exertion, tendency to dizzy or faint spells, dull and more or less constant headaches, fluttering or palpation or darting pains about the heart, nervous irritation, unsatisfying sleep, finicky appetite, perhaps loss of normal color, paleness of the lips, together with "that tired feeling."

The causes are well nigh innumerable but foremost is bad air. Indoor life, air contaminated by gas stoves unattached to flues, lack of sunshine, digestive disturbances, improper food or small unnoticed hemorrhages are a few of the causes.

The treatment of anemia is, naturally, the removal of the causes.

Fresh fruits and green vegetables offer the best or most assimilable iron for the building of new blood.

We all know the necessity of sunlight for plant life. If you have ever picked up a board that has lain on the grass for some time you have undoubtedly noticed that the grass beneath the board is yellow or a very sickly green. So it is with human life. Sunlight is a powerful stimulant to the manufacture of blood corpuscles.

Don't depend too much on blood tonics. Iron in the blood must come from natural foods not from medicine. True medicinal iron stimulates digestion, perhaps, and thus stimulates blood-making organs to activity, but it can hardly be counted on as an aid in the actual making of the corpuscles themselves.

"TOYS."

Will Day's museum exhibition in London shows one of the early attempts at moving pictures, Sir John Herschel's "Thaumatrope," or spinning desk. A dog is drawn on one side of the disk, an empty kennel on the other. Hold it to the light. Revolve it. The dog appears to jump out of the kennel.

The Thaumatrope was sold on the streets as a scientific toy. That's all that most people in those days thought the moving picture idea ever would amount to. It isn't long since people had the same notion about radio, flying machines and autos.

SKYSCRAPERS.

London makes a concession to its merchants and permits the erection of buildings 140 feet high. The tallest building over there is Whitehall Court, a club house, 110 feet high.

We Americans wouldn't have anything taller if high land values didn't force us up into the air.

RUTENBERG.

Sad days for Pinhas Rutenberg, Russian engineer. He has a concession from the British government for a monopoly in Palestine for the production of electric light and power with exclusive right for 70 years to utilize the waters of River Jordan and Yarmuk. The Turks may keep M. Rutenberg very busy for the rest of his natural existence. Yet when the house of commons voted him the monopoly last July 4, the sailing looked clear. You never can tell what the morrow will bring forth, anywhere, these troublesome times

SLEEP.

Lord Leverhulme, king-pin of British manufacturers, who made his money in soap, says that American ownership of three-fourths of the world's gold is not as great an asset as our habit of early rising.

Yes, and our national debt is not half as great a liability as satan's invention, the alarm clock.

DIGESTION.

A "glass stomach that digests foods" is perfected by chemists of the department of agriculture. Food is put into it, pepsin is added, also hydrochloric acid to the amount existing normally in the real stomach. An incubator keeps the mixture at stomach temperature, 37 degrees centigrade.

By experiments the glass stomach is expected to teach us a lot about what to eat and how to cook it to make it digest.

The stomach and other organs are nothing but machines. Do you take as good care of your body-machine as your flivver?

RESPONSIBILITY.

A mother in an eastern city sues neighbors for $5,000 damages, claiming that they taught her child to swear.

Rare cases like this are attempts to fix responsibility at its source. The idea could be applied many ways. It should be.

The man who, crazed by bootleg liquor, commits a murder, usually is not as guilty as the criminal who sold the liquor. The drug vendor, by all rules of common sense, is responsible for most of the crimes committed by drug addicts.

Inciting to crime is on a par with inciting to riot.

FORESIGHT.

When high tariff goes into effect consumers discover that the tariff duties are added to what they pay for imported goods. That sets the new price and the seller who brought goods in ahead of the tariff in most cases can pocket the duty as extra profit.

Several hundred million dollars' worth of foreign made goods have been rushed into the United States and stored in warehouses "ahead of the tariff." This is foresight, the cunning ability that makes poor men rich and rich men richer. Foresight and luck build nine out of ten big fortunes. Few realize this, because from youth we are raised on the false philosophy of platitudes. Foresight comes usually by brain development, only occasionally as a natural gift. That's why no one can get too much of any kind of schooling.

LOAN.

In ruins of Nippur, Mesopotamia scientists dig up a brick on which is engraved the record of the oldest known loan secured by collateral. Bel Nadin Shun loaned 30 bushels of dates and took a mortgage on a farm as security.

Uncle Gus.

Uncle Gus was busily dusting the shelves and hastened to explain the phenomenon. "I been readin' a book wrote by a radical" said he "an I'm workin' a little to git the bad taste out o' my mouth

"These radicals is all alike—I mean the kind what goes off half-cocked an' is always dreamin' o' reformin' the world by jangin the folks an' givin' the goods to the poor.

"It's a law o' nature that folks has to earn what they git. Even the animals runnin' wild has to rustle fo' the' grub an' take the chances o' gittin' et up. I don't know as you ever noticed it but when a houn' dawg gits to suckin' eggs it soon gits into all kinds o' meanness

"And when these radicals gits to despisin' the law o' nature what says a man must earn what he gits, it ain't long afore they git to despisin' all laws

"After a spell they git to thinkin' it's all right to steal the property o the rich an maybe blow up the rich man an' then they git to thinkin marriage laws is all nonsense an' it's all right to live with one woman a spell an' then try a fresh one

"Sometimes these moss-back conservatives is in the way a right smart but if it wasn't fo them the wouldn't be no use fo' a hell This world would be hell enough fo anybody"

Concerning Liberty.

Liberty, like the kingdom of heaven is within you. Where the king is a tyrant the subject may be a free man and where the people are the government the craven will be a slave

This is a land of free men, and yet few are free for few are willing to pay the price. A man is not free while he follows any course against his will

Smith is employed by a man who is an ill-bred and discourteous tyrant—a little man whom authority has transformed into an ass. Smith yearns to resign to loosen the eye teeth of the boss and leave him flat on his back. He loses his temper, however and submits to abuse and insult for the sake of a salary. Smith is no free man. Things could not make him more a slave than he now is

And so are all men slaves who for the sake of a profit preach a doctrine in which they do not believe, flatter people whom they do not respect or uphold principles in which they have no interest

Only those are free who follow always the whims of the first person singular without regard for any conscience save their own, unaided by the world, the boss and the devil

The world has a rod in pickle for the nonconformist but any man who is free who is willing to take the awards prepared for those who will dance when the world pipes

Friendship.

Many of the imperfections of our civilization are occasioned by our failure to solve the problem of distribution. And it is an unfortunate distribution of the material of which friends are made that causes the greater part of man's unhappiness. Philosophers get their happiness out of their own cosmos; creatures who find hard and fast by habit get their happiness from their work; but the average mortal must get happiness from his friends or he will never know what happiness is. I say that a man has no friends is not to condemn him. It is but to say that he is out of harmony with his environment

As a rule, friends are people who think the same things. In a society of ardent religionists, the admirers of dancing might be without friends. But in a society wholly devoted to the pursuit of pleasure, the kill-joy reformer would be in similar case. One problem is to afford each of us a means of meeting his kind

Our present friends are not a fair test of our ability to choose friends. We did not choose them from the universe, but from an environment. They were the best available. Given opportunity, we might look about the world and find a thousand friends more worthy than these we have and doubtless some among the thousand would be persons who, like ourselves have been making the best of bad bargains and forever falling short of complete happiness because circumstance has denied them opportunity to meet kindred spirits

THE GIRL AND THE BUTCHER BOY

The ladies—God bless them are for the most part true to the marks they have chosen and captured come better come worse but deep in their hearts remains a little spirit of adventure that causes them to hope and maybap to believe that other men who stand at a respectable distance are unhappy in the loss of a love they cain't enjoy

The girl across the street has been holding executive sessions for a week and suffering much in the interest of pulchritude. Now the freckles that she adored on her cheeks and contested for public space on her nose are gone and this morning she came over to ask Daughter's opinion of her front elevation

It hurt like a sore, she confessed but I was tired of being spoked

I know how you feel" said Daughter who is very romantic "You wish to be beautiful for Heron

It was [illegible] said Daughter "I am [illegible] and he wants me any more when I'm off. But it [illegible] as though I belong to him and I'd die of humiliation if he left me for them or [illegible]

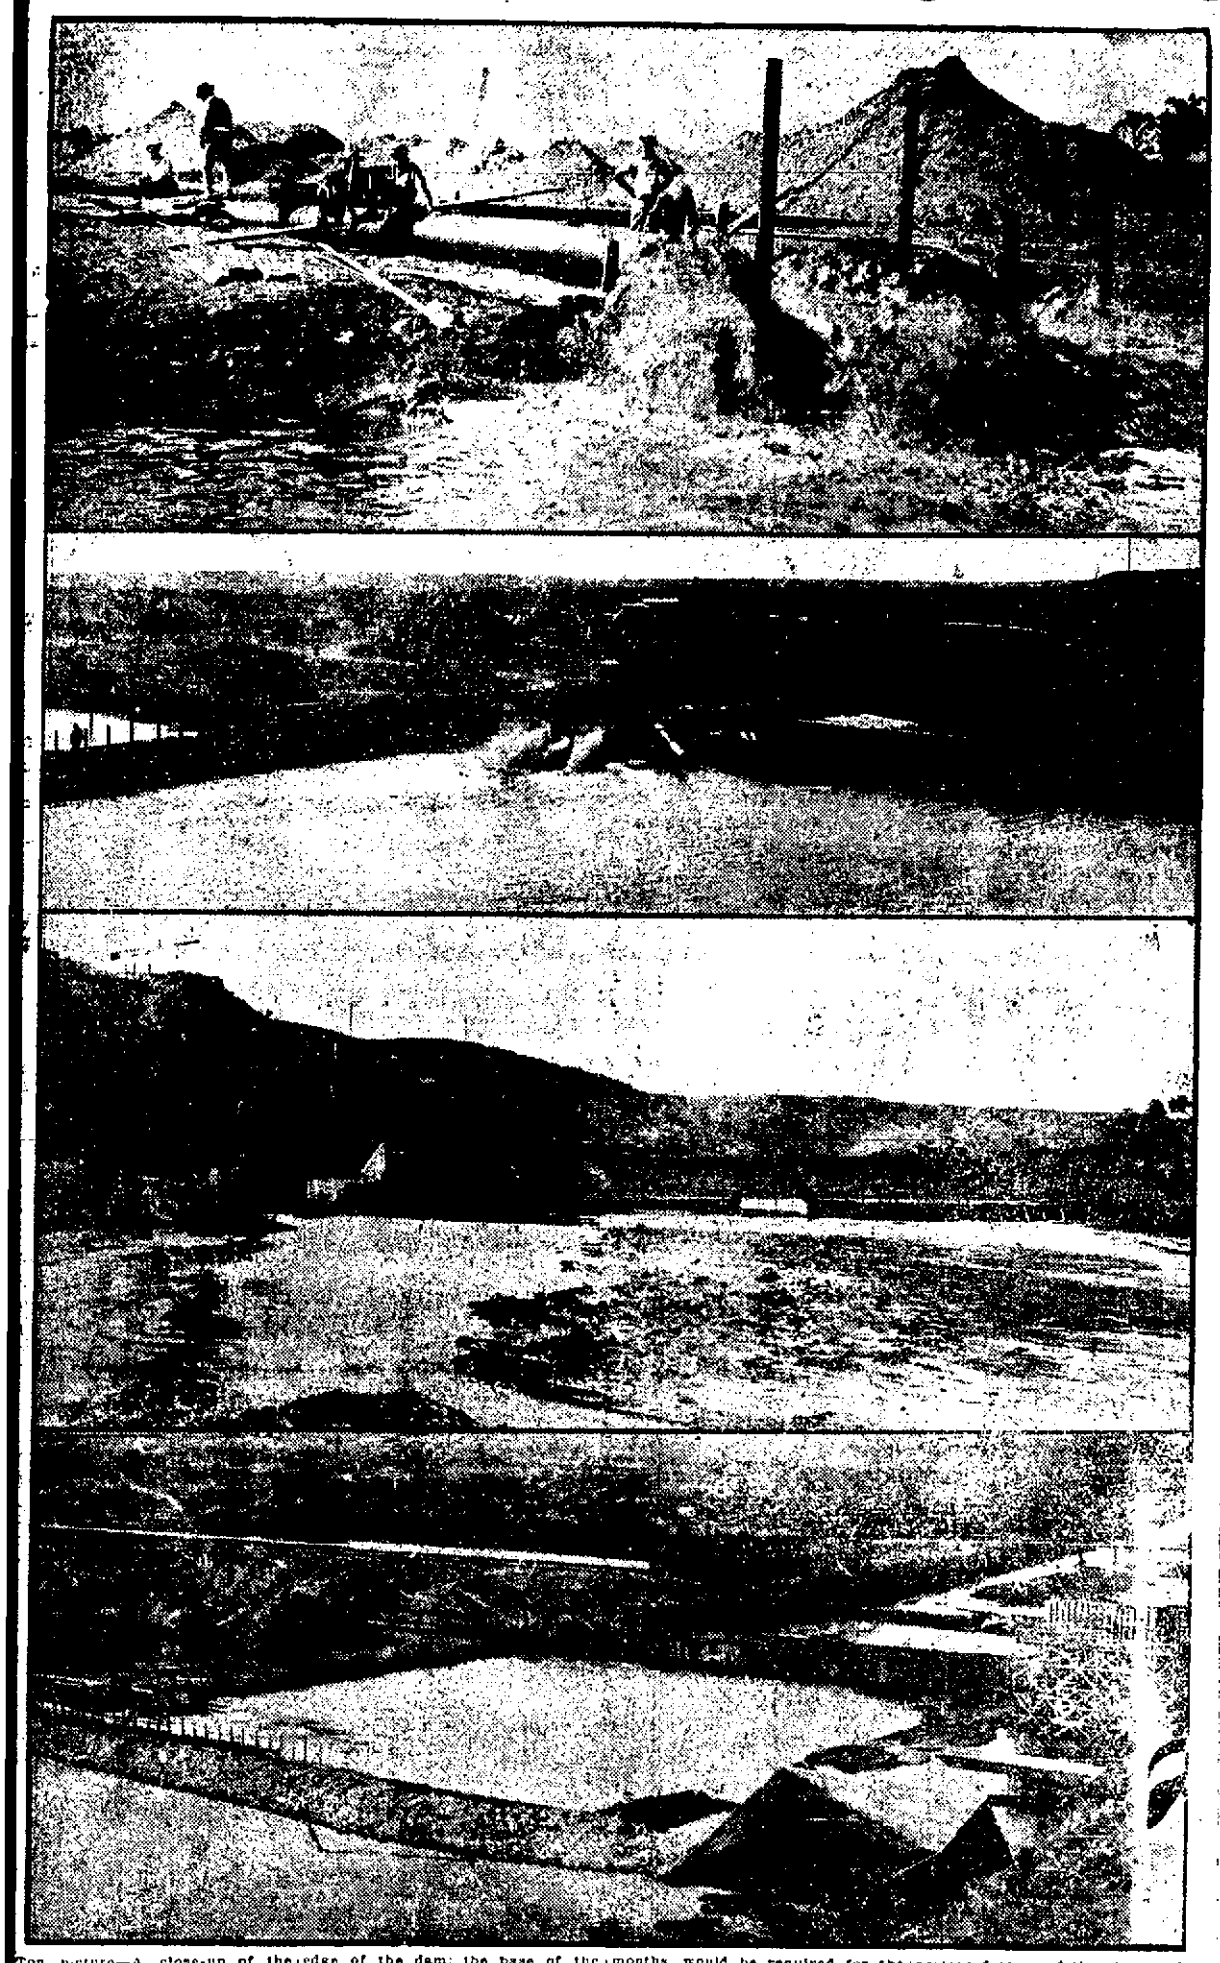
Dredge Working at a Rate That Will Finish Big Storage Dam Embankment by Next May



Top picture—A close-up of the dredge's 24-hour-per day spell of ingestion. The 22-inch pipe is spitting out its load of water, sand and clay into an ingenious arrangement of boards that distributes the contents evenly.

Second picture—A more distant view of the discharge pipe. The pipe circles around through the bush for a distance of several hundred yards to the dredge, which is some little distance downstream.

Third picture—Looking upstream from below the dam site toward the home of the dredge operations. On the bluff to the left is seen the concrete mixer which supplies material for the conduits, below appears the downstream opening of the conduits, while a short distance back of this is seen the partially completed tower which will operate the gates. Extending across the scene is the wooden enclosure which marks the downstream edge of the dam and which is used to catch the sand and clay deposited by the dredge. In the background appears a levee which serves as a temporary dam and which will eventually be buried beneath the earth that forms the permanent dam.

Lower picture—A general view of the damsite at the time of writing. In the foreground is seen the upstream side of the dam paved with rip-rap. Back of it and to the left is the huge pipe of the dredge in its spouting. On the right are seen the upstream openings of the conduit. The wooden structure extending across the river is the steel sheet piling which forms the core of the embankment. The channel between it and the rip-rapped embankment is now being filled up by the dredge. Between the piling and the bridge appears the embankment that marks the upstream edge of the dam; the base of the dam will eventually cover all the space between that embankment and the one shown covered with rip-rap. In the distance to the left of the picture can be seen the contractors' camp at the site of the spillway, where excavation is now in progress.

The pictures were taken a few days ago by H. L. Thatcwell, assistant engineer on the project.

The irrigation project's main phase, the dam that will create the storage lake, is now definitely under way, and the accompanying pictures give some idea of the nature and magnitude of the work. As yet only a tiny percentage of the work of the dredge T. B. Nonte has been done, but it is working satisfactorily and steadily and the great earthern wall is growing perceptibly, day by day.

The powerful motor of the dredge electrically operated by means of a transmission line from the electric plant in Wichita Falls, nearly 50 miles away, is sucking up the clay, sand and gravel from the bottom of the river and pumping this material through the long 22-inch pipes which discharge it onto the dam site.

The nature of the material is such as to cause great satisfaction to every one connected with the project. The clay and sand have been mixed by the elements, through the years, in a proportion so nearly perfect that one might suppose nature had been keeping this project in mind all the time. The sand, deposited around the steel walls of the dam, is held in place by the clay, which forms the backbone of the dam. [illegible] water and [illegible] it. It was in [illegible] the dam, which [illegible] and with a protective armor on the upstream side, of gravel and rip-rapped stone, must [illegible] years to check.

The dredge works at the rate of [illegible] per second. [illegible] per second. [illegible] per second of that [illegible] per cent of solid matter per cubic foot of sand, matter per [illegible] per day.

[illegible] months, would be required for the task. In other words, May, 1923, should see the big task completed. If the percentage of solid matter is higher than eight, the time would be proportionately shortened.

While the dredge plugs away at its herculean task preliminary work is well under way on another important feature of the storage dam, the concrete spillway. This will be several hundred yards west of the main channel and will open into a ravine. The top of the spillway will be 15 feet below the top of the dam, so that it would take an unprecedented rise to endanger the top of the big structure.

DAY OF ATONEMENT WILL BE OBSERVED AT TEMPLE ISRAEL

Yom Kippur, or Day of Atonement, services, will be held today and Monday by members of the local Jewish congregation. The observance of the occasion will open with the Kol-Nidre service at 7:30 p. m. this evening at Temple Israel; Dr. David Goldberg's sermon subject will be "The Thing That Renders High Moral Conceptions Fruitless."

On Monday at 10 a. m. there will be another service, and Dr. Goldburg's subject will be "The Testament of a Sage." Services will be held at 2 p. m., a memorial service at 4 p. m. and the concluding service at 5 p. m. The Kol Nidre and the morning service will be replete with traditional musical numbers.

Following is a statement on the significance of Yom Kippur:

"Sunday evening, October 1, inaugurates with great solemnity the Day of Atonement, or Yom Kippur, the holiest day of the Synagogue. On that evening and again on Monday, from morning till eventide, the Jewish people will foregather for worship in their several synagogues in all parts of the world. Those removed from their families will endeavor to be among the family circle on this solemn occasion. Soldiers and sailors of Jewish faith are granted furloughs in order to observe appropriately this holiday. Wherever the Jewish people happen to be, whether few or many, they will cease from worldly concerns and give themselves wholly to thoughts of repentance.

"More than any other holiday of the Synagogue, Yom Kippur revives the confidence of the Jew in the ultimate triumph of God's love and justice. However sadly he has fared, despite misfortune and untold affliction, he repairs to his synagogue on the Day of Atonement hopeful of God's way and trusting that in the later days none of earth's children shall hurt nor destroy in all His mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord as the waters cover the sea."

TENOR SOLOIST ARRIVES TO ASSIST IN REVIVAL

Horace Hay, tenor soloist and song leader who will assist Dr. Grosectose in the eight day pre-conference revival beginning Sunday at the morning service at the Floral Heights Methodist church, arrived Saturday.

Mr Hay is said to be one of the best gospel soloists in the Methodist denomination, and is well known throughout the state. He will sing at each service—at 4 o'clock in the afternoon and at 7:45 each evening.

HOPES MANY FROM HERE WILL ATTEND VETERANS REUNION

Judge Edgar Scurry, former commander in chief of the Sons of Confederate Veterans, and for years an active figure in that organization, is hopeful that a large numebr of veterans and sons from this city and section will attend the state reunion to be held at Hillsboro next Thursday and Friday. The veterans' reunion will extend over both days; that of the sons will be held on Friday and the following program is announced:

10:00 a. m.—Meeting called to order by Capt. Wm. A. Fields, Hillsboro, Texas. Invocation, Rev. Miles B. Hay, Hillsboro, Texas. Music, "America," by convention.

10:20 a. m.—Convention turned over to Hon. Lon A. Smith of Austin, commander of Sons of Confederate Veterans of Texas. Music.

10:40 a. m.—Address of welcome, Hon. Earl Carter of Hillsboro.

11:00 a. m.—Response, Hon. Luther A. Johnson, Corsicana, Texas. Music.

11:20—Principal address, Carl Hinton of Denver, Colo., adjutant in chief and chief of staff of S. C. V. Music.

12:00—Lunch.

2:00 p. m.—Address of greeting to veterans, Hon. T. W. Davidson, lieutenant governor of Texas.

2:45 p. m.—Business meeting.

5:00 p. m.—Benediction.

Judge Scurry calls attention to the fact that those wishing to attend from here may take the Denver southbound at 1:15 p. m. on Wednesday and reach Hillsboro at 10:27 that night, or that by leaving here on the night train they may reach Hillsboro by 10:27 in the morning, almost in time for the opening session.

More than 85,000 murders were committed in this country in the last ten years and the number of burglaries has increased 1200 per cent in that time.

Newer Form of Iron Quickly Increases 'Pep' Strength and Energy

"You cannot be well and strong, and full of vigor, force, and power unless your blood is rich in iron," says Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician Bellevue Hospital (Out-Door Department), New York, and the Westchester County Hospital. "It is your red blood that enables you to resist and overcome disease and that nourishes every organ in your body. Without iron your blood becomes thin, pale and watery. Poor blood cannot nourish your vital organs and as a result you may have pains in your heart or kidneys, indigestion, headaches, and feel all run-down and tired-out." When your blood lacks iron do not waste your time taking stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, but directly enrich your blood with the newer form of iron sold by all druggists under the name of Nuxated Iron which is like the iron in spinach, lentils, and apples and is in a form easily assimilated into your blood.

Get a bottle of Nuxated Iron today. Take it for two weeks and if you have not, like thousands of others, obtained most surprising health, strength and energy, the manufacturers will promptly refund your money. The following local druggists will sell you Nuxated Iron with this "satisfaction or money back" guarantee. Smith Drug Store, Mack Taylor Drug Co., Palace Drug Co., Wilford Harrison Drug Co.—adv.

BURKBURNETT GETS REPORT FROM STATE HEALTH DEPARTMENT

ASSISTANT STATE HEALTH OFFICER SUBMITS RECOMMENDATIONS.

RECENTLY VISITED CITY ON AN INSPECTION TOUR

Suggests Employment of Thoroughly Qualified and Efficient Health Officer.

BURKBURNETT Sept 30—Assistant State Health Officer Dr W H. Beasley, of Austin, made an inspection of sanitary conditions in Burkburnett several weeks ago and has furnished The Times correspondent with a copy of his report made to the state health officer of the conditions as he found them to exist and his recommendations which should be put into effect for a better, cleaner and healthier city

Conditions found

"One long well paved street, well kept in business center Along the alleys, one-half block parallel to above street, I found hog pens open back toilets, cess pools, soured waste and material from drug stores, slop barrels, chicken heads and other animal flesh in putrid state, also many tin cans and trash of various character

"Found many toilets and cess pools within 10 feet of sewer line not connected Found sewer mains and disposal plant adequate for the care of all sewage in sections where pipe had been laid. The water supply was obtained through three surface seepage basins from 15 to 30 feet deep, near Red river, about two miles from the town. Was informed by the city health officer that this water received no treatment, but was used for human consumption in its natural state. Dr Steen and Dr. Adams advised that there was an average of three or four cases of typhoid fever every month.

"Recommendations:

"1. Rigid enforcement open toilet ordinances.

"2. Standardization of garbage pails and reorganization of collection system.

"3. Condemnation of all cess pools and contaminated wells.

"4. Adequate protection of all food supplies.

"5. Enforcement of food handlers law, with special reference to medicinal examination.

"6. Enforcement of sterilization law.

"7. Treatment of drinking water supply.

"8. Thoroughly qualified and efficient local sanitary officer."

Good Well Expected.

Casing has been set in the Lanning & Monninger well, which is located on the W. J. Sides farm just southeast of Burkburnett and a good well is expected when it is drilled in. The bit in this well struck the same sand as was encountered further south and which is making good production. T E. Hunter has started an offset to this well on his lease adjoining the well being spudded in yesterday.

Many Attend T-O Fair.

Large crowds are daily attending the Texas-Oklahoma Fair which opened in Wichita Falls and which will continue until next Wednesday. Every one is enthusiastic over the undertaking and a good attendance is assured each day from this city.

Revival Meeting.

Revival services are being held at the open-air tabernacle on east Third street conducted by Dr D S Ligon, pastor of the church of Christ and will be closed Sunday night A good attendance was had during the week and much interest manifested by those in attendance

Road Near Completion.

The Burkburnett-Clara highway, the last of the road building projects to be completed in this precinct will be finished by the middle of the coming week. Detours are being made on account of the closing of this highway for paving on both the north and south roads leading west from the city It is stated that the south route is in fair shape for travel but the north route is almost impassable in places on account of heavy travel over this road during the past month.

Dixie Lyceum Course.

The first number of the Dixie Lyceum course was given last night with a large crowd present at the Methodist church Mater Hilburn impersonator, was the attraction He is an entertainer primarily, but his impersonations serve the purpose of inspiring serious thoughts and purposes which are worth while and serves the purpose of bringing to the minds of his audience, in a comical way, things worth while to be considered in every day life other attractions are to follow with dates to be announced later Organize Lions Club.

A Lions club has been organized in Burkburnett and will meet each Friday evening from 6 30 to 7 30. The following officers have been elected for the coming year: Will T Dickson president; C O. Walling, vice-president; Dr J. M. F. Gill, second vice-president; R D. Cunningham, secretary-treasurer; J F Kelly, publicity, W M Henderson, Lion Tamer, W. R Hill Tail Twister W A Scarbrough R E Fischer, J S Mills, J D Majors and W W White, directors.

LEGIONNAIRES TO CONVENE TODAY TO PLAN DELEGATION

Representatives of a dozen or more American Legion camps in northwest Texas are expected to gather in Wichita Falls this afternoon for a get-together conference to make plans for sending a big delegation from this section to the American Legion national convention at New Orleans on October 16

The meeting was called several days ago by District Adjutant Williamson of Bowie It will convene at 3 o'clock at the American Legion hall.

POLICE TO RAISE MONEY TO REPLENISH AID FUND; TO PUBLISH YEAR BOOK

As soon as the excitement of the fair has subsided the police department is planning to put on a drive for the policemen's relief fund This fund is used to defray the expenses of police officers in case of sickness, death or distress of any kind Last year the drive netted the fund $2,500; practically all of this has been exhausted so numerous and heavy have been the demands the past year.

The plan of publishing a year book of the police force will be continued this year. The proceeds from the advertising will be the chief source for the police relief fund

In addition to this the Empress theater has agreed to show "In the Name of the Law" at some date in the near future for the benefit of the fund

WOMEN'S DEPARTMENT AT FAIR IS REPLETE WITH INTERESTING FEATURES

The womans exhibit at the Texas-Oklahoma fair presents a varied display that is to the interest of womankind At the main entrance of the building there is a bureau of information where anyone may find out any information concerning the fair There is also a check room in connection with this

To the right of the entrance is the Y M C A lunch room At 4 p m every day during the fair an entertainment will be given by the Y W C A in this rest room

The textile exhibit has the largest display of the fair In the antique department, pieces of old and gaily colored laces quilting, etc, are on display, and this is presided over by young women dressed in antique costumes. The textile exhibit itself consists of all kinds of hand work tatting, quilting and embroidery, of which there is work of old women children under 16 years of age and representative exhibits from Clay and Archer counties Mrs Clint Wood and Mrs George Keith are in charge of the exhibit

The food display consists of an exhibition of proper canning, an exhibit of farm products and a bakery display Other exhibits of the woman's building are the flower display, Texas Children Home and society exhibit the object of which is to place children in proper homes and to care for orphans glass fruit work, consisting of two dresses of spun glass necklies and glass fruit. The exhibit also shows how the glass is blown, in its raw state, and the method of spinning

The most interesting display in the exhibit, however, is the Red Cross department. Here are health posters made by the school children of the city, correct beds for the disabled, an daisy beds for emergency cases

The work of the Red Cross in times of disaster is exhibited by models of a first aid hospital The correct food exhibit of the Red Cross shows proper foods for children and injurious foods, and the problem of correct foods is impressed upon the mind by a miniature exhibit of Health land with such places as Oatmeale, Plain water and fruit junction

Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock a tooth brush drill was given by ten members of the colored school During the afternoon Saturday, babies were registered and weighed for the baby contest to be held Tuesday when two loving cups, for Texas and Oklahoma, will be given to the most perfect babies.

Yale Avenue Evangelical

We just want to say that you who did not attend the services at the Yale Avenue Evangelical church on last Friday evening recently do not know what a message Brother Aaron had for me or else you would have been there The subject for Friday evening was the "Second Coming of Christ, or the Opening of the Seals" from the sixth chapter and the 17th verse of the book of Revelations and reads, "The great day of his wrath has come who shall be able to stand?" and taking the events of the day he showed us very plainly how these prophesies were being fulfilled, and the need of our being ready to escape the wrath of an Almighty God You should hear these messages to appreciate them to their fullest extent We will have our Sunday school at the usual hour Sunday morning and Brother Aaron will hold three services for the day, one at 11 00 a m, and one at 3 00 p m, and the other beginning at 7 30 p m You are cordially invited to attend all or any of these services.—W D COOK, Pastor

Blemishes are generally caused by infection from dust and dirt

You can free your skin from blemishes by using this simple treatment:

Just before you go to bed, wash in the usual way with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water, finishing with a dash of cold water.

Now dip the tips of your fingers in warm water and rub them on the cake of Woodbury's until they are covered with a heavy cream-like lather.

Cover each blemish with a thick coat of this and leave it on for ten minutes. Then rinse very carefully, first with clear hot water, then with cold

Wichita Swamps Burk In First League Game Of the Season 58 To 7

By PAUL W. LARKIN

Had Coach Westerfield's grid warriors from Burkburnett refrained from making a tactical blunder in the second period of Saturday's game with the Wichita Falls high school eleven they might have returned home without receiving such a drubbing as the local squad handed them. The tactical blunder referred to was a touchdown made by one Mr. Blessing around right end. Of course it all depends upon where one hails from as to whether the touchdown was a blunder. Burk rooters might consider it a feather in their cap, but the Wichitans took an opposite view. The Red and Black gridders evidently considered it a huge insult that their goal line be crossed, for immediately following the Burk score they tore their opponents to shreds and were going stronger than ever with the score 58 to 7 in their favor when the final whistle blew.

It was the first interscholastic league game of the year for Coach Jones' pupils and they ran away from their opponents in the last two periods in a manner that could not be denied. For two periods the visitors put up a stubborn battle and their one touchdown gave them a temporary lead. Their score, however, was just what the Wichitans needed to make them fight. After the next kickoff they ripped the Burk line to pieces and thereafter the Oilers never had a chance. The local squad was in far better condition than the invaders. This was brought out in the final period when the Wichitans broke through for five touchdowns. Burk was completely worn out while the steady drill through which Coach Jones had put his men the past week stood them in good stead.

Both Lines Weak.

Both lines were exceedingly weak on the defense. Though the Wichitans gained much more ground by line plunging than did the visitors there is room for great improvement in the locals' first line defense. Were it not for the secondary defense put up by Jones' two backfields there is no telling how often Burk would have scored.

As in the Devol game, the work of the two distinct Wichita backfields was beyond reproach. Both Miller and Deems ran the team to a nicety and each of their cohorts responded nobly. As a matter of fact, Coach Jones is overburned with backfield and wing material. The linemen have ability—plenty of it—but it is apparently latent. They need quite a bit more prodding.

The Wichitans relied solely on line plunging. Occasionally they skirted the ends. Rarely did they use a forward pass. Coach Jones wasn't putting anything out for the benefit of visiting scouts as it was not necessary. Burk on the other hand, uncovered all she knew and several times ripped off long gains, but only once was she able to count. An injury to Quarterback Taylor of Burk weakened the team considerably. Taylor was forced to retire early in the game with a broken nose.

That the Wichitans were able to score in the first period was due principally to the efforts of Moore, Miller and Shaw. An exchange of punts early in the period netted several yards for Burk. Before the quarter was half over Baldwin found himself kicking from his own goal line. Shaw, however, recovered this punt on his own 40 yard line. Stringer brought the ball to midfield with a dash around left end, but Moore fumbled on the next play and the ball went over. They were unable to gain, however, and Logan was forced to kick well into Wichita's territory again. Baldwin returned the boot on the first play and once again Frank Shaw was on the job and returned the ball when a Burk man let it roll away from him. Shaw was hurt on this play and Waggoner replaced him. It took only two plays then for the Wichitans to bring the ball from midfield across the line. Miller made 15 yards through the line and Moore followed with a plunge which netted 20 yards and a touchdown. The Wichitans elected to plunge again for the extra point and failed.

Turk Takes Lead.

The second period opened with the ball in Burk's possession on the Coyotes' 35 yard line. After three plays the original backfield was pulled and Deems, Chewning, Curtin and Kenley went in. Chewning's first contribution was a fumble which Burk recovered in midfield. Taylor and Logan then smashed through the Red and Black line for long gains and Blessing finally carried the ball over around left end. Pace kicked the goal and put his mates into a 7 to 6 lead.

At this point the Wichitans started. Pace kicked off poorly and Chewning and Curtin started a steady procession down the field until Kenley was in a position to carry the ball over with only 40 seconds left to play. Walker kicked the goal this time and the half ended with the score 13 to 7 in Wichita Falls' favor.

The Coyotes scored on the first play in the third period. Walker kicked off and Baldwin fell on the ball behind Burk's goal line. Walker kicked another goal bringing the total to 20.

A 15-yard penalty shortly after the next kickoff put the ball in Wichita's territory but short and steady gains through the line put the ball within the shadow of Burk's goal posts again and Kenley went over for the second time. Walker also kicked this goal and the quarter ended with the score 26 to 7 in Wichita's favor.

Slaughter of the Innocent.

It was a case of slaughtering the innocent in the final period. Stringer ripped off the longest run of the afternoon for a starter when he scooted around right end for over 60 yards. A 12-yard pass gave each put the ball within striking distance of the line and he went over on the next play. Shaw missed the goal.

On the first play after the next kickoff Baldwin intercepted a forward pass on his own 35 yard line and didn't stop until he had brought the score up to 37. Shaw missed another goal.

Shaw recovered a Burk fumble after the next kickoff and Beach went over in a few seconds for another touchdown. Walker kicked the goal and made the score 46.

Kiker intercepted a forward pass on his own 30-yard line for the next touchdown and Miller scored the last after a Burk fumble had been recovered. Walker kicked the goal after Kiker's touchdown, but missed the last. The lineups.

GROOMS HIGH MAN AT WEEKLY SHOOT

Poor Traps Don't Bother Winner, Who Breaks 48 Out of Possible 50.

George Grooms, one of the newest members of the Wichita Falls Gun club, walked away with first honors at last week's regular shoot by smashing 48 out of 50 birds, one more than his nearest competitor, Doc Landon. It was Groom's second victory in the past few weeks and the manner in which he has improved since joining the club has caused considerable comment. He claims that he derives his greatest satisfaction by showing the way weekly to Paul Adams, one of the older members and a crack shot.

The traps were in poor condition and gave the nimrods undue trouble in the regular event. It was decided in the end not to attempt to shoot the doubles and a special twenty-gauge event was run off instead. Colbert, a professional, representing the Peters Cartridge company in Wichita Falls, won this event with Adams runner-up.

More than four full squads shot in the regular event and the following scores were chalked up:

Regular Event: (Twelve Guage) Grooms 48, Landon 47, Colbert 47, Leslie 45, Donahoo 45, Adams 44, Guthrie 44, Lyons 44, Harper 43, Langford 43, Gotcher 43, Stringer 41, Baker 40, Bowen 40, Sprinkle 39, Jennings 37, Hund 37, Long 36, Hoskins 36, Emert 34, Terrell 30, Dodson 30.

Special Event: (Twenty Guage) Colbert 19, Adams 19, Harper 17, Landon 17, Baker 16, Jennings 14, Terrell 13, Kimmell 12.

ALLEGED BOOKMAKERS ARE ARRESTED AT CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Sept 30—Two men alleged to be bookmakers, were arrested today on gambling charges at the Hawthorne race track at the revival of running races after eighteen years, according to reports to the state's attorney's office. The men who gave their names as Joseph and Jack Moro were taken to the Cicero police station.

Henry Knocked Out of Box Again and Tulsa Easily Defeats Mobile

TULSA, OKLA., Sept. 30—The Western league champions played brilliantly behind their ace hurler George Boehler, and Tulsa took the second straight game of the class A championship series 11 to 2 here this afternoon. Tulsa scored in the first inning and Boehler was never in trouble. With the series standing Tulsa two, Mobile none, Manager Niehoff of the Bears announced tonight that he would probably start Lefty Fuhr, who took two games from the Fort Worth Cats in the recent Dixie playoff, Sunday afternoon, in the hope of breaking the losing streak, while Jack Lelivelt, Oiler skipper, announced that he would make the game a battle of southpaws by starting Lefty Ruswell in an attempt to make it three straight.

Boehler was right. He had his slants breaking all over the plate. He struck out five men and the visitors had but three men stranded on the bases during the affair. But three men reached second two of them scoring.

Henry started once more for Mobile and again was knocked off the mound. He allowed seven hits before he was taken out in the fourth when Bauman, the first batter to face Him, hit one into the score board for a home run. Fulton, who replaced Henry allowed three hits in the same inning which went for two more tallies. He steadied down in the next inning but was replaced in the sixth by Sigman, who yielded two more runs in the seventh.

The Oilers fell on Pope who took the mound in the eighth and counted five more runs before three outs were forced.

It was announced that the fourth game of the series will be played at Dallas, Texas, Monday.

BELLE MADE, COUNTRY CLUB, Nashville, Tenn., Sept 30—Completion of 72 holes of play over the Belle Meade course today for the open championship of the Southern Golf association found Abe Mitchell of England and Leo Diegel of New Orleans in a tie for first place with scores of 289 each. The tie will be played off tomorrow in a 36 hole match at medal play.

Diegel gained his position in a tie with the celebrated Englishman by shooting two rounds of sensational golf today, both of which he completed in 69, two strokes less than par. Included in his afternoon round were ten fives.

Those finishing behind Mitchell and Diegel in the money were:

French and Barnes 287, George Duncan, England and John Farrell Quaker Ridge, N. Y. 288, Bobby Cruikshank, Shackamaxon, N. J. 287, Mike Brady, Birmingham, Mich. and Walter Hagen, Detroit, 289, Jock Hutchinson and Bob McDonald, Chicago 290, Eddie Loos, Chicago, 292.

Those finishing in a tie will split the prize for that position and the one following except first place which will be played off the loser taking the second prize of $1,000.

BAYLOR OPENS WITH EASY WIN OVER DENTON NORMAL

Special to The Times.

WACO, TEXAS, Sept 30—The Baylor university Bears opened the gridiron season here today with a 55 to 0 victory over Denton Normal school of Denton. The game was played very fast considering the warmth of the weather. The Bruins played a steady and consistent game using line plunges, off-tackle plays and end runs in making their gains. Lidbak at tackle did most of the gaining with tackle around tackle plays, scoring three touchdowns in this manner. The Bruin veterans also played a steady defensive game.

Ralph Pittman, brother of B. J. Pittman, starred with consistent gains through the line. Connally and Sims also gave fine exhibitions of line plunging. Wesley Bradshaw, last year's all conference quarter, directed his team well and made long gains. He also drop kicked four goals from touchdown and a place kick field goal from the 25 yard line.

Several of last year's stars were unable to play today being kept out on account of illness. Coach Bridges gave his every available man a chance to play.

WINS AUTO CLASSIC WITH AVERAGE SPEED OF 102

FRESNO, CAL., Sept 30—Bennett Hill won the 150 mile San Joaquin classic here today with a speed of 102 miles an hour. His time was 1:22:48. Harry Harts finished second and Tommy Milton third.

AMERICAN GIRL WINS GOLF TITLE

Miss Collett Defeats Mrs. Gavin, English Star, In Final Round.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Sept 30—Miss Glenna Collett of Providence, R. I., became the new women's golf champion of the United States today by defeating Mrs W. A. Cavin, the English star, 5 up and 4 to play, in the final 36 hole match of the National championship tournament.

The 19-year-old American girl, who already held the title of Eastern champion, won her national championship by continuing the steady, unsensational play which had enabled her to eliminate all previous opponents since she won the qualification medal on the opening day. Her English opponent lost the match by a succession of bad plays on the second nine of the first round, enabling Miss Collett to build up a lead that could not be overcome.

Must Hit Home Runs in This League, Or Else—

STAMFORD, TEXAS, Sept. 30—"Ladies and gentlemen! Before the game today I want to announce a 'double header' for November 11—Miss Mary Pennington and Mr Lawrence McElwee. 'Mack' was in the 'right field' to make a 'hit' with Mary and since he went so 'batty' about her she decided to let him 'catcher.' See the 'diamond?' After November 11 if 'Mack' doesn't make a 'home run' every night, he'll get 'balled' out. Play ball!"

Thus was the engagement of Miss Mary Pennington to Lawrence McElwee announced Thursday afternoon at a bridge entertainment in the Colbert river ranch home of the Clear Fork with Miss Tenie Belle Colbert hostess. In keeping with the groom-to-be's profession, Master Joe Rutherford attired in baseball regalia stood on the grand piano before the guests and made the announcement which was devised by Mrs Herbert Carter.

In bridge Mrs. George Zachary's and Mrs Harry Fuller's scores were the same.

Mrs Zachary was presented a lovely madeira luncheon set and Mrs Fuller a box of dainty linen handkerchiefs.

A tempting salad course was served following games.

The guest list included Mesdames H. H. Pennington, J. M. Carter, W. E. Harrison, Geo Zachary, Porter Whaley, Herbert Carter, Jimmy Pickens, B. P. Bunkle, Wm P. McDonald, T. R. Collett, Frank Morrow, R. R. Robertson, Russell Morrison, Claude Yates, Cordie Pennell, Walter L. Orr, J. H. Rutherford, C. M. Frances, W. H. Tayman, R. S. Vandiver, Geo Ashburn, W. B. Ray, Nib Shaw, Fort Worth, V. C. Fagan, W. C. Swenson, John Dee, Arthur Vernor, Coy Upshaw, D. V. Hardwick, R. L. Haynie, Harry Fuller, P. F. Berthelot, E. E. Yates, Fred Hudson. Misses Mary Pennington, Cecile Donalson, Lewis Pender, Marie Dee, Betty Raines, Maxine Cullum, Suzanne English, Lucy Bunkley, Gladys McSpadden, Georaldene Wright and Agnes and Lewis Tender. From Albany were Mrs Joe Matheny, Mrs Johnnie Miller and Mrs Joe Willis and Mrs E. McCarter of Vernon, Texas.

St. Louis Stars Sure To Lead the Major Leagues In Batting This Season

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—Down comes the curtain on the major league season tomorrow with George Sisler of the St Louis Browns batting champion of the American league, Rogers Hornsby of the St Louis Cardinals champion of the National league and Hornsby also the conqueror of the mighty "Babe" Ruth for the 1922 honors in home run hitting.

Sisler, acclaimed the most valuable player in the American league, and the slugging Hornsby both will finish the season with an average above the coveted .400 mark, as the latest figures show Sisler hitting .417, and Hornsby whaling away to the tune of .400. With the final games scheduled for tomorrow, these St Louis rivals will have an opportunity to better these figures, which include games of Wednesday.

This is the third time Hornsby has been crowned king of batters and the second for Sisler. Hornsby captured the honors in 1920 and 1921. Sisler's last appearance on the throne was in 1920 when he finished with a mark of .407.

The honor of batting above the 400 mark has been held by only three players in the American league, and two of them are still playing. They are Ty Cobb, Sisler's rival, and Sisler himself. Cobb held the honors in 1911 and 1912 when he headed the procession with marks of .420 and .410 respectively. The only other player to attain this honor was Napoleon Lajoie, who, while a member of the Athletics, in 1901, batted .405.

Cobb Better Than Usual.

Cobb's average this year undoubtedly will be the best he has attained since he hit .410, ten years ago. He is batting .398 today. Although he led the league six times after that his average never was above .390. Previous to 1911, Cobb led the league for four years, but his best mark during that period was .386.

Harry Heilman of the Tigers, who last season nosed out Cobb for the batting honors, is in fourth place today with an average of .357, compared with his .394 last season. Tris Speaker, manager of the Indians, who led in 1916 when he finished with a mark of .386—is in third place with an average of .378.

In addition to being the champion batter, Sisler also is the king of base stealers. He has pilfered forty-nine bases, and his closest rival is Kenneth Williams, a teammate, who has stolen thirty-four.

Williams, who started with a blaze of glory to capture the home runs honors, has clouted out thirty-nine four-baggers, with Tillie Walker of the Athletics the runner-up with thirty-six. Ruth, who last season bagged fifty-nine, is in third place, with thirty-five.

Other leading batters for 100 or more games: Speaker, Cleveland, .378; Heilman, Detroit, .357; Williams, St. Louis, .332; Ed Miller, Philadelphia, .331; Tobin, St Louis, .329; Schang, New York, .327; Veach, Detroit, .326; Pipp, New York, .326; Sisler, Detroit, .326.

Hornsby Home Run Champ.

Hornsby, the St Louis star with forty-two home runs, is the leading home run hitter of the majors after one of the most exciting races in the history of the game. Kenneth Williams of the Browns is a close second, and Ruth trailing in fourth place.

Hornsby, in addition to his new laurels, is in line to accomplish something among the National League batters which has not been done in the past twenty-three years—finish the season with a mark of .400 or better.

The last National League player to hit in .400 was Ed Delahanty of Philadelphia, who made the grade in 1902, when he finished the season with a mark of .408. Prior to that only five others had become members of the .400 club. These were: Willie Keeler, Adrian "Pop" Anson, Jesse Burkett, Hughey Duffy and Rose Barnes.

Hornsby, in acquiring his average, participated in 150 games. He cracked out 243 hits for a total of 438 bases. His hits include 41 doubles, 14 triples and forty-two home runs. There is no danger of Hornsby being overtaken for the batting honors as his closest rival in Oscar Ray Grimes of the Cubs, who is the runner-up with an average of .354.

Max Carey of the Pirates has the stolen base crown safely tucked away with his forty-six thefts. Frisch of New York, being his only rival with 30.

Other leading batters for 100 or more games: Miller, Chicago, .351; Tierney, Pittsburgh, .351; Hollocher, Chicago, .342; Daubert, Cincinnati, .340; Walker, Philadelphia, .340; Harper, Cincinnati, .340; Carey, Pittsburgh, .331; Frisch, New York, .331; Meusel, New York, .330; Kelly, New York, .330.

Myatt In Association.

Glenn Myatt of Milwaukee seems certain of capturing the 1922 batting championship of the American Association, which closes tomorrow. Figures including games of Wednesday show him hitting .373, with Becker of Kansas City second with .366 and Jay Kirk, of Louisville third with .360.

Bunny Brief of Kansas City outdistanced the home run hitters with a total of thirty-eight with Becker next in line with twenty-six. Final averages probably will be necessary to determine the leading base stealer, although Baird of Indianapolis, has the edge, up to Wednesday, with twenty-eight. Lamar, of Toledo, however, is pressing him with twenty-six, and Berghammer of St. Paul is close up with twenty-four.

Other leading batters for 100 or more games: Lamar, Toledo, .354; Lear, Milwaukee, .354; Magee, Minneapolis, .353; Good, Kansas City, .347; Coombs, Louisville, .346; Hendrix, St Paul, .346; Brief, Kansas City, .345; Brown, Indianapolis, .343; Mathews, Milwaukee, .340; Hartley, Columbus, .337.

East Leads Western.

Final unofficial averages for the Western league show Carl East, the Wichita veteran, as the 1922 batting champion with an average of .391, with Manush of Omaha second with .376, Herman of Omaha finished the season with an average of .416, but he only played in 92 games as compared with 168 for East and 167 for Manush. East went through the season without missing a game.

Davis of Tulsa led the home run hitters with a string of thirty-five, while Lamb, also of Tulsa, was second with thirty-two. East also showed his class in bagging homers, finishing with thirty.

Hemingway of Sioux City romped ahead of Eugene Elsh, also of Sioux City, in base stealing, pulling up with a total of fifty-nine. Elsh, who goes to the Chicago White Sox next season, stole fifty-two.

Other leading batters for 100 or more games: Bennett, Tulsa, .370; Lelivelt, Tulsa, .369; Berger, Wichita, .361; Metz, Sioux City, .360; Grantham, Omaha, .359; Fisher, St. Joseph, .357; Elsh, Sioux City, .350; Stuart, Tulsa, .343; Blakesley, Wichita, .342.

YANKS WIN FLAG BY BEATING RED SOX

Score Enough Runs in First Inning To Get Into the World's Series.

BOSTON, Sept. 30.—New York won the American league pennant by defeating Boston 3 to 1 today. The Yankees can lose their last game in Washington tomorrow and still finish first. The league leaders went into win today and did so in the first inning after having dropped the first two games of the series to the Red Sox. Alex Ferguson started pitching for Boston. Witt led off for the visitors with a single too wide for Pratt. Dugan looped a single to short right. Ruth hunted down the third base line and was credited with a hit when O'Rourke fumbled as he slipped in fielding the ball. With the bases full Wallie Pipp singled to right, scoring Witt and Dugan. Ruth moved over to third on the throw home. Pennock replaced Ferguson. Ruth scored on Meusel's sacrifice fly to deep center. New York could not score again.

Boston scored its run in the seventh when O'Rourke singled, took third on John Collins' third hit of the game and scored as Mitchell forced Collins at second.

As the Yankees galloped off the field in high glee first baseman Pipp tossed the last ball to the veteran umpire, Tommy Connolly.

FIRE DAMAGES THE MAGNOLIA $15,000; TWO HORSES BURN

ELECTRA, Sept. 30.—The Magnolia Petroleum company suffered a loss of $15,000 Friday night when fire destroyed a stable and hay barn at the company's plant two miles northwest of Electra. Two horses were burned, 4,000 bales of hay, 100 bushels of oats, and eight sets of harness were destroyed. The fire was discovered about 10 o'clock and an alarm immediately given. It was difficult to get water connections, which made it impossible for the fire department to do effective work.

The company had 20 horses in the building. Eighteen were taken out with considerable difficulty. One of the animals rescued was badly burned, and one of the dead horses had been taken to safety when it broke away and rushed back into the burning stable.

FORT WORTH, Sept. 30.—An appeal has been wired to Senator Sheppard to aid west Texans in the present car shortage. He has been asked to go before the I. C. C. immediately and ask for relief. The appeal was sent by the west Texas chamber of commerce. The shortage has become so acute in the last week that stock men have been unable to move their cattle either to market or to pasture.

LARGE OIL COMPANIES OF CALIFORNIA AFTER ADJUSTMENT OF RATES

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 30.—An application by the large producing oil companies of California for an adjustment of freight rates from California fields to Arizona and New Mexico points to enable them to meet competition from Texas, Kansas and Oklahoma oil production centers will be heard before Examiner Cassidy of the I. C. C. in San Francisco November 3, the San Francisco chamber of commerce was notified today.

Those Happy Days Are Gone for Year For Dallas Youths

DALLAS, TEXAS, Sept. 30.—Two youths, appearing in juvenile court here today to answer to charges of auto theft, used to have a good time together.

But—"Them days are gone forever"

Judge Arch Allen sentenced the boys to stay out of automobiles for one year. One of the boys was ordered to attend Sunday school for the next four Sundays and be at home every night at 8 o'clock. The other must be at home at 8 o'clock at night.

Both boys were given a suspended sentence to the state reformatory school at Gatesville for a period of two to five years.

Woman With Gat Greets Officer in Searching Party

Police officers, regardless of the unpleasant reception in the home of an alleged bootlegger in the Texhoma refinery neighborhood, Saturday night, succeeded in finding several gallons of corn liquor. A former customer who had been arrested for drunkenness furnished the tip Officers were refused admittance on the grounds that they had no search warrant They returned to the city with the defendant and secured a warrant.

On their return to the place, the woman of the house, well armed with a .45, greeted them at the door. On her invitation they entered the place and seized three gallons of corn whiskey.

EPIDEMIC OF DENGUE AT DALLAS IMPROVED

DALLAS, TEXAS, Sept. 30.—The epidemic of dengue fever which has held Dallas in his grip for the past three weeks was on the decrease today with only 50 new cases reported in the last 24 hours.

Three deaths from the disease were reported today, making a total of 18 since the spread of the sickness.

Living Over Old Days

Harold Wolfe, Chicago Civil War veteran, bids good-by to his sister, Catherine Reynolds, Civil War nurse, as he leaves for the G. A. R. "mobilization" at Des Moines. And it doesn't take much stretch of imagination to recall the parting of '61.

TRAFFIC TROUBLES DELAY ARRIVAL OF MANY PRIZE CATTLE

From 12 to 20 carloads of livestock were enroute to Wichita Falls Saturday night for the cattle exhibit at the fair, and it was indicated that the rows of empty stalls would all be filled before Sunday has far advanced

The traffic situation on the railroads delayed the shipments, and only a few cattle were on hand when the fair opened. As most of the pure-bred cattle in this section have been on display at other fairs, notably those at Abilene and Oklahoma City, it was necessary that expeditious shipments be made if they were to arrive in time for the opening here. Unforseen delays developed, but Will Young of Archer City, who, as chairman of the cattle department has been one of the hardest-working fair officials, was confident Saturday night that the shipments would be in before Sunday morning.

The two big buildings are all ready for the herds to be installed.

DISTRICT MEDICAL SOCIETY MAY HOLD CLINIC IN HOSPITAL

Dr. A. D. Pattillo, president of the North Texas District Medical society, has announced a meeting of that organization in this city, October 10. The program is still in the hands of the secretary, Dr. Austin F. Leach of Weatherford but will be announced here Monday.

An extensive program with the leading physicians in this section taking part has been arranged. Dr. Pattillo is anxious to prolong the meeting through a second day and hold a clinic at the new General hospital if this plan meets with the approval of the doctors in attendance.

FINCHER REVIVAL WILL CLOSE TODAY WITH 2 MEETINGS

Two services will be held today by the Dr. Frank Fincher revival party, bringing the local series of meetings to a close.

The morning service will be at the Central Presbyterian church, and the evening service at the First Christian church. Miss Mary Dan Harbison, whose solos have been such a delightful feature of the meetings, will sing at both services.

Dr. Fincher expressed himself Saturday as being well pleased with Wichita Falls and her people and with the meetings here

Driver and Drink Disappear in Dark; Police Holding Car

If you are in need of a Dodge toolpusher in fairly good condition and are willing to suffer the consequences of claiming this one, here is your opportunity. This vehicle collided with a Ford touring car at the corner of Fourteenth and Grace Saturday night at 7:30. The driver of the Dodge left the car and took flight with a half gallon demijohn alleged to have contained whiskey. Police officers brought the abandoned car to the station and are waiting a claimant.

SCHOOLS OF COUNTY PRESENT VARIED ARRAY OF PRODUCTS OF PUPILS' HEADS AND HANDS

All the schools in the county are represented by the school exhibit at the fair. From the Burkburnett public schools the best attraction is the manual training department, excellent even though the students were handicapped because of the lack of machinery. A miniature bungalow built by John McElrath of the Burkburnett ward school is among the features. There are exhibits in latin, history, English, domestic art and science, mechanical drawing, typewriting and art work.

All the work on display from the rural schools has been done this year It consists of English, map work, history and display posters for health campaigns.

In the Wichita public schools exhibit, the history display of the junior college and high school shows some old coins from a collection of Miss Darby, teacher at the Junior High school. The display contains antique books and weapons, a fine collection from the world war, and a sea chest, said to have been brought over in the Mayflower. These collections have been given by Mrs. Weldon, Mrs. Carrigan and Mrs. Carter. A painting of the Alamo, painted in 1838, was given by Superintendent Lee Clark.

The manual training department, music appreciation classes, primary department, map work and collections of the science classes in zoology and botany are also represented.

In the same building are displays of Indian beading and work by the Campfire girls, Texhoma Oil & Refining company, where a miniature drilling rig is shown and crude oil as it goes through the process of refinement The Magnolia Refining company also has an exhibit

FOR SALE ON PAVED ROAD TO IOWA PARK.
Three ten acre tracts of all tillable land. Four miles from center of city. Priced reasonable. Will give terms. Phone or call on W. E. Priddy, (owner).

THE SPEARMAN farm lands located in Terry, Gaines and Yoakum counties, South Plains of the Panhandle, Texas, are now being offered at prices and terms, which will enable any industrious farmer to buy and pay for a farm with less money than pay rent. Productive lands, a fine climate, abundance of good pure water, and a country in which one man raises more cotton, more corn and more sweet potatoes and other farm products than a whole family can gather. No insect pests. We make landlords out of our customers instead of renters. Farmers who are anxious to own their own farms are invited to come to see us. Inspect our farm lands, look at the crops and talk to the men who raise them. A card to W. A. Schelle, general agent, 26 Santa Fe bldg., Seagraves, Texas, will bring you a descriptive pamphlet, giving detailed information about these lands and plan of purchase. A reliable agent wanted in each county.

TIMES DAILY MARKETS

COTTON MARKET

New York Cotton.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Increased nervousness over the near east situation and reports of continued free offerings from the south led to heavy general selling in the cotton market today. December contracts broke to 20.40 or 63 points net lower and the market closed easy at net declines of 58 to 63 points. The market was nervous and unsettled from the start.

First prices were easy at a decline of 15 to 18 points under liquidation, local and southern selling. There was a good deal of trade buying to fix prices at the decline, also considerable covering for over the week-end. This caused rallies of some 15 to 25 points shortly after the call but the southern selling continued, and the market soon showed renewed weakness. The southwest was represented a considerable seller as prices worked off liquidation became more general while there was also heavy selling by houses with Liverpool connections late in the morning. October declined to 20.12 and January to 20.25, and closing prices were the lowest of the day, ruling within 10 or 15 points of the low figures touched on the decline of Thursday morning.

There appeared to be no change of sentiment as to the probable showing of the government reports which are for publication on Tuesday of next week. Ideas as to ginning prior to September 25th, range from about 3,700,000 up to 4,700,000 bales and the average of the private end September crop reports points to a condition of 50.3 and a crop indication of 10,149,000 bales. Week end reviews of the domestic goods trade were regarded as generally encouraging but the continued good weather in the south was commented upon as permitting further rapid progress with picking and marketing. It was reported that a little high grade cotton was being received here from Texas for certification with a view to delivery on October contracts. According to local brokers, however, the main features discussed on the decline were the foreign politics and continued southern selling.

New Orleans Cotton.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 30.—Pronounced weakness resulted in cotton today from unfavorable war news and prices broke $3 a bale under yesterday's close, the market closing at the bottom of the day. For a while following a lower opening the tone was steady and the same rallying ability was shown that featured the trading of the last couple of sessions, but during the second half of the session the selling came from all sides, apparently because of the fear that real hostilities might break out over Sunday between the British and Turks and once the slump was under way, the market had no recuperative power.

Early losses based altogether on overnight war news amounted to 27 to 30 points. Support immediately was met and recoveries set in that carried the most active trading positions back to within six to 10 points of yesterday's close. December reacting to 20.23. Offerings again increased and during the late trading was a steady decline. December finally closing at 10.74, with the list at net losses of 60 to 61 points.

Continued dry weather over practically the entire belt and claims of a somewhat easier basis here and there in the belt were against values to some extent, but war reports were the dominating influence of the day. Liverpool was very prominent seller and heavy selling was credited to Japanese interests, the interior spot houses and to recent buyers of long contracts.

GRAIN AND PRODUCE

CHICAGO, Sept. 30.—Wheat prices averaged higher today, although the market was nervous on account of the political news from abroad. The close was 1¼ to 2¾ cents net higher, with December 1 05⅝ to 1 05 7-8 and May 1 09 to 1.09⅛; corn was ½ lower to 7-8 cent up; oats were unchanged to ½ to 5-8 advance and provisions ranged from 15 cent decline to a like advance.

Corn and oats were unsettled but averaged higher. Shorts were good buyers of the September delivery in both grains and prices fluctuated rapidly, the longs selling on the bulges.

Provisions were unsettled with September and October lard firmer and January easier, packers buying some nearby lard with deliveries of 1,050,000 pounds.

STOCKS AND FINANCIAL

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—Possibilities of a clash between British and Turkish troops in the neutral zone of the Dardanelles resulted in a renewal of short pressure and the further liquidation of weakened accounts in today's brief session of the stock market, prices for a few speculative favorites registering declines of 1 to 6½ points while moderate losses occurred throughout a greater part of the list.

The disposition of traders to wait over the week end before adding to their commitments, resulting in a lack of fresh buying powers accelerated the decline, but there was no heavy unloading of stocks. Sales approximated 360,000 shares.

Mexican Petroleum was the individual weak feature, a drive of short interests against this issue resulting in a net loss of 6½ points. Other oils were weak in sympathy, losses of 1 to 2½ points being registered by Standard Oils of New Jersey and California—Royal Dutch, Houston Oil and Pan American issues.

Independent Steel also manifested acute weakness. Crucible was forced down more than 3½ points; Lackawanna 2½, Bethlehem B, Gulf States 1½, Republic 1½, and U. S. Steel common 1½.

Midvale ran against the current, advancing nearly a point above yesterday's closing quotations.

Rails were heavy with the rest of the list but most declines were held within a point. The few which dropped a point or more were New York Central, New Orleans Texas and Mexico, Baltimore & Ohio, Lehigh Valley, St. Louis Southwestern and Reading.

Despite the week's active stock market dealings, actual loans and discounts of clearing house banks showed a nominal decrease. Reserves of members in the Federal Reserve banks increased $26,000,000 net demand deposit expanded by $37,150,000 and a cash gain of almost $10,000,000 was accompanied by an increase of excess reserve to slightly more than $58,500,000.

IRRIGATION IDEA DOMINATES COUNTY EXHIBITS THAT GIVE NO HINT OF DROUTHY SUMMER

The new order of things agricultural in this section was the keynote of the county and farm exhibit department at the Texas-Oklahoma fair. Irrigation and irrigated farm products sounded the dominant note in that interesting feature of the exposition.

Counties where irrigation is as yet practically unknown however, did strongly for a share of the public's interest and attention and presented some splendid exhibits—exhibits that gave no hint of the hot dry summer through which this section has passed.

Those exhibits that portrayed the benefits of irrigation as already practiced here were as convincing as they were artistic.

A number of counties in northwest Texas and southwest Oklahoma have exhibits entered. Not all were installed by Saturday night and Sunday morning will see some additions to those described below.

Wilbarger County.

The Wilbarger county exhibit with Eula Goodfellow and P. D. Cheney county agent, in charge, is unusually attractive. The color scheme used in decorating the background is exceptionally pleasing, the effect being obtained by the skillful blending of colors of fruits and vegetables.

One of the novelties of this exhibit is a woman's hat made of corn shucks and artistically trimmed with a band of the same material.

The display includes all varieties of farm and orchard products and some exceptionally fine alfalfa hay.

Jackson County.

The Jackson county booth is in charge of Messrs. Parchman and Thomas, and is a splendid exhibition from the standpoint of variety as well as quality.

Feed stuffs of all kinds are displayed in profusion and some very fine heads of Rattail millet. The canned goods display is of unusual merit, particularly the tomatoes. One of the exceptional exhibits of this booth is tobacco which was raised without irrigation.

Tillman County, Oklahoma.

Price Queenberry, W. N. Randolph and County Agent Johnson are in charge of the exhibit of Tillman county, Oklahoma, and have a display of which they feel very proud. Wheat barley and rye and some extra fine red rust-proof oats are particularly noteworthy. They have on exhibit some of Burbank's latest feed creation — sudan-sorghum—which is claimed to have all the good qualities of both sorghum and Sudan grass.

Seventeen varieties of seed are exhibited and some very fine canned fruits.

Electra Community.

Electra is well represented with a display of garden truck and canned fruits and vegetables. The Irish potato exhibit is one of the best at the fair, the tubes being of good size and unusually uniform. White pickling onions are shown in perfection. The exhibit, while not as large as some, is very comprehensive in its scope including in its display some of the by-products of the farm.

Wichita County Irrigation Exhibit

The Wichita county irrigation exhibit is particularly attractive owing to the fact that most of the products are fresh and green, having been raised under ideal growing conditions. Solon Downing is in charge of the display. C. W. Rhodes, J. W. Brown, T. A. Berry and a number of other farmers contributed to the display. The exhibit includes four varieties of peaches, five varieties of pears, four kinds of cantaloupes and ten or twelve varieties of pepper, all of which are fresh. Corn in all stages of maturity is on display. Fresh pomegranates and figs and some very heavily fruited cotton are shown.

Of unusual interest is a section of grape vine 26 feet long which represents the growth of one year.

Clay County.

Beulah Bradley and T. B. Lewis, county agent, have charge of the Clay county booth.

Irish potatoes of exceptional uniformity and smoothness and some very fine specimens of corn are shown. The cotton exhibit is very attractive and shows some heavy fruiting varieties. All kinds of canned goods are on display, including some extra fine pears.

The background decoration is rather unusual and sets off the whole display.

Chillicothe.

County Agent Jones of Wichita county is in charge of the Chillicothe exhibit. Of particular note are the watermelons and cashaws being some of the largest on exhibition. Fresh peaches of large size and of exceptional uniformity are also shown. The display includes some very fine heads of dwarf milo maize.

County Irrigation Demonstration.

L. H. Franks is in charge of the irrigation district demonstration. It is the purpose of this exhibit to show the results obtained from irrigated cotton properly cared for as compared with non irrigated cotton. The exhibit is divided into three sections, the first showing cotton grown under irrigation, the second grown without irrigation, but well cared for, and the third non-irrigated cotton poorly cared. The result is striking. It is estimated that the irrigated will produce from three-quarters to a bale per acre and will bring a premium of a cent a pound over the dry farmed cotton.

LATE FALL

Feed for Winter Eggs Now.

WINTER egg slumps usually start in mid-summer when hens improperly fed, begin to moult too soon. They draw on their bodies for feathers. The moult drags into winter with the hens in run down condition, unable to lay.

Late Moulters Pay Best

You can't neglect your hens in summer and expect a heavy egg yield next winter. Make your hens moult quickly and naturally by feeding Purina Poultry Chows. Get eggs when other hens stop laying.

JUDGE SCORES KLAN IN CONNECTION WITH GRAND JURY CHARGE

BITTERLY CONDEMNS ALLEGED PRACTICES OF MASKED ORDERS.

DECLARES ACCUSED SHOULD BE GIVEN A LEGAL TRIAL

Says Man With Masked and Padded Foot in Jury Box Is Greatest Menace.

PANHANDLE, TEXAS, Sept. 30.—Judge W. R. Ewing of Miami, judge of the 31st judicial district, bitterly condemned the alleged practice of masked secret orders in his charge to the grand jury when that body met for deliberation at the September term of court, in Panhandle.

The judge stated that he had read and heard of organizations or groups of men which had been charged with taking the law into their own hands by intimidation, application of the wet rope and tar and feathers. He stated that when two or more men conspired to administer justice other than through the proper course of law, that such offenses constituted a violation of the law. The body was especially instructed to investigate matters of this kind, since they are destructive of our government, if true.

The district judge made it very plain to the grand jury that he was unalterably opposed to any clique or klan which stands for, endorses or countenances mob violence and tar and feathers, or in any way taking the law into their own hands and acting as judge, jury and executioner, by summarily meting out punishment to supposed violators of the law. He condemned such organizations collectively and individually as being a menace to society and destructive of our form of government.

The judge told the grand jury that every lay violator, regardless of the nature of the crime, is entitled to and should have a legal trial. The court further stated to the grand jury, that the greatest power for good or evil lies in the jury box, that here the law is upheld or trampled in the dust; that the majority of people who complain of the non-enforcement of laws would be found to be people who shirked jury service.

He stated that the greatest menace to law enforcement is the juror who with masked face and padded foot, slips into the jury box for the purpose of perpetrating a fraud upon the law.

Judge Ewing stated that the present suspended sentence law was in his opinion an excellent law and should not be limited to any particular age of criminal, but as it is generally applied at present, is a breeder of crime.

REPORT 28,612 AT OPENING OF FAIR

Stars and Stripes and the lettering "Good Night" appeared. The feature ended as the band played the national anthem.

Acrobats Thrill Crowd.

One of the most daring of acrobatic stunts ever witnessed in this city is included in the vaudeville acts given before the large grand stand. A young man donning the uniform of a sailor climbed to the top of an 80-foot pole and while it swayed to and fro he "pulled" his hair raising and breath taking stunts.

The entertainment as provided Saturday night was worth three times the price of admission and was so declared by practically everyone who witnessed it.

The fair grounds themselves presented a most picturesque scene Saturday night. The thousands of electric lights that mark the roads and the pathways and outline the exhibit halls as well as the light shed through the windows of the various buildings was a scene beautiful.

Much color was lent to the fire works exhibition as the moon was in a position that made it possible for practically all of the aerial affairs to "shoot the moon."

TROOP 1 IS WINNER IN TRACK MEET AT T-O FAIR GROUNDS

The silver loving cup, given to the troop of the Boy Scouts of America winning the greatest number of points in the quarterly field day, is still retained by Troop 1, who took 270 points over its nearest adversary at the fair ground Saturday morning. This is the second successive time Troop 1 has held the cup.

Allowing for the fact that there was no competition, the meet was well carried out, and the contestants who took part in the games and scout craft, rivaled the ability of soldiers, as it was remarked by several of the judges. The standing of the troops is as follows: Troop 1, 290 points; Troop 8, 20 points; Troop 4, 10 points. Troop 1 took first place in all events with the exception of the dressing race, won by Troop 8.

The features of the morning were the wig wag signaling contest and the wall scaling contest. The rate in signaling was far above the required rate, and George Bolin sending with Edgar Ellis on the receiving end, did credit to any army man. The wall scaling contest, with a team of eight boys, also drew an applause.

The counting for the meet were first place; count 20 points, second place 10, and third place 5. The contests were as follows:

Troop inspection — First place, Troop 1.

Knot tying—First place, troop 1.

Three legged race—First place, Troop 1.

First aid demonstration — First place, Troop 1.

Semaphore signaling—First place, Troop 1.

Patrol antelope race—First place, Troop 1.

Wig wag signaling—First place, Troop 1.

Potato race—First place, Troop 1.

Skin the snake — First place, Troop 1.

Neckerchief life line—First place, Troop 1.

Tug o' war—First place, Troop 1.

Dressing race — First place, Troop 8.

Wall scaling—First place, troop 1.

Pyramid building—First place, Troop 1.

Crab and monkey race — First place, Troop 1.

Some of the stars of the meet were: Lowell Nichols, Curtiss Beatty, Gregory Dodgens, Edgar Ellis George Bolin and Clyde Bartlett. All of these are members of Troop 1. Chester Powell, scout executive, said that by the time of the next field meet, to be held in three months, it was hoped that theys would be more active troops in the city and in this case scouting fans would have the opportunity to witness some real scout work.

LARGE MERCANTILE FIRM IN ATLANTA DAMAGED BY FIRE

ATLANTA, Sept. 30.—Fire broke out again tonight in the Eiseman Clothing compan building on Whitehall street, which suffered heavily in the blaze a week ago, causing additional losses estimated tonight at about $300,000.

The flames are believed to have started in the third floor of the building from an undetermined cause and spread rapidly throughout the structure, attracting large crowds. However, the fire was held to the Eiseman building and the rear end of the L. F. M. store, adjoining.

Losses to the Eiseman company were estimated at $100,000 on the building and $175,000 on the stock and fixtures.

FINANCIAL AGREEMENT IS NOW MEXICAN LAW

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 30.—Publication today in the Dario Official of the presidential decree promulgating the agreement signed recently at New York between Fee Minister De la Huerta and international bankers, makes it effective as a law of the land. The agreement, which was ratified without opposition by both houses of congress, provides for the liquidation of Mexican debts.

SERIOUSLY ILL RESULT EATING LEAVES OF PLANT

DALLAS, TEXAS, Sept. 30.—Ruth Richardson, 11, and Elizabeth Richardson, 8, were seriously ill at their home here tonight as the result of eating leaves of a plant believed to be elephant ears.

COURT HOLDS TIERNAN IS FATHER OF CHILD WHOSE PATERNITY THE MOTHER ATTRIBUTES TO POULIN

SOUTH BEND, IND., Sept. 30.—The John Tiernan home here was a house of heart aches and forebodings tonight while a shadow of hatred lurked near by.

Across the town in the residence of Harry Poulin, who won today in his fight to prove that he was not the father of Mrs. Augusta Tiernan's baby, there was no sign of celebration.

For, although Mrs. Tiernan lost and Harry Poulin won, there was little to pick between the victor and the vanquished. Practically forgotten during the long court battle, looked upon at the best as evidence only, William John Tiernan, 10 months old, was the real winner. His parentage has been established. He is legally the son of Prof. Tiernan, not of Harry Poulin as his mother tried to convince the court.

William John gurgled in his crib as the Tiernans planned to break up their home.

The verdict ended all hopes of reconciliation.

Mrs. Tiernan is going to her mother in Bronson, Mich., next week. Professor Tiernan is to remain at Notre Dame.

"They haven't asked me to quit. They haven't even hinted that I should do so, so I will continue my work at the law school," he said. Both the professor and his wife appeared stunned as they told of their plans to sell the home and separate. The children will all go with Mrs. Tiernan, at least for the present. Later two of them may be sent to school in Chicago.

Shadow Creeps In.

And then the shadow crept in.

"Mrs. Tiernan will be back for the next trial," the professor said. "We will fight this out until we prove that Poulin is the father."

The court room sat silent today as Judge Ducomb read his decision. He read slowly as though weighing the words he had written before uttering them.

It was plainly apparent that his summing up of the case solved the riddle for many of the listeners, those who during the trial had hissed as Poulin and his wife entered the court room.

Today there was no demonstrations.

They heard him charge Mrs. Tiernan with acts "unbelievable in a mother;" they heard him flay Poulin and declare there was no doubt but that he was intimate with Mrs. Poulin and then they heard him declare in a raised voice:

None of the parties involved could be further injured unless it is this innocent child which the court might label with the brand of illegitimacy.

"Why is it that the husband, a man of wisdom, a professor of law in a university, never doubted that he was the father of the child until his wife told him eight months after the child was born?" the court asked.

Mrs. Tiernan's Testimony.

According to Mrs. Tiernan's testimony, she did not live with her husband as a wife during the months when the baby must have been conceived. It was on this testimony and on intimate medical details that she based her charge that Poulin was the father, for it was at this time that she charged her love affair with Poulin was at its height.

"And yet, they (Tiernan and his wife) lived together in the same house, on the same floor, with their doors not more than four feet apart. He was a normal man of 32, she was physically normal, 27, and in good health.

"The court is satisfied that they lived together in all respects as man and wife during the time the child was begotten."

The court then attacked Mrs. Tiernan's conduct and declared it most "licentious" and "most unbecoming and hardly believable in a mother."

"Mrs. Tiernan was extremely passionate, sensitive and quick tempered. She has shown no modesty or refinement in her testimony.

"Mrs. Tiernan had an uncontrollable passion for Harry Poulin. She would have sacrificed all that his desire might be satisfied. This court will not be a party to any action which will bring further disgrace upon this child for the moral sins of its mother."

KLAN STAGES PARADE AT HILL COUNTY FAIR

HILLSBORO, TEXAS, Sept. 30.—Before a crowd estimated at 30,000 people, the Ku Klux Klan staged a mammoth parade and ceremonial on the field in front of the grand stand tonight at the Hill county fair and exposition.

Approximately 3,000 klansmen participated in the parade, and it was said to have been one of the biggest demonstrations of any kind ever held here. About 500 candidates were initiated before the immense crowd.

STRIKING SHOPMEN ARE FREE ON $10,000 BONDS

HOUSTON, Sept. 30.—C. C. Handley, chairman of the executive board for striking shopmen on the Southern Pacific, and Charles Fox, grand lodge representative of the machinists' union, made bonds of $10,000 each today to appear in El Paso and answer a federal indictment.

The indictments grew out of the present strike. J. B. Yonkum, another strike official, expects to make his bond this afternoon.

REPORT ON CONDITION OF CLEARING HOUSE BANKS

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The actual condition of the clearing house banks and trust companies for the week shows that they hold $58,526,750 in excess of legal requirements. This is an increase of $18,953,900 from last week.

Serpents that danced on silk ropes to music were exhibited at Bartholomew Fair, Smithfield, England, in 1778, says Hohne.

TWO HORSE SHOWS SCHEDULED TODAY AT FAIR STADIUM

Two horse shows will be staged today in the stadium, it was announced Saturday night, the first being scheduled for 3 p. m., the second for 8 p. m.

The horse department of the Fair was viewed by thousands Saturday, and the equine aristocrats were the object of much admiring comment. This feature of the Fair is said to out-rank anything of the kind ever staged in Texas.

W. F. Weeks, department chairman, announced the following program for this afternoon's show:

1.—Walk, trot, canter class. Entries: Fashion, Hunt, Miss Prim, Astral K., all owned by E. C. Weiss, of Mineral Wells; Gretta Times, owned by W. F. Weeks; Roy Denmark, owned by T. R. Boone.

2.—Fine harness class. Entries: Who's Who, owned b E. C. Weiss; Brilliant Boy, owned by Miss Logan; Gretta Times, owned by W. F. Weeks; Joe Bailey, owned by Walter Pyron; Susan Francis, owned by W. F. Weeks; Forrest Ike, owned by Lewis & Crawford.

3.—Five gaits for stallion, mare or gelding. Entries: Susan Francis and Silver Dare, owned by W. F. Weeks; Joe Bailey, owned by Walter Pyron; Brilliant Boy, owned by Miss Logan; Forrest Ike, owned by Lewis & Crawford; Easter Cloud, owned by W. F. Weeks.

AMERICA'S MASTER OF ROMANCE

CHAMBERS' LATEST NOVEL

is a romance of dark intrigue and breathless adventure—a powerful, throbbing story of Eve Strayer, that glorious girl of the north woods.

Like that marvelous gem,

THE FLAMING JEWEL

first stolen from the royal jewel casket and now hidden in the Hell's Kitchen of the wilds, Eve—loveliest of heroines, beautiful, innocent yet compelled to live in the dark hole of the forest where her step-father and his gang flout justice and the law.

THE WICHITA DAILY TIMES

will print this great romance which tells how love, strange and mysterious, came to the heart of this beautiful and lonesome girl, beset with dangers in the depths of the wilderness.

"Give me the packet, or I'll wring your damned neck!" Like a wild-cat, Eve fought with the man who had entered her room in the dark to steal the Flaming Jewel.

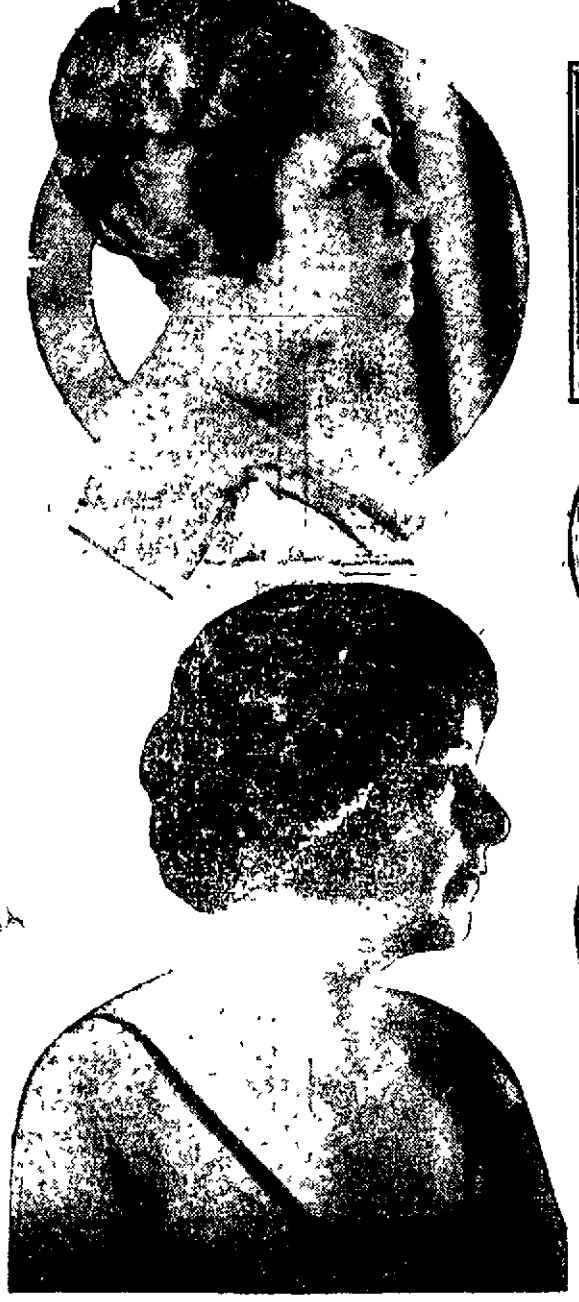
Musicians' Club Plans Big Winter Season—Some of the Leading Artists



A Few of "Who's Who" Musically

In the first row to the left, reading down are Mesdames Lee Clark, A. H. Britain and Walter S. Robertson. Mrs. Clark is one of the most appreciated local pianists and singers and an active member of the club. Mrs. Britain, who is a gifted pianist, is an active member of the extension committee and member of the executive board. Mrs. Robertson, president of the Women's Choral club, past president of the Musicians and present member of the executive board committee, is state chairman of the Junior and Juvenile music extension work and has organized several clubs in Wichita county as well as elsewhere in the state. Mrs. Robertson is also president of the First District Federation of Women's clubs.

In the layout, No. 1 is Mrs. F. R. Collard accompanist of the club and accomplished pipe organist. Mrs. Collard is organist at the First Baptist church. No. 2 is Mrs. Louella B. Thompson, director of the Women's Choral club and well known local contralto, who is also critic and parliamentarian of the Musicians' club. No. 3 is Mrs. C. R. Nicholls, president of the Musicians. No. 4 is Mrs. George Thorburn, one of the vice-presidents, while Miss Annette Walsh, first vice-president and another talented pianist is shown elsewhere on the page. No. 5, Miss Florence Sammons corresponding secretary of the club, and No. 6, Miss Vivian Bailey, secretary. No. 7 is Miss Bessie Lee Bartlett. No. 8 Mrs. F. C. Barron, and No. 9, Mrs. Jerry Schaefer. Miss Bartlett is librarian of the club, Mrs. Barron a past president, very active member generally and local soprano much in demand; Mrs. Schaefer is also a singer, and is treasurer of the club.

Elsewhere on the page are Mrs. Lucille B. Huff, past president, who is now touring Europe, and one of the accomplished pianists of the city, Mrs. R. E. Shepherd, active member of the club and pleasing local singer, and Miss Jo Betsy Miller, one of the younger members of the club who has achieved much distinction as a pianist.

A Three-Number Artists' Course, Morning and Twilight Musicales, And Monthly Concerts Are Planned

Of all the arts beneath the heaven——'

Old and trite and threadbare perhaps unless it is so that truth can never become threadbare.

For, trite and old as it may be the saying is as true today in the autumn of 1922 as it would have been had it been put into just such words during the days when young David swept the magic music of his harp into the tempestuous heart of the king.

Nothing draws the soul so surely into beautiful avenues of reflection as the gracious harmony of sound. Whether it is the tender note of a crooning little lullaby or the magnificent theme of the world's greatest symphony, the heart yields its swift response.

"Make the music sing," said a little three year old admonished to be quiet "den I'll be good." And a quiet unobtainable by rebuke or punishment claimed the restless little body as it settled on the floor in front of the big mahogany box.

"I don't spose there's much real music to it," said a young clerk in a downtown refreshment place, "but I can feel myself all smooth ing out inside just listening to that piano."

So the Wichita Falls Musicians club members entering on the thirteenth year's work this month are bringing to the winter's task a greater zeal and ambition than they have ever put into it before. The music memory contest which they greatly aided last year told the executives many things. The success of the splendid morning musicales at Kemp hotel, which brought such artists as Thurlow Lieurance to the city told them others. And they knew and believed enough to lend fuel to their faith in the immortality value of music before that.

An Ambitious Program

The season's program is ambitious. But last year a lot of impetus was lent the club through a great many agencies, not the least of which was the addition to the membership of several exceptionally talented artists. Among these latter additions Mrs. O. P. Nichols, formerly of Georgia, was elected president. Mrs. Nichols brought to the directorate of the Musicians club a lifelong experience in musical work which included training in the best musical centres of the country and work through some of the most interesting mediums. Before coming to Wichita Falls Mrs. Nicholls, who is both violinist and organist, was for six years president of one of the largest musical clubs in Georgia, vice president of the Georgia Federation of Music clubs and a district chairman of music in the Federated clubs. Supporting Mrs. Nicholls in the directorate and on the executive board of the club are the city's best musical talent. Briefly these include Mrs. A. H. Britain, Mrs. Louella B. Thompson, Miss Annette Walsh, Mrs. [illegible] B. Huff, Mrs. Walter S. Robertson, Mrs. N. M. Clifford, Mrs. [illegible] Gidger, Mrs. [illegible], Mrs. Jerry Schaefer, Miss Bessie Lee Bartlett, Mrs. [illegible] Barron, Mrs. George Thorburn and Mrs. [illegible] Gidger, with Mesdames W. S. Robertson, N. M. Clifford and A. H. Britain forming the executive board committee.

And the winter's program will offer not only the monthly concerts in the evening when local artists of talent are presented free of charge to the music lovers of the city, the morning musicales at Kemp hotel and the Women's Choral club concerts but an artist course series of three of the biggest numbers it was possible to obtain—Louis Graveure, the baritone soloist, the Hinshaw quartette and Alberto Salvi, the internationally noted harpist.

Its Auxiliaries.

The Musicians club, which has been organized 12 years, has among its auxiliaries the Wichita Falls Women's choral club, recently organized under the directorship of Mrs. Louella B. Thompson, and the flourishing junior clubs which are doing splendid work among the high school age girls and. The choral club members [illegible] the Musicians club [illegible] while the monthly concerts are carefully planned for the evening presentation. The club has purchased and paid for two pianos, one a Mason & Hamlin grand used for concert purposes.

Directors of the Musicians club expect to make this year one of the strongest educational forces in the city and have planned their plans and their winter's musical campaign to that end. The club members will assist this year again in the music memory contests among the school children and every effort will be made by the whole active membership to get music to a firmer footing in Wichita Falls.

HOLLYWOOD MOVIE WRITER SAYS LOCAL ACTRESS IS COMING FILM STAR

Miss Dorothy Manners daughter of Mr. M. D. Green of the Stratford hotel here is one of the coming screen stars according to an enthusiastic writer in the Defender, Hollywood's movie magazine for movie artists.

Miss Manners who has a leading part with Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood, scheduled for Wichita Falls this month and who plays the lead with Jack Pickford in Garrison's finish to be shown here soon is featured on the cover page of the Defender and Mr. Davenport the writer devoted half a page of the magazine to an unusually interesting talk about the young cinema actress. Among other highly complimentary things concerning Miss Manners beauty and intelligence the writer says "Miss Manners whole character seems strengthened by the fact that she is utterly devoid of the traits, attitudes or affections of the 'flapper.' She had not been moving around in Hollywood society long before her beauty was recognized very generally and when it was ascertained that she also possessed intelligence, ambition and unalloyed ladyship an augmented interest was taken in her.

Miss Manners has been in the movie world less than a year having had a season or two on the stage before that.

OCTOBER USHERS IN BUSY MONTH IN CLUB AND SOCIAL LIFE

Complete Personnel Rex Wichita's Court, Fair Coronation Monday; Everybody Invited to See Spectacle

Every glittering bit of spangle has been fastened on; every aristocratic train has curved itself into the proper alluringness of curve and swing; every ducal coronet has found its exact resting place above a fair brow; every duchess and maid of honor and escort is in town, and every single little thing is in readiness for the first big annual coronation of Rex Wichita and the Queen of the Texas-Oklahoma Fair Monday evening

The coronation will take place in the Shrine temple at Call Field, in the midst of the fair buildings, and the ceremony will begin promptly at 8 o'clock. At the crowning, the identity of Rex Wichita and the Queen of the Fair will be revealed and the carefully guarded secret of several weeks divulged before thousands of spectators Everybody in Texas and Oklahoma who can get into the auditorium is invited to be present, and the biggest crowd ever assembled under one cover in Wichita Falls is expected in the Shrine temple that night. The preparations, held to a democratic scale for the most part, have been on a sufficiently magnificent scale to insure the success of the beautiful spectacle of the coronation, and the colorful furnishings of the throne room are said by those who have seen them to be exceptionally beautiful.

The complete personnel of the coronation, with the exception of the names of Rexi Wichita and the Queen, was announced Saturday, and follows:

Ladies-in-waiting and their escorts: Miss Lillian Pain and Otto Formeigle; Miss Annette Walsh and E. A. Nelson; Miss Thelma Kahn and Sam Kimberlin; Miss Louise Montgomery and Raymond Myers; Miss Lulu Wood and R. J. Waggoner; Miss Ruth Noton and Harry Myers; Miss Josephine Mayfield and H. Y. KATHLEEN NORRIS Woman to Woman Talks

DO YOU REALLY WANT THAT DIVORCE?

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

"America's Most Popular Woman Writer for Women"

Every divorce is the result of two hallucinations.

The first occurred some two—five—or 10 years ago, when Peggy thought that Bob was the dearest fellow alive, the divinest dancer, the most clever, generous, fascinating person she ever met, and when in a whirl of grandmother's lace and mother's silver, and new suits, hats, stockings and frilly lingerie, she became Mrs. Bob.

The second hallucination is in process of dreary realization today, when Bob has mysteriously turned into a commonplace, uninteresting man, who isn't going to make a million a year, after all; who does not admire Peggy's type any more, who doesn't like her friends, approve of her clothes, or laugh at her jokes; who "glooms" around the house in the occasional evenings that find him there, and whose nicest manner has become one of civil, cool boredom

When they meet downtown for luncheon now Peggy doesn't flutter up to him, all shy eyelashes and violets and fragrance, and breathe the old, adoring.

"Hello, you darling old handsome thing! Did you think I wasn't coming?"

And Bob does not reply by bending over her littleness and sweetness with a sort of intoxication, and murmuring

"Oh, you beautiful—you angel—my own little sweetheart!"

Greatest Hallucination of All

No, Peggy raises an appraising indifferent eyebrow now, and says

"Do wear your other suit tomorrow, and send that to the cleaner!"

And Bob, who hates Peggy's chum Harriet Brice answers only

"Oh you got the hat, did you? I'll bet Harriet helped you pick it out!"

So they stop lunching together on shopping days what's the use"

And Peggy, handsome and righteous as she pours tea, tells her best friends that she isn't going to stand it, this way Her life and Bob's is simply a sham. It's ridiculous to keep it up

Nobody knows, she says, how cruel Bob can be Just in little ways, but—well now for instance, he wouldn't tell her whether he wanted to go to the Watson's dinner or not for days, and then she meets Carol Watson, and Carol says so sweetly, "Oh I'm so glad you can come on Friday!" Imagine the humiliation for Peggy!

Lots of little things like that—they don't sound so terrible but it's the way Bob does them Life has become impossible on his terms, she hates his house, his voice, the sound of his step

So Peggy indulges in a third great hallucination She sees herself smartly established in an independent little apartment, doing—at last!—what she wants to do, seeing the persons she wants to see, free—free—free!

But a thousand—ten thousand Peggies are proving at this exact minute that this is the greatest hallucination of all

The Confession the Divorcee Makes

Such a divorce—and it is the common type—is a confession on Peggy's part

She doesn't know it, but she is tacitly admitting that her happiness in life is in the hands of other persons.

She is not the master of her fate, she is not the captain of her soul. Bob who was all handsome, admirable fineness in 1915 is everything contemptible and commonplace in 1922 But that isn't the tragedy after all The tragedy is that Peggy is letting Bob's deficiencies create similar gaps in her own character.

As long as any woman's happiness is of another person's making rather than of her own that woman is unhappy and her life is a failure. And the only reason that second marriages are sometimes more successful than first marriages is because the woman, or man or both, have learned something through the pain and humiliation of that first misery.

A second marriage? Yes, but we haven't come to that Peggy is merely free, now and in her little independent establishment And not different it all proves to be from what she dreamed

Things the Divorcee Discovers

She has no more scenes which to talk On the contrary, her code decrees now that she speak only loyally and kindly of Bob and to her consternation she discovers here and there an old friend who actually sympathizes with Bob

And then she isn't asked about as she used to be a recently-divorced woman must have an escort and a other companion provided, and hostesses shrink away from the problem of the extra detached man as from the Black Plague

And the bachelors she knows the men that used to drift in and out of Bob's house as sympathetically and gaily—they don't come any more They can't For Peggy to entertain an eligible bachelor now would mean only one thing—that he was interested in Peggy And Peggy cannot risk "talk" at any cost

She determines to be a breadwinner, women are doing wonderful things with shops, and frocks and even dancing, nowadays Peggy goes out to a theatrical school, she studies interior decorating or she opens, with a friend a little tea room all yellow lanterns and small, costly gifts

It doesn't work Never having had the secret of happiness, she hasn't it now; she speedily decides that a second marriage is her only way out, and—if she is fortunate—she makes it, usually with a man who does not compare favorably to Bob in most ways

Does Divorce Gain One Anything?

The world is full of these drifting, eager dissatisfied women, sharply desiring to be reestablished and wearisomely harping upon the one article of their creed—that Bob is a selfish mean unbearable brute

But what has any one of them gained by divorce that she might not have had anyway under her husband's protection and with all the dignity of a decently married woman?

If Bob really is a brute then sooner or later Peggy is sure of that universal sympathy that never fails a fine woman married to an inferior man

If Peggy really can become a money earner if she has the initiative and the patience and the courage that even a modest career demands (let us not forget that career as Mrs Bob and scorned to Bob regardless the kind point disposition consideration that she would any other man)

This attitude on Peggy's part is the one invincible argument she can offer the world as to her rights, and wrongs, as Bob's wife

The minute she leaves him she robs herself of her best defense, the world is against Peggy then. But while she stays with him, quietly and with self-possession working out, from the very material of failure, her own life work, her own happiness, her family, her friends, her whole acquaintance, have nothing but praise for Peggy.

The Recompenses of Sacrifice

The more flagrant Bob's misconduct, the more admirable is Peggy, her poise and dignity lift her above his human blundering and stumbling, and the very thing that has seemed to her her greatest trial and humiliation becomes a sort of halo about her head

She has become independent of Bob, she may be sorry for him, she may even be distressed and annoyed by him, but he touches her own soul no longer. Bob can affect Peggy now no more than the car conductor who is rude or the hotel clerk who speaks to her slangily.

And what is accomplished by this sacrifice of Peggy's independence?

Well, in any case, something, and in some cases a great deal.

If there is a child, that child still has a home, and a father and mother. He is not dragged about the world, a forlorn little derelict regaled upon the bitter tale of his mother's wrongs.

Then there is one home the more in the world, and a home with a busy, interested and developed—if somewhat sacrificed and somewhat wiser—woman, in it. And sooner or later that woman gains the only true happiness in the world, the happiness that is based on the wonderful old phrase, "He that loseth his life shall find it."

A Game Worth Playing

To Peggy, patience, sweetness, philosophy will become a sort of game, and the playing of that game will become the interest of her life. And her friends will very quickly come to realize her position

To Peggy divorced their attitude will always be expressed by a skeptical, unconcerned "How-do-you-like-it?" and "What on-earth-can you-do-now?" followed by a wistful, "I have to go Peg George and I are dining out tonight!"

But about the dignified, strong, self sufficient faithful wife, there will presently be an atmosphere of "I think you're wonderful George does he think you are simply a marvel with Bob Bob owes everything in the world to you, Peggy, and I hope he realizes it."

And then there is other gain For we live in a world of miracles, all worked by the one divine element—love And which of us doesn't know of marriages that have mysteriously worked out from utter failure to a generous measure of success? Which of us doesn't know of Bobs who have really improved, really developed, under the skillful hands of the right sort of wife?

I have known of divorces that were apparently justifiable and of second marriages that were unusually successful But for each one of these I know of a score of lonesome, solitary, impecunious divorced women drifting about the fringes of society, and of a score of second marriages infinitely more tragic than the first

Happy Marriage a Life Work

I know two cases of women who desperately grasped at second chances—after the disillusioning interval between marriages—but who are still jealously in love with their first husbands, anxiously interested in all that concerns them and resentful of any new interests—especially of a romantic nature, on those husbands' parts

And I know an enormously rich woman in the early forties who is now trying her fifth marital experience I don't have to describe her to you—you can imagine the harsh eyes, the high voice, the noisy self defense at the first hint of even indirect criticism You know without my saying so that golf and bridge are the two real interests of her life

And contrasted to these are other cases the cases of women who fought their way through years of doubt and disappointment, who kept their own faith high, and who have triumphantly drawn not only their own but their children's and their husbands' happiness out of the flames

For a happy marriage is a life work • • •

FASHIONS

By LENORE

There is one thing certain about the fashions that have prevailed the past two or three seasons, and that is their extreme adaptability to every type of figure. When the most fashionable lines are on a straight silhouette—and especially now that the skirt lengths are somewhat longer—there is little chance of discontent, for these lines are usually becoming to the young woman and the matron, the slender woman and the woman of heavier build In fact, this applies even to such draped styles as are being featured by the Paris couturiers, for the draping is moderate and is confined almost exclusively to long, slender lines.

An interesting trimming device is employed in the black Canton crepe model sketched. (Oh yes, of course brown is the featured color, but black too is shown along with it in the smartest collection.) The long lines of the design are emphasized with buttons, which are joined together with open-work fagotting.

MISS BLANCHE PENICK HAS BIRTHDAY PARTY

Little Miss Blanche Penick celebrated her fifth birthday with a pretty children's party Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs R E. Penick, 1500 Fillmore

About a score of little folks spent a delightful afternoon with Blanche from the time they were presented with pink and blue caps at the door for the afternoon's play, until they bade their little hostess goodbye and took home gay coloured chicken balloons as souvenirs. Games on the lawn were played first, Kodak pictures made, and contests enjoyed. Henry Yeargin won first prize and Woody McFadden second in one of these, after which they were invited into the dining room for refreshments. The room was beautifully decorated in a manner to please the little folks, pink and blue streamers extending from the chandelier to the corners of the table held in place with handmade favors. A beautifully iced embossed birthday cake held five lighted candles, and in the cutting, Miss Betty Moore found the ring, La Rue Simmons the thimble, and Mary Sharpe the dime. The cake, with ice cream, was served to Marcella Dulaney, La Rue Simmons, Mary Shepherd, Marcelline Wyatt, Margaret Perry, Betty Moore, Stanley Hill Jr, Wayne Ross Dowdy, Teddy Wrant, Woody McFadden, Bobby Senning, Henly Yeargin, Walter Worth Tyson, Bob Honea, and Tom Penick.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

TWINS GET DREAM

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

He put the dream into a toad-skin bag and handed it to the little boy.

The Twins wished themselves up to the Dream Star where Eena Meena, the Magician, was boiling dreams

"Is Light Fingers here?" asked Nancy, sticking in her head.

"No," answered Eena Meena "What's he done now?"

"He's stolen the Fairy Queen's automobile," answered Nick "and we are hurling for it"

"H'm," said Eena Meena raising his bushy eyebrows in surprise "Then I bet you a dollar some of my rivals have it Either Twelve Toes or Tricky Trixie, and that won't do at all Just let me think I'll have to help you to get it

So Eena Meena thought and thought

"Ah!" he said finally "I'm making a dream here that's a dandy I'll tell you what it is It's a dream about a railroad train If Light Fingers dreams this he'll think it's true and he'll jump out so he won't get wrecked and the magic auto mobile will stop Then you children can hop in and take it back to the Fairy Queen"

"That's a fine idea" said Nick "Is the dream nearly done?"

"Yes" said Eena Meena "Almost I just have to shake in a little soot and a little black smoke and a few nails into the kettle There you are! It's all ready"

He put the dream into a toad-skin bag and handed it to the little boy "Don't lose it," advised the Magician, "and don't break the bag If you do, you and Nancy will dream the dream yourselves and that would be dreadful"

"Where do you think we'll find Light Fingers?" asked Nancy

"On the Milky Way, said Eena Meena "It's fine for automobiles and he's sure to be there Hide yourselves behind the Dreamland Tree and he'll come along by and by"

Little Children Brighten Homes

EVERY young couple starting out in life has visions of joyful hours spent before the fireside with healthy, happy children; but, alas, how often young women who long for children are denied that happiness because of some functional derangement which may be corrected by proper treatment. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is just the medicine for these conditions, as the following letters show:

Chicago, Ill.—"You surely gave women one good medicine when you put Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound on the market. After I had my baby I was all run down and so nervous it kept me from gaining My doctor did everything he could to build me up, then he ordered me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound with his medicine and I am now a new woman. I have had three children and they are all Lydia E Pinkham babies I have recommended your medicine to several friends and they speak highly of it. You are certainly doing good work in this world"—Mrs ADELIE TOMSHECK, 10557 Wabash Ave, Chicago, Ill.

Churubusco, N. Y.—"I was under the doctor's care for over five years for backache and had no relief from his medicine One day a neighbor told me about your Vegetable Compound and I took it It helped me so much that I wish to advise all women to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for female troubles and backache. It is a great help in carrying a child, as I have noticed a difference when I didn't take it. I thank you for this medicine and if I ever come to this point again I do not want to be without this Vegetable Compound"—Mrs FRED MINER, Box 102, Churubusco, N. Y.

Many such letters prove the reliability of

HOOKIE STOPS NOW SAYS LITTLE GIRL WITH FLAXEN CURLS

Juvenile Officer R. L. Yates in chasing down truants from school has many interesting experiences chief among which was that of a little 13-year-old girl who made an absolute promise last week never to play hookie again.

Mr. Yates receives reports each morning from all the schools as to absentees and immediately starts checking up. This particular little girl didn't show up at school one morning and the next morning her name was again on the list of absentees.

In the afternoon the officer went to the young lady's house and found that her mother worked all day long. A short time after school was dismissed the little girl came tripping home.

The little old Ford was driven along the street and stopped right by the truant.

"Hello there Miss ——"

"Hello" was the rather shy remark as the girl with flaxen curls attempted to fathom out who it was that addressed her by name. After studying a few seconds she said "I don't believe I know you."

Mr. Yates informed her that he was the county juvenile officer. Without any further explanation the truant said "Mr. Yates if you will promise not to bother me this time I'll promise never to play hookie from school again."

NOT MUCH DOUBT BIG LAKE WILL BE ONE OF CLEAN WATER

"There is not much doubt that the big lake will be a body of clear water, and that the muddy color of other bodies in this vicinity and of the river itself, will be absent," said L. L. Hidinger of Memphis, consulting engineer for the project, Saturday.

Those in touch with the project had previously taken the same view, basing their hope on the fact that the clay and sand in the water were precipitated promptly and that the water in the small lake already created is clear. While a muddy color would not affect the usefulness of the water for irrigation purposes it has been felt that it would make the lake much less of an attraction and a beauty spot, and the prospect of clear water is causing much satisfaction.

Mr. Hidinger, whose home is in Memphis, has been here since Thursday to study the working of the dredge. He expressed himself as well pleased with the compact, impervious nature of the material that the dredge is putting into the dam.

GREENVILLE IS AFTER AN INTERURBAN LINE

DALLAS, Sept. 30.—Efforts are being made by Greenville interests to secure the construction of an interurban electric railway between that city and Dallas.

ATTRACTIVE IOWA PARK HOME

Residence of J. A. Tanner, Iowa Park

IOWA PARK, TEXAS Sept. 30.—Herewith is presented a view of the beautiful home of J. A. Tanner, a manifestation of his skill in this city and an example of his interest in the comfort of his family. He believes that Iowa Park has just started on its growth, a prospect made possible by continued oil development, the splendid concrete roads and other advantages.

Mr. Tanner moved to Iowa Park from Quanah, Texas, in 1896 and began work in the hardware establishment that he now owns and operates. Beginning as a clerk in the store, by close attention to business, consistent saving and good management, he eventually was able to purchase the business. He has not only made a success of this enterprise, but in all his undertakings in a commercial way.

Locating here he soon became imbibed with a full measure of public spiritedness and became an active worker for a greater Iowa Park. Much accomplished in a business and civic way, his chief ambition now is the education of his son. He has always taken an active interest in educational matters, is a member of the present school board, which has made Iowa Park famous as a school town.

Mr. Tanner is one of the most loyal readers of the Times to be found anywhere. He has been reading the paper since several years before it became a daily and when the daily was established he was one of the first subscribers, transferring the remainder of his paid subscription from the weekly to the daily.

TEAM OF MASONIC NOTABLES TO VISIT THIS CITY OCT. 25

October 25 has been designated as the date when the thirty-third degree team of Dallas, Texas, will confer the third degree for Wichita Falls lodge No. 675, A. F. & A. M. The team is composed entirely of 32d degree Masons, and past masters of lodges. It is very likely that Sam P. Cochran, inspector general of Texas for the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of the southern jurisdiction, will officiate as worshipful master. The full list of officers and the stations they fill will be announced at a later date.

This meeting is planned to be one of the big events of the Masonic season and all Masons from both lodges will be invited to witness the impressive and sublime ceremonies. It is not often that Masons residing in this section have the opportunity to see so many distinguished Masons in a degree team at one time.

Worshipful Master John A. Elder has extended an unusual invitation to the team, as it carried the signatures of all the past masters of Wichita Falls.

JEFFERSON TAX RATE IS $5.25 ON THE $100

JEFFERSON, Sept. 30.—The rate of taxes for this city on the $100 valuation, including state, county, city and school, will be $5.25 for 1922. This is the highest it has been in many years.

Over 1400 inventions to prevent train wrecks have been given trial without satisfactory results, in the last ten years.

FALL REUNION OF SCOTTISH RITE SET FOR NOVEMBER 21

The fall reunion of Dallas Consistory No. 2, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Dallas, Texas, will convene on November 21 and be in session until November 25. The reunion will only last four day this fall, but all the degrees will be conferred in ample form.

Secretary J. L. Stephens advises that petitions have been coming in regularly and that the usual class of five or six hundred is expected. A great many petitions have been forwarded from this section and Wichita county will again be represented with at least a hundred candidates.

It was the Scottish Rite bodies of Texas that made the girls' dormitory at the state university, Austin, Texas, possible. Half of the fee collected from candidates goes to that purpose until the building is completely paid for. Plans are now being made for the addition of a large auditorium to the Scottish Rite cathedral at Dallas.

STATE CONVENTIONS ON THE D-C-D HIGHWAY

CANADIAN, Sept. 30.—The following state conventions on the D-C-D highway were announced at the headquarters of the highway association in Canadian: Colorado state meeting, at La Junta, Oct. 5; Texas state meeting at Huntsville, Oct. 26-27, Oklahoma state meeting at Wilson, Nov. 14-15. Former Congressman Thomas H. Ball of Houston and Lieutenant Governor Lynch Davidson of Houston have been invited to attend the Huntsville meeting.

MOVIE CALENDAR FOR THE WEEK AT LOCAL THEATRES

"MILESTONES" MONDAY AT EMPRESS THEATER TOM MIX THURSDAY

Milestones which comes to the Empress Monday Tuesday and Wednesday is a masterful picturization of the phenomenal stage success by Arnold Bennett and Edward Knoblock It is one of those infrequent plays that mark an epoch in theatrical achievement. Few productions have exerted such a wide influence and gained such a firm and lasting hold on the public.

The charming story is told in three episodes showing the characters first in the year 1880, then in 1885 and finally in 1910 The picture traces the family fortunes of the Rheads and Sibleys through three generations depicting the modes and manners of the different periods with indescribable charm.

'Milestones has romance sweet as the odor of lilacs It has humor pathos, drama—and above all, it has a story that will appeal to all the people of all ages, anywhere.

"The Fighting Streak"

Tom Mix the dynamic Fox star believes in giving his large and loyal public change as well as sensation in his photoplay While each Mix picture has its distinctive tang of adventure thrills and outdoor stuff there is always a pleasant change of locale and some new angle or interesting twist to the story Even Mix himself endeavors to make each succeeding photoplay fresh and new by varying his role and character each time

In his latest production 'The Fighting Streak which comes to the Empress theatre Thursday for the remainder of the week Mix will be seen in a part such as he never has played before—that of a brawny young blacksmith in a little western town Through the medium of this character the story takes on novel color and interest and it starts Mix off on a series of adventures that provide action every minute and give the famous Fox star another photoplay that is fairly packed with thrills and entertainment

MOULIN ROUGE DANCE SCENES A MAGNIFICENT TERPSICHOREAN SHOW

Dance devotees throughout the country will find an especial delight in the big scene of Queen of the Moulin Rouge a Ray C Smallwood Pyramid picture which is the current attraction at the Strand theater Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Martha Mansfield the star of this production was one of the dancing beauties of the famous Zeigfield Follies which fact alone gave promise when it was announced that she was to play the title role but the producers did not content themselves with having a Follies star feature in the great revue but engaged the finest talent from the various spectacular girl shows on Broadway among them a septet from the colorful Cose of Siam bowl production—one of the most magnificent spectacles of the 192- season in New York

These girls are used in an especially elaborate dance which gives a high artistic tone to the production The scenes in which they appear are those representing the interior of the Moulin Rouge most notorious of the flamboyant tinseled palaces of extravagance in the nightlife district of gay Paris The background for their dance is a replica of the interior of the original Moulin Rouge (which was burned to the ground in the recent past) reproduced from photographs and personal knowledge of the report by Ben Carre French technical director of the production It is authentic

Queen of the Moulin Rouge tells the sensational story of a young girl of Normandy whose honor was bartered by an old music master to awaken genius in a youth who loved her a prize pupil whose playing was without soul because he had not been touched by the tragedies of life Martha Mansfield plays the title role Joseph Striker Henry Harmon Fred Jones Jane Thomas Tom Blake and Count Carillo appear in important roles in the production

'His Nibs" Coming

Standing alone as one of the finest screen comedies of years 'His Nibs the Exceptional Pictures feature novelty comedy which comes to the Strand theater for a run of three days on Thursday is no mere farce novelty It is true that His Nibs is vastly different than anything yet created for film laugh purposes but at the same time the element of humor has not been overlooked in the quest for something different

His Nibs establishes a record for the films in that Charles (Chic) Sale the vaudeville headliner who makes his debut as a screen star in the comedy actually plays seven roles in the one offering Sale's remarkable success in the variety theater was due to his humor and skill in painting rural characters for his vaudeville turn consisted of a whole gallery of widely different types In His Nibs Sale's skill as a protean comedian has been cleverly made use of

The action of 'His Nibs revolves around a picturesque little village motion picture theater The Slippery Elm Picture Palace and Mr Sale plays many of the odd and amusing characters of the locality ranging from the quaint old proprietor of the opery house to the village sleuth and the editor of The Weekly Bee Not merely satisfied in producing a novelty Exceptional Pictures selected an unusual all round cast to support Mr Sale including Colleen Moore featured player of Dinty and other Marshall Neilan productions Joseph Dowling famous as the Miracle Man of The Miracle Man Walt Whitman the well known character actor and former Triangle star Lydia Yeamans Titus and Harry Edwards

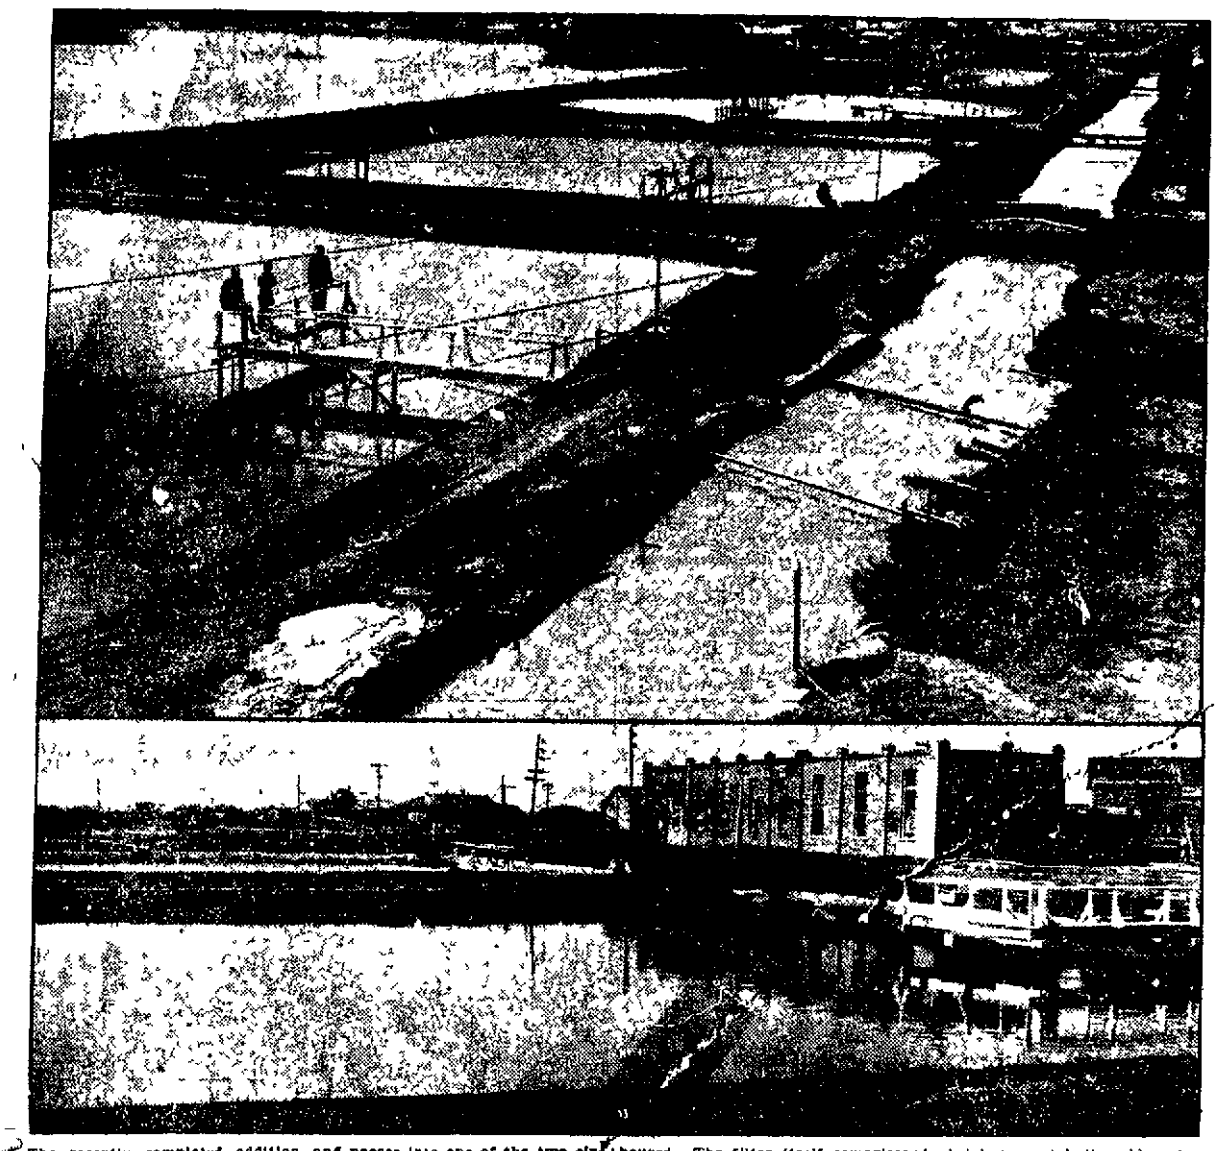
New Filter Plant Insures City Plentiful Supply of Water For All Present Needs



The recently completed addition to the filter plant at the city water works, gives a total capacity of 5,000,000 gallons each 24 hours an amount of water somewhat in excess of the city's present consumption

The upper picture shows the system by which the water is handled It enters the system from the ditch shown at the right of the picture and passes into one of the two circular settling basins shown in the background Then it passes out into the main supply lake, from which it is taken for passage trough the filter one end of the filter plant building is seen at the right of the picture After being filtered the water is stored in the square basin into which a pipe is seen discharging

The lower picture shows the building in which the plant is housed The filter itself comprises three beds of sand and gravel each bed being 17x25 feet in size furnishing 300 square feet of filtering surface The gravel is 18 inches thick and the sand 30 inches Water flows through these beds at the rate of three gallons per square foot Under test the new filter is furnished filtered water at the rate of 4,000,000 gallons per day The beds themselves are made of concrete The building is finished in brick to match the older structure

Most of the work was done by the water department's staff The plant was designed by R N Lawton and the plans and specifications were approved by Utilities Commissioner Burton Stayton S L Williams supervised the construction work The plant was installed at a cost of $20,000 and is declared to be modern in every respect and one of the finest plants in the state

IMMEDIATE STEPS WILL BE TAKEN FOR NEW HOSPITAL VOTE

PREVIOUS ELECTION IS ADMITTED TO HAVE BEEN AN ILLEGAL ONE

TO PRESENT PETITION TO COMMISSIONERS MONDAY

Will Ask That Another Election For $150,000 Bonds Be Called Promptly

Immediate steps will be taken for the calling of another $150,000 bond election for three branch county hospitals, following the admission Saturday that the first election in which the bonds were defeated, 443 to 435 was illegal

The order declaring the election illegal will be entered on the minutes of the court following an announcement made Saturday morning by County Attorney J L Fulton conceding that the election was an illegal one

The law firm of Weeks Morrow Francis and King filed a petition contesting the election last Wednesday evening in which they set forth various allegations declaring that the election was illegal and therefore void

Mr Fulton made a thorough investigation as to the methods carried out in the election and after reviewing the plaintiff's petition conceded the illegality of the vote

This action will be followed Monday morning by the presentation of a petition to the commissioners court asking that a new election date be set and that the proposition again be submitted to the property tax paying voters of the county

The bond election is for the purpose of issuing bonds for the erection of a branch county hospital in each of the towns of Iowa Park Electra and Burkburnett

RENTED QUARTERS NOW NECESSARY AT SEVERAL SCHOOLS

Crowded conditions at the Sam Houston school have made it necessary for the school board to rent a cottage near the school building to provide additional accommodations The quarters were rented in the American Society of Inventors building

This is the fourth school at which rented quarters are being used With the completion of the ward school building program however it will no longer be necessary to use such quarters

Work is progressing steadily on the two new ward schools, and on the addition to the Sam Houston school Work on the new high school still awaits final approval of the plans which are now in the hands of the chief architect W B Ittner of St Louis

EFFORT TO START STORE NEAR SCHOOL IS NOW ABANDONED

The effort to establish a grocery store near the corner of Thirteenth and Burnett streets which resulted in an injunction suit against enforcement of the new zoning ordinance has been abandoned for the present, and the stock of goods removed from the store building it was reported Saturday

Judge Napier before whom the injunction suit was tried rendered his decision Saturday holding that the ordinance could not be operative against this grocery because it was completed and doing business prior to the passage of the ordinance. The decision did not pass upon the constitutionality or validity of the ordinance

As a result of the abandonment of the store property any further effort to operate a store there comes under the provisions of the ordinance City Attorney Monroe said Saturday This means that petition would have to be submitted and a public hearing held before the store could begin business Residents of that vicinity, and members of the school board were vigorously opposed to the establishment of the store.

The first public hearing under the zoning ordinance is scheduled for Monday night at the city council meeting in another petition

CAMPAIGN OF 19 2 IS NOW FULLY LAUNCHED

PRELIMINARY SURVEY OF ISSUES CONDITIONS AND PERSONALITIES INVOLVED IN POLITICAL BATTLE

SULLIVAN

By MARK SULLIVAN.
National Political Correspondent of the New York Evening Post and Wichita Daily Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 30.—With the one exception of Rhode Island, all the party primaries and party conventions have been held; all the candidates for senator—in the 33 states in which there will be senatorial elections—have been made; and all the nominations for congress in all the states have been completed.

We are therefore fully launched on the campaign, and it is possible to make a preliminary survey of the conditions and personalities involved, the issues which will figure in the campaign and the states of public feeling, partly local and partly general, more than anything else, will determine the election.

First of all, the state of business!

For the moment, with some exceptions to be mentioned later, this is favorable to the republicans. Labor is generally employed and at rising wages. Some months ago, when the republican party managers first surveyed the situation and dug into conditions, they said among themselves that by election day there would not be an unemployed man in the country who was willing to work. A little later on, when the two strikes threatened to affect fuel and transportation in such a way as to throw industry out of joint on a large scale, these same republican managers had some fear lest this prediction of theirs might not be fulfilled. Now, however, the strikes are out of the way, and labor is as fully employed as it wants to be. In fact, large employers are finding it necessary to raise wages in order to keep their men. Just last week, indeed, some of us in Washington observed one of those fugitive but pregnant incidents—indexes of industrial conditions—which we had not formerly noticed since the war, namely, the agent of a northern corporation, passing through Washington on his way to Alabama to try to steal away some negro labor and take it north.

Different With Employer.

So far as labor is concerned, its condition is such as to make altogether unlikely that kind of unemployment and discontent which would cause it to vote against the party in power. But it is chiefly of labor alone that this is so. The employer of labor has a different story to tell. His mines, and factories, and railroads are for the past part busy; but they are busy at rising wages. Employers and heads of big corporations are not confident that they are making money, and are apprehensive about the final net results of their current operations. The dislocation caused by the interruption of fuel and transportation will show its effects on the books of corporation for many months to come. The employers and corporation heads are, in fact, rather acutely discontented with the administration. Among other ways, this has expressed itself in campaign contributions—or rather a lack of them; and in the size of the party funds for the management of the campaign. When the republican managers were soliciting contributions, they had frequent experiences of pointed refusal. At one time, a solicitor of funds for the republicans, who had gone to New York, was told that he "could not get a dollar for the republican party on Manhattan Island." Another was told that he could not get any money out of New England. Neither of these combinations of threat and prediction turned out to be wholly correct. But in general it is undoubtedly true that the class of business men who in the past have been relied on for republican campaign funds, are dissatisfied with many things the administration has done, and have shown the measure of that dissatisfaction by the smallness of their contributions, or their unwillingness to contribute at all. As an incidental result of the feeling among business men, republican campaign funds are low. The amount of money sent into Maine by the republicans this year was smaller than in any previous year that anybody can remember.

Farmer An Element.

Another element in the industrial situation is the farmer. The farmer is unhappy. He has rather more tangible reason for his unhappiness than the business man. The prices which the farmer is getting for wheat, oats, and other commodities is below what he calculates to be the cost of producing them. Whatever is the cause of this does not matter. In politics the blame is put on the party in power. In some sections of the country, notably California, the producers of certain commodities, like fruits, have been injured by the interruption of train service, that the results have been disastrous. Apart from what has been caused directly by the railroad strike, there are deep causes for the troubles of the farmers—not only deep causes, but causes that will last a considerable time. But these causes are too large a subject for discussion here. For the purpose of the present article, it is only necessary to say that the republican campaign managers are just beginning to be aware of a beginning wave of extreme discontent in the farming districts of the west and middle west. It is in these sections that the republican vote in November will show the greatest falling off. In the industrial centers of the east, the republicans will do relatively better.

The Fuel Situation.

There is one specific aspect of the industrial situation that is certain to affect the republicans adversely, in one degree or another, everywhere. A competent judge of Massachusetts politics said the other day that Senator Lodge will be safely reelected barring one possible condition. That condition would be a cold day on November 7. He said that Massachusetts is apprehensive about its coal supply and if November 7 should be a frigid day, a voter with a cold furnace and an empty coal cellar would express his reaction to the combination of weather and coal scarcity by voting against the republicans. What is true of Massachusetts is true of the country generally. Just how severely the scarcity of coal will be felt on November 7 is a matter of dispute. Those who have charge of the distribution of coal say it is now wholly a case of transportation, that if the railroads can stand up to the increased burden no severe shortage or apprehension about shortage will exist on election day.

Harding's Personality.

Next to these various aspects of the industrial situation the most important factor bearing on the coming election will be the state of feeling about President Harding. Considerable numbers of voters will want to express their approval or their disapproval of the head of the party in power. There would be more of this kind of voting if the democrats had some personality to contrast with Harding. But the democrats have no such leader, no one man of outstanding personality who is accepted as the responsible leader of the democratic party. By virtue of lack among the democrats the republicans will get a good many votes on November 7 that they would otherwise lose. Nevertheless, even so, a good deal of the voting will be determined by popular feeling about the president.

During all last winter and during those of the state primaries which came in the spring up to as late as the first of June it was the universal observation of the present writer, as well as of all others who followed these primaries closely, that the public generally made a distinction between, on the one hand, President Harding, his cabinet and his administration, and on the other hand, congress. At that time it was generally said and it was undoubtedly true, that there was a state of public feeling which expressed itself by saying, as it was frequently summarized colloquially, "The president is all right, but congress and the senate are pretty unsatisfactory."

Change In Sentiment.

During June and July this state of public feeling began to change and by the time August and early September had come, it was convincingly evident that Harding had fallen off in popular favor. One of the republican spellbinders who went into Maine to whoop up republican sentiment in that election on September 11, said that in three different places where he spoke, the local republican committeeman suggested to him that it might be better not to lay emphasis on the president and his record in connection with the strikes, on the theory that this was a handicap rather than an advantage to the republicans.

It is commonly said that this decline in popular approval of the president began about the time of the strikes, and was caused by what the president did—or failed to do—about them. I suspect a more accurate examination would show that the first jolt to the popular esteem of the president occurred before the strikes began, and was occasioned by the sensational disclosure of the selling of liquor on the ships operated by the government. Harding may not have even known that this was being done, but his failure to stop it promptly as soon as it was exposed, caused widespread criticism.

In any event, so far as the decline in Harding's popularity was caused by his management of the strikes it was restored by his veto of the soldiers' bonus. The same class of persons who were critical during the strike were appeased by the veto of the bonus. As soon as this veto was made public, it was instantly reported back to Washington through messages from party leaders, through newspaper editorials and through other avenues that public feeling about the president had begun to change overnight. It was said that whereas Harding had been charged with vacillation and weakness for his course in relation to the strikes, his veto of the bonus bill had restored an impression of firmness and strength.

More Specific Issues.

There remain a number of specific issues. But it is the unprecedented anomaly of this year's politics that of all the issues current, there is only one, namely, the tariff, on which the parties are lined up squarely on opposite sides. On the soldiers' bonus had a republican president opposed to it, while it was advocated as supported by the republican leader of the house, the republican leader of the senate and a republican majority in each chamber. Also, in each chamber, the democrats supported the bonus as generally as the republicans did. So far therefore, as the soldiers' bonus figures in the campaign, it will be wholly an issue attaching locally to individual senators and congressmen. In the same way the "wet" and "dry" issue will be, not one between the parties, but one between individuals. For example, in Minnesota, the democratic candidate for the senate is "dry," while in New Jersey he is "wet." In Maryland, the republican candidate for the senate is "wet," while in Ohio he is "dry." And it is the same with practically every other issue of the campaign except the tariff.

MOTHER!

Move Child's Bowels with "California Fig Syrup"

Hurry mother! Even a sick child loves the "fruity" taste of "California Fig Syrup" and it never fails to open the bowels. A teaspoonful today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic, or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good cleansing of the little bowels is often all that is necessary.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.

Consult DR. SCHULTZ
The Reliable Specialist

For scientific treatment of chronic, nervous and special diseases of both sexes, catarrh of all mucus membrane, stomach, liver, kidney complaints, blood and skin diseases. Hemroids and prostatic complications treated without the knife, by a safe and humane system of scientific office treatment.

If you are sick of experimenting, sick of failures, sick of being sick, come to me. I invite sick people who contemplate taking treatment to come. Special attention given in the combination of curative powers, modern electricity, vibrations, etc., with the scientific administration of selected Specific Medicines, I endeavor to do everything to promote the welfare of my patients.

IF YOU NEED A SPECIALIST—WHY NOT THE BEST

Are you a nervous wreck? Are you worn out and broken down. Are you suffering from vicious Blood and Skin diseases, that destroy bone tissue, and disfigure for life? Backaches, and kidneys give you allgone feeling? Whether these conditions were caused by early excesses, or contracted by inoculation, it does not matter, for they will all respond to my treatment. Consult Dr Scultz, the Reliable Specialist, who is well equipped by long experience, that enable him to offer his services on a basis that no other can; his charges are lower fo. cures than the average physician generally charges for failures.

Those who have wasted time and money, and failed to get rid of their ailments, are especially invited to consult FREE. I am giving the benefit of over 35 years honorable experience; some of my cures are truly wonderful, yet I do not work magic; I do not make the old younger, nor the blind see; I simply apply the knowledge of my years of honorable experience have given me, and I do this honestly and intelligently.

S. S. S. Fills Out Hollow Cheeks, Thin Limbs!

Men and women,—whether you will ever build yourself up to your normal, just-right weight depends on the number of blood-cells in your blood. That's all there is to it. It's a scientific fact. If your blood-cell factory isn't working right, you will be run-down, thin, your blood will be in disorder, and perhaps your face will be broken out with pimples, blackheads and eruptions. S. S. S. keeps your blood-cell factory working full time. It helps build new blood-cells. That's why S. S. S. builds up thin, run-down people, it puts firm flesh on your bones, it rounds out your face, arms, neck, limbs, the whole body. It puts the "pink" in your cheeks. It takes the hollowness from the eyes, and it fools Father Time by smoothing out wrinkles in men and women by "plumping" them up. S. S. S. is a remarkable blood-purifier. While you are getting plump, your skin eruptions, pimples, blackheads, acne, rheumatism, rash, tetter, blotches are being removed. The medicinal ingredients of S. S. S. are guaranteed purely vegetable. S. S. S. is sold at all drug stores, in two sizes. The larger size is the more economical.

OAKLAND CLOSED CARS RADICALLY NEW IN DESIGN

The new Oakland 1923 closed cars—the five passenger coupe and sedan—just announced by the Oakland Motor Car company—are radically new in body design These new closed bodies are now being built by the Fisher Body corporation

A lower body belt line and slightly lowered roof are mainly responsible for giving these new models a pure stream line effect, an appearance of greater length, power and distinction Interior appointments and fittings are likewise new to conform with the new exterior design

The appearance of sweeping grace has been accentuated by the full crown fenders—a feature of the new 1923 series—which are heavy and wide and extend in long arc over the wheels. The windows of these closed models are deeper and wider and afford the utmost visibility for all occupants of the cars All pillars are metal covered

Metal visor covered with waterproof fabric and adjustable rear view mirror and double windshield wiper curtains for rear and rear quarter windows, door windows regulated by crank control; dome light and snubbers are some of the principal standard equipment features.

The new refinements include cross bar type door handles: pull to handles on the doors: lock with two keys on the right door and inside lock on the others

The interior trimming on cushions and seat backs is plush mohair velour Wall and head lining are of gray plush mohair velour The carpet is to match

The five passenger coupe takes the place of the former four passenger coupe It is built on the same chassis as the sedan. A platform is provided in the rear for carrying a trunk The body back is protected by trunk bars

The new Oakland 5-passenger coupe and sedan are priced at $1445 and $1545 respectively. The 2-passenger coupe sells for $1185 All prices are f o b. factory

TEXAS IN DANGER OF LOSING AID FROM GOVERNMENT

Texas stands in grave danger of having the director of the bureau of public roads withhold his approval of any more federal aid projects on account of the failure of any one county in the state to maintain its portion of a state highway on which federal funds have been expended The state has no fund that can be used for maintaining the state highways and the result of the failure of any county to comply with the terms of its contract with the state would be that the state and counties that have planned and actually financed a program of road construction, would be penalized on account of the delinquency of that one county We have millions of dollars now apportioned to Texas already allotted to counties but not under project agreements with the federal government, that the people of Texas cannot afford to lose

"Another most forceful and cogent reason in my opinion" says Chairman Hubbard "why the legislature should without any unnecessary delay provide an adequate state fund for both construction and maintenance of state highways, lies in the fact that until these funds are provided we will make very little headway in the construction of a connected state system The people of Texas certainly desire such a system and every day the demand grows greater and greater We really have been and are still building county not state roads that only constitute a part of the state system and until they are connected they cannot rightfully be termed a state road Our system will be changed eventually of necessity so it occurs to me that the only practical and business like thing for the legislature to do is to take a comprehensive view of the existing situation and make the change at the earliest moment possible"

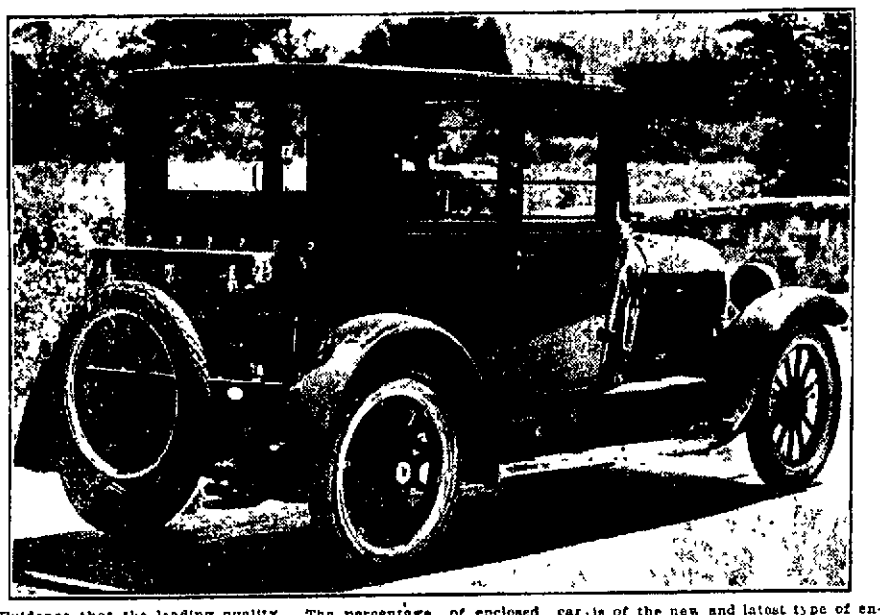
THE NEW JORDAN BROUGHAM



Evidence that the leading quality car manufacturers recognize the insatiable demand for enclosed cars is indicated in the announcement by the Jordan Motor Car company of new and startling reductions in this enclosed models

This is also evidence that the quality car manufacturers have at last attained a volume of production sufficient to warrant a marked change in prices.

Since the majority of motor car owners throughout the country have now reached the conclusion that they must have enclosed models, provided they can secure them at prices within their reach, manufacturers have succeeded in sufficiently increasing the output to satisfy this demand

The percentage of enclosed car production against the total output of motor cars for the first eight months of the year is about thirty per cent

It is estimated by those who should know, that the percentage of enclosed car production to total output before the end of this year will be more than fifty per cent.

Jordan enclosed car output is now over sixty per cent of their total This has enabled the Jordan Company to attain a price level on cars of Jordan quality which will attract the attention of everybody in the industry

Two models are included in the price reduction, the sedan which is a five passenger car of the four-door type, and the brougham, which is of the new and latest type of enclosed job

The brougham has two very wide doors and a seating capacity for five people The brougham is the type which Jordan has been producing for six years, and will appear in the lines of the majority of the leading manufacturers at the New York show.

Of course it is known that the cheaper lines of cars by all manufacturers will include cars of this type, but it is the aim of Jordan to be first among the higher priced car manufacturers to make popular prices on enclosed models

This latest addition to the Jordan line will be on display at the Arthur Huff Motor Co soon.

NEW PRICES IN EFFECT LOCALLY ON OVERLANDS

A drastic cut in prices of Willys-Knight and Overland automobiles effective Sept 18, was announced by John N Willys, president of the Willys-Overland company, on Saturday, Sept. 16.

The reduction in the selling price of the Willys-Knight brings that car's price to the lowest level at which any car equipped with a Knight motor ever was sold

Under the new list prices the Willys-Knight 5 passenger touring car, which, during the spring of this year sold at $1 525 and more recently at $1 375, is now to be had at $1 235

The Willys-Knight 5-passenger sedan is reduced in price $146 from its former price of $2 095, making its present cost, under the new list prices $1,950 The Willys-Knight roadster formerly $1,356, is cut to $1,235, and the Willys-Knight coupe from $1,875 to $1,795

The Overland car is reduced to $525 for the touring model and the roadster to the same amount from their former price of $550 The coupe is dropped from $850 to $795 and the sedan from $985 to $875

WILLYS-OVERLAND SHOWS EMPLOYMENT INCREASE

Comparing the increase and decrease of employment of twelve of the leading industries of the country the bureau of labor statistics in a recent report shows that eight showed increases and four decreases in June as compared with June of a year ago

The automotive industry shows an increase of 21 2 per cent in June 1922, as compared with June, 1921. By way of comparison Willys-Overland shows an increase of 34 per cent in June, 1922, as compared with June a year ago

NEW PRINCIPLE INTRODUCED IN FRANKLIN SPRINGS

The introduction of the stabilator as equipment on the Series 10 Franklin, brought out by the Franklin Automobile company on September 1 has given rise to comment to the effect that Franklin was now using shock absorbers although the car had been built and merchandised for over 20 years without the introduction of any such device

Chief Engineer Louis Stellmann of the Franklin Automobile company calls attention to the fact that the stabilator as used on the Franklin Series 10, is totally different in principle and action from the so-called shock absorbers, snubbers and devices of the sort and should not be confused with them

The stabilator, according to Mr. Stellmann introduces an entirely new development in the automobile construction field Its purpose is not to absorb shocks This duty, on the Franklin car, is taken care of by the principles upon which the car is constructed the leading feature perhaps being the soft acting full-elliptic springs with which the car is equipped

The purpose of the stabilator is to act as a recoil brake in checking the uptravel or bound-back of these full-elliptic springs after they have absorbed or dissipated the shock resulting from road blows. The degree of checking force which the stabilator exerts against the recoil of the spring is directly in proportion to the force of the blow from the road. The harder the springs are hit, the more tightly the stabilator checks the first impulse to rebound It then relaxes gradually and with increasing speed which has the effect of making the upward travel of the spring correspond with the downward action and practically eliminates bouncing and throw

Ability to drive rapidly over rough roads is limited only by the capacity of the springs to absorb the shock when the stabilator is used in connection with a supple spring The more supple the spring the greater the ease of riding under these conditions. On the other hand, unless the car is equipped with supple springs such as the full elliptics which Franklin uses, the stabilator affords but little improvement in riding qualities.

Never clamp the valve head in the vise jaws without interposing some soft substance between it and the jaws as the valve can easily be damaged when in direct contact with the hard jaws of the vise

Keep the car looking new by revarnishing it about every six months

ONE CAMP SITE AFTER ANOTHER IN 1923 OUTLOOK

The outlook now is that by the spring of 1923 those good old United States will be almost one camp site after another and in every direction The camp site idea started in the west but other sections of the country were quick to take it up. Reports are many of plans in the making for the establishment of such sites all along the main traveled roads

Municipalities have taken the plan seriously and motor clubs are assisting At first the sites were not much to brag of, but they are now being improved from every standpoint The result is they are sanitary clean and comfortable. City light and water, and a real system for the assignment of visitors to parking spaces have helped materially

There is a picturesqueness about the camp site also which makes an appeal The suggestion of a strain of gypsy blood in the veins of most Americans is carried out in the avidity with which camping-out opportunities have been seized upon where they were the least bit inviting

THE MOTORISTS' PROBLEMS'

By WILLIAM H. STEWART, JR.

Motor Department: My oil gauge used to float freely in the oil, so that when I used to push it down it rose immediately. Now, when I push it down it stays there. What should I do to correct this?—S. N.

The oil is becoming foul and should be replaced. Clean out case to remove dirt and sediment. You may find it advisable to install a new float.

Motor Department: A cotter pin in the clutch finger on my Ford broke and lodged in the magneto. It has stopped motor once by becoming lodged against the magneto point, but I did not have the necessary tools with me to reach it. Will it cause trouble at any place except magneto point? I removed transmission cover, but was unable to find it.—C. N.

It might get into the oil pipe and clog that. The chance is very remote, however. Remove drain plug at bottom of oil pump and run engine a few minutes and the pin will probably drop out.

Motor Department: In refilling my storage battery I accidentally filled it with very dirty water. Kindly let me know what I should do with it? Will it affect the battery in any way or not? Thanking you in advance, I am, C. S.

The sediment which will collect at the bottom of the jars may reach the plates and cause a possible short circuit between the plates. The battery should be taken to a battery service station for their attention, as it will require a thorough cleaning.

Motor Department: Kindly explain the use of the word "cycle" as applied to an automobile and how to figure it out in any particular case.—S. W.

As usually understood a cycle is a series of events which take place in regular order and may be repeated. In the automobile engine the cycle consists of the following events or strokes: Suction, compression, power and exhaust. All automobile engines are called four cycle engines meaning that they complete the cycle in the four strokes mentioned.

Motor Department: Wich type of clutch do you consider better, the cone or the multiple disk? I mean which gives best results and which is best on rear tires?—OWNER.

The best clutch is the one that gives smoothest action, as this gives less strain to all the mechanism, including the rear tires. A gripping clutch has a tendency to spin the rear wheels and to wear the tread. The multiple disk clutch has less tendency to grip, but a cone clutch properly cared for will give every satisfaction.

Motor Department: The other day I noticed a bad squeak under the car, and upon investigation I found that the front universal joint was very hot. After packing same with grease the noise disappeared. How often do you think it necessary to grease joint to avoid having this trouble?—J. W.

Universal joints should be packed with grease about every 1,000 miles. The modern universal joint does not need greasing as often as the old fashioned type, such as was used in cars three or four years ago. Plenty of lubricant will do no harm.

Motor Department: My car, nearly new, responded to the wheel easily until this morning, when it suddenly refused to turn in either direction an inch. It was frozen in the collar, below the steering wheel, and after much work it was made to turn, but much too stiff. Can you advise me as to the cause and a possible remedy against getting in like fix again, for it would be a source of some danger. Thanking you in advance.—READER.

The steering gear needs careful attention at frequent intervals. It must be kept well lubricated. The bushing in question seized, due to the lack of proper lubrication. This is very apt to happen with any bearing where there is any amount of friction. Under the circumstances it would be advisable to remove the bushing or bearing and refit it. You may be able to ease it up by applying oil freely and working it considerably. If it is worked free and kept lubricated, there will be no danger of its seizing again. It might be well to install an oil cup at this point.

Motor Department: Having purchased a second hand machine and being inexperienced in the driving rules, etc., I wish to know if there is not a book on these principles, and where it may be obtained. I experienced trouble of engine missing when running slowly in high gear, but when switched to intermediate, or slow, engine works O. K. Do you think there might be trouble in the magneto being weak, and causing same to generate too slowly in high gear? I also think the engine runs too fast when in neutral, but do not know how to correct it.—READER.

Any large book store in your neighborhood can supply you with automobile books. There are a large number of good ones on the market. If engine runs well on battery and misses explosions on the magneto it indicates weak magnets. These may be remagnetized at a magneto service station. If engine runs too fast when idling, retard the spark. If it still runs too fast, adjust the throttle by the adjustment screws on the carburetor so that the engine runs very slowly but does not stall when the throttle lever on the steering wheel is in the closed position.

Motor Department: Please advise me as to what is the narrowest space or driveway through which a medium sized touring car can be conveniently driven, say a car measuring five feet six inches across fenders. I have an areaway just seven feet wide. Do you think this would be sufficient?—P. C.

Your driveway should be quite wide enough if you exercise reasonable care. Watch the fenders carefully on the driver's side, running as close as necessary without touching. This will give you more than a foot clearance on the other side. It will be a little difficult to back out at first, but it can be accomplished easily after a few trials.

Motor Department: Occasionally I hear a popping noise at my carburetor. Is it dangerous? Please give cause.—V. B.

Popping back or back firing at carburetor is not usually dangerous if carburetor has just been primed or there is much of a leak. It is caused by lean mixture, leaky inlet valve, or electrical troubles at times in distributor which cause an explosion in cylinder when inlet valve is open. Look over these parts carefully as occasionally a car burns and is totally wrecked from just this cause.

HELPFUL HINTS

Do not condemn the spark plug unless it is at fault. To determine this first find out which cylinder is missing explosions. Short circuit the engine slows down it is a live plug. If it does not, the cylinder is not firing.

Disconnect the wire from the plug and run engine. If a good spark jumps, the trouble is in the plug or in the cylinder. If no spark jumps the trouble is in some other part of the ignition system.

If a good spark is shown remove plug and lay on its side on cylinder attached to the same wire. If plug shows no spark it needs cleaning or a new insulator. To determine this take it apart.

Clean off carbon with a cloth dipped in gasoline or a brush may be used. Touch up the points of plug with emery cloth, but do not touch emery to glazed porcelain as it scratches and makes it soot up all the more readily. A cracked core must be replaced.

Put the parts together and adjust the gap to approximately .25 inch. Try in cylinder. If engine misfires the trouble may be loss of compression or faulty carburetion. Do not be in a hurry to condemn a plug because the fault is frequently elsewhere.

Canada has one car to about every 18 people.

INVENTION SAID TO AVERT GAS PERIL

By NEA Service

WILMINGTON, DEL., Sept. 30.—Peril of carbon-monoxide as poisoning from the exhausts of automobiles will be eliminated with use of a machine invented by Guy B. Taylor, chemist of the duPont company, and H. S. Taylor, associate professor of chemistry at Princeton University.

A statement of this invention has been made by the American chemical society. The machine is designed for the detection of deadly gases. It is applicable especially to automobile exhausts.

Carbon-monoxide gas has been the cause of death to many a motorist. Working on the engine, with garage shut against fresh air, the motorist would be quickly overcome by the fumes. The gas is especially dangerous in that it cannot be detected by the senses.

The new machine, it is said, not only detects the gas, but records it continuously while there is the faintest sign of it in the air.

At least 2,000,000 automobiles have been scrapped in the last 25 years.

Los Angeles county, California, has almost as many automobiles as the whole of France.

Twenty-three electric railways are using buses as feeders.

JORDAN

Smashes Prices on Quality Closed Cars

(Effective Today)

Now you can buy the fascinating Jordan enclosed models at the same price as other open cars in the Jordan class.

It is easy enough to reduce prices if you cut the quality as well.

Cheap car builders have attempted that in the quantity field.

It is something vastly different to improve quality and reduce prices at the same time. But that is exactly what Jordan has done.

Open Car a Luxury

Jordan knew that the open car was becoming more and more of a luxury—because it could be used with satisfaction for only a part of the year.

The enclosed car is now a necessity—because it affords comfort and satisfaction all the year around.

Five years ago Jordan predicted the present tremendous output of cheap closed cars—adding that he would never build one in that class.

Jordan knew that women would not long endure lack of ventilation-control and good vision.

Enclosed body production was at that time limited.

Eventually a Jordan

And the mass of cheaper car owners had not been educated to the use of closed cars.

Then something happened.

Quantity producers began to build enclosed cars in volume. The public bought in volume.

The process of education began.

Today nearly everyone wants an enclosed car.

Some will be satisfied temporarily with the cheaper kind.

Some may continue to use the old fashioned high priced and bulky type.

But those admirable people who prefer less bulk with equal quality, ease of handling, real gas and tire mileage, rare beauty—in short economy with distinction—will choose the Jordan.

How Jordan Does It

Jordan closed car prices are astounding—of course—when you consider Jordan quality.

But it's just as easy to attain volume on a quality car as on a cheap one.

And volume makes low overhead—low overhead makes price.

That's the story.

A Shortage—of Course

We cannot hope to deliver the new enclosed models at the new prices as fast as they can be sold.

There will be some irritating delays—no doubt.

That is the little payment we must make for success and satisfaction.

But just do this—

Go into any Jordan salesroom. Compare the Jordan enclosed models with only the finest closed cars built.

Then ask the price.

AUTO SALESMAN AND A FORMER OIL INVESTOR LOST ALL IN WILDCAT

An automobile salesman of the Overland Motor company of this city has written a letter to Mr Overland in which he told of his great financial loss while speculating in oil The letter follows

Dear Mr Overland Sure is funny how I got my job selling Overlands You see I always was a great feller to take a chance so I up and shot all o' them seventeen dollars I had last in on a wildcat out in Archer county an I we got duster Well you couldn't hardly say we got a duster but we run out of money and had to stop before we got to the oil That being the case I could either go to work or starve so starvin being such a slow death I decided it would be easier to go to work and die hard but I says to myself there ain't no use of you ruinin your reputation by workin hard so lets find something easy and so I decided to sell Overlands

'Well I went up to the Overland place and after walkin by four or five times an' lookin in I saw a empty chair and I walked in and plunked down in it Well after I had set there about a hour a feller came around and so I his name was Roseberry and wanted to know could he do anything for me or was I waiting for someone I said I noticed he had a lot of cars settin around there and didn't he want to get a feller to sell them for him He said he was always lookin for a good man and I says I'm your huckleberry Well he asked me a lot of unsignificant questions Wanted to know did I ever have any experience and I told him yes I had sold soda pop then he wanted to know did I know the difference between a salesman and a order taker and I says yes a order taker is a feller that peddles Overlands and Fords but a salesman has some thing to sell

'Then he wanted to know did I ever drink anything and I says yes anything Then he wanted to know could I drive a automobile and I told him I could He says we don't allow any speedin and wanted to know was I ever pinched for going fast and I says no but I been stopped and besides I says I don't think your cars will go fast because they all seem to be tired He didn't even laugh but he ain't got no humor nohow Well after a few more impertinent questions he said he guessed I would do anyhow as about all that was necessary was to let the people see the car and they would buy them so he took me in and introduced me to Mr Ebner the big boss and after a few minutes of talk he called Mr Roseberry aside and I heard him say, sure is a simple lookin' feller, such an open countenance, you can see right through him nothin to stop you keep your eye on him Well the minute I heard him say keep your eye on him I sees right away what he thinks I am a good man

"Well I unbuttoned another button and we went back into the shop and he introduced me to Dad Proctor who is king of the service gang and Dad began to give me some of that stuff which you ain't supposed to find around a garage and then he asked me if I knowed anything about a Overland and I said sure I know which is the front and which is the back because I got bumped in the back by the front of an Overland and I know it was the front because it wasn't the back

'Well then he wanted to know did I know where the gimlin lin was located on a car and I says yes the gimlin lin is that which fastens the undeveloped horsepower to the wheel base So Dad said we guessed I was right only he would of put it different Well I overheard him tell Mr Roseberry that I was harmless meanin' I guess that I understood a car pretty well and wouldn't do no damage to them so I went to work settin' around the office waitin for some feller to come in and buy a car which wouldn't be so bad if the chairs didn't have such hard bottoms and I would suggest that they buy some cushions but they are all the time talkin about cuttin down the overhead but I can't just figure out whether chair cushions would be overhead or not What do you think about it?

"Well since I been workin several fellers have come in and bought Overlands and some of them I have tried to discourage knowin that they might need the money to go to shows on etc but they would buy them so there ain't no dark stain on my conshunce They don't listen to me so I have decided to steel my heart against them and let them go the limit so if you want to you can just ship down them Overlands as fast as you get them made and I will pass them out for you

'And so, I thank you

MORE GASOLINE BOOTLEGGERS ARE EXPOSED IN OHIO

Exposures of short measure gasoline continue to be made throughout the country In twenty four test purchases made under the auspices of the Columbus Ohio Automobile club assisted by representatives of the office of City Sealer F M Shields the investigating committee found that short measure was received in connection with nineteen of the purchases made

In some instances the shortage amounted to as much as one quart The purchase made in each instance was in five gallon lots The dummy tank method was used to get evidence and as a result affidavits were filed in the police court by City Sealer Shields against the attendants or owners of seven stations or garages

The Columbus Ohio Automobile club is affiliated with the A M A which is cooperating in the effort being made throughout the country to see that all motorists get full measure when purchasing gasoline A Columbus newspaper estimates based on the investigation made there that short measure sales are costing Columbus and Franklin county motorists $836 a day

KNOWLEDGE FOR CAR OWNERS

Interesting and Important Facts That Every Motorist Should Know.

To test for inlet valve leak place a hose over the carburetor air intake Then with throttle wide open crank the engine by hand

The best way to keep a car looking new is to have it varnished every six months

Burns caused by working around a hot engine will be relieved instantly by the application of engine oil or grease

It is essential that terminals be kept tight as when they are loose they are a source of very considerable loss of efficiency

If ignition takes place before the piston reaches the top and dead center the compression will not have reached its maximum at the time of firing

A good use for old tubes is to place a piece between the casing and the patch of a repaired tube This will remove possibility of friction between them

When pouring babbit into a bearing good results can only be obtained if the babbit is of the proper temperature

When the spring leaves become rusted with mud or other foreign matter release the clips and insert graphite between the leaves before replacing

It is a good practice in slippery weather to apply the brakes without releasing the clutch until the momentum of the car is reduced considerably

In cleaning the top of rubberized material the best plan is to wash with castile soap and warm water using a soft sponge for applying the water

Leaks past the piston rings may sometimes be detected by placing a length of hose in the breather pipe and having someone crank the engine by hand so that each piston in turn is stopped on the compression stroke

When headlights are out of focus it is not always due to the brackets being bent The trouble may be due to the reflectors being loose or if tight the padding may have worked out of place on one side causing the reflectors to tilt

To overcome the sudden jolts and to take up the severances of tugging when towing cars a shock absorber can be made from a piece of heavy spiral spring and a short length of pipe

When grinding valves it is often difficult to put the valve spring back in place and put in the valve spring retainer and its lock One way of obviating this trouble is to use the two clamps One set must be made for each make of car but since they consist only of flat pieces of iron bent at right angles at each end there is small objection to this When the valve spring is removed it is compressed in a vice and the two clips are placed on the spring Then the pressure of the vise is removed and the spring is still held in compression by the clamps It is now a very simple matter to replace the valve spring

Not all dented fenders have to be taken to the machine shop to be worked upon by a press Slight indentations caused by running into obstacles can be successfully smoothed or rounded out by molding a thin piece of lead say one fourth of an inch thick by about eight inches in diameter This lead can be easily bent to fit the original contour of the damaged body and by applying this (with a piece of lamb skin laid over it to prevent scratching) on the outside of the damage and hammering the inside out to meet the form the repair can be made so inconspicuous that one not knowing of the blemish could not detect it

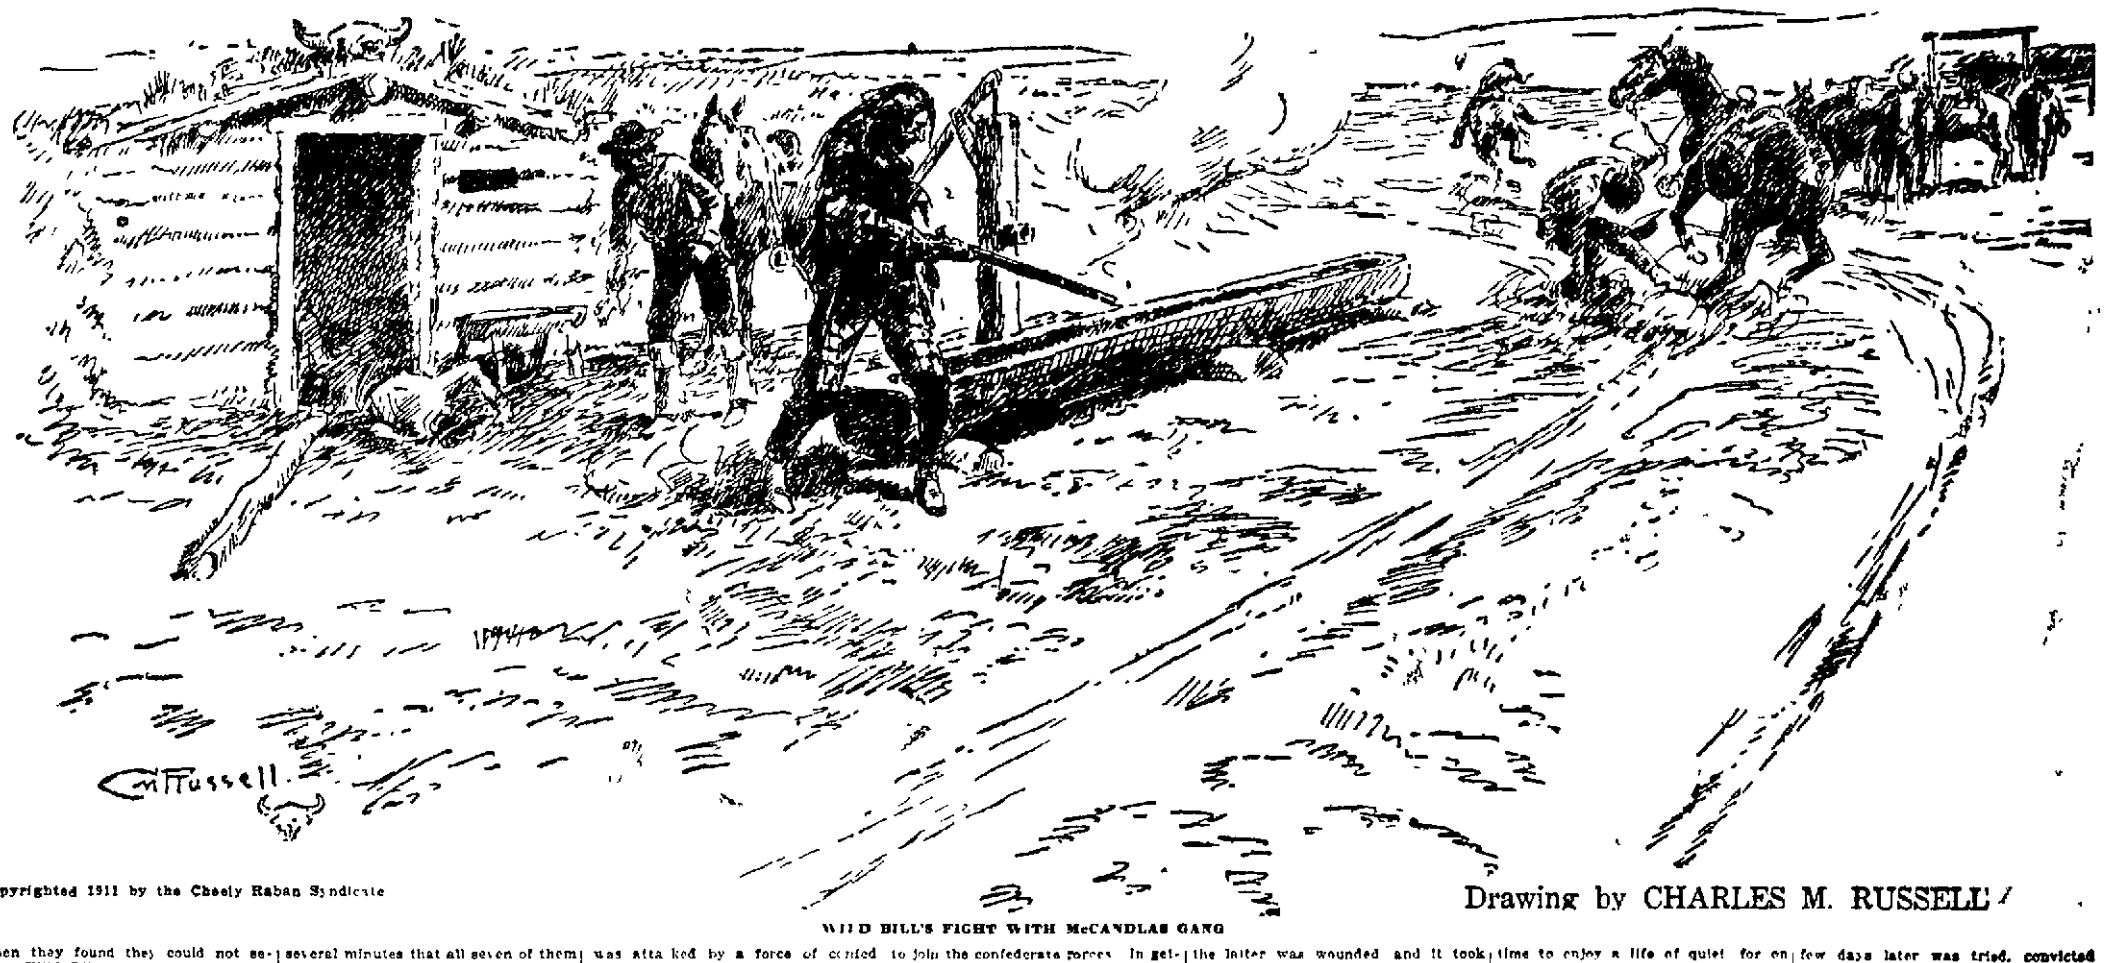
"Wild Bill" Hickok, Greatest Gunman West Ever Knew, Helped Bring Law and Order to Border Towns of the West Where Bad Men of the Seventies Held Sway.



Copyrighted 1911 by the Cheely Raban Syndicate

Drawing by CHARLES M. RUSSELL

WILD BILL'S FIGHT WITH McCANDLAS GANG

The fact that the great western plains country of America saw its first settlements of white men spring into existence during the years following the civil war had not a little to do with the long period of border lawlessness that forms one of the picturesque chapters of the western frontiers Men who had fought in the union and confederate armies and who had developed a lust for killing naturally turned westward to the new camps where law and order had not penetrated For a time in each new community there were 'bad men' who robbed and killed almost at will until the better class of frontiersmen wearying of the reign of terror tardily took steps to make the district a safe one in which to live and travel. In some of the bigger mining camps the task of punishing criminals was undertaken by vigilance committees, consisting in some instances, of several hundred men But for some reason the dangerous work of putting down lawlessness in the cow towns on the northern end of the Texas trail and at the various temporary termini of the railroads pushing westward was more often done by a border town marshal with a reputation for being first on the draw Wichita, Fort Dodge, Ellsworth, Hays City and similar towns in Kansas and other western states had peace officers who were noted for their fearlessness and for the notches on their guns By far the most notable of these was James Butler Hickok, better known as Wild Bill" Hickok and still more familiarly in the west as 'Wild Bill'

'Wild Bill was killed at Deadwood S D August 2 1876 at the age of 39 years He was credited with having killed 35 men in fair and open combat according to the frontiersman's lights, most of his victims having been shot down in the line of his duty as marshal of one or other of the border towns Besides these he had killed countless others while serving as a sharpshooter in the union army and scores of Indians in fights with hostile tribesmen Never was he accused of killing a man excepting while performing his duty as a peace officer or in self-defense No charge of murder or manslaughter ever was brought against him in court Chivalric daring and generous he was the beau ideal of the western 'bad man,' but his badness' was directed only against the evil doers and with him the term is a misnomer

Hickok has been accorded an honorable place among the men of the frontier and in western American history. He was held in high esteem among army officers of the west who knew him being a noted scout and never regarded in any sense as a tough General Custer shortly before his death in battle said of Wild Bill

He was a plainsman in every sense of the word yet unlike any other of his class Whether on foot or on horseback he was one of the most perfect types of physical manhood I ever saw His manner was entirely free from bluster or bravado He never spoke of himself unless requested to do so His influence among frontiersmen was unbounded his word was law Wild Bill was anything but a quarrelsome man yet none but himself could enumerate the many conflicts in which he had been engaged

This tribute from one fighter to another was sincerely given out of respect born of long personal acquaintance and it sums up the opinion generally held concerning Wild Bill by those who knew him best

Hickok was born in La Salle county Illinois in May 183 and from his earliest years he heard of Kit Carson Fremont Bridger and other famous frontiersmen These tales turned his thoughts toward a life of adventure and while at 1 in his teens he enlisted in 185 under Jim Lane in the guerilla warfare of Kansas preceding the civil war which sprang from the free soil dispute He soon gained a reputation for fearlessness and coolness in any crisis and in a country where bitter factional feeling ran high and life was held cheaply he was elected constable at the age of 19 He is described then as a tall gangling youth six feet in height with yellow hair and blue eyes Later he grew into a man who answered the description of Custer muscular agile and graceful—the embodiment of physical power His features were regular clean cut and expressive His bearing was erect and dignified His voice was always low and even and while the most dangerous man in an encounter who ever trod in shoe leather his temper was even and in no circumstances was he quarrelsome He was a master of the six shooter and the rifle His aim was so sure and he was so quick on the draw that a shot invariably meant death to his opponent He killed more men in single combat than any other man known to American history

In Kansas in his earlier years Hickok was known for some reason not recorded as Shanghai Bill and the name clung to him for many years In 185 he was a stage driver on the Overland during which service he gained renown as an Indian fighter That year he was placed in charge of the horse band at Rock Creek station in the midst of a territory infested with gangs of horse thieves There was not a more dangerous region in America in those days and there took place the greatest fight in Wild Bill's history Emerson Hough the western historian declares this to have been the greatest fight of one man against odds at close range that is mentioned in any history in any part of the world

The story of this fight that is considered the most authentic is told by Hough as follows

The bord riand of Kansas was at this time as may be remembered ground debated by the anti slavery and pro slavery factions who still waged bitter war against one another killing burning and pillaging without mercy The civil war was then raging and confederates from Missouri were frequent visitors in eastern Kansas under one pretext or another of which horse stealing was the most common it being held legitimate to prey upon the enemy as opportunity offered Two border outlaws by the name of the McCandlas had a gang of hard men in enterprises of this nature and these intended to run off the stage company's horses when they found they could not seduce Wild Bill to join their number He told them to come and take the horses if they could and on the afternoon of December 18 1861 ten of them led by the McCandlas Brothers rode up to his dugout to do so Bill was alone his tableman being away hunting He retreated to the dark interior of his dugout and got ready his weapons, a rifle two six-shooters and a knife

The assailants proceeded to batter in the door with a log and as it fell Jim McCandlas who must have been a brave man to undertake so foolhardy a thing against a man already known as a killer sprang in the opening He, of course was killed at once This exhausted the rifle and Bill picked up the six shooters from the table and in three quick shots killed three more of the gang as they rushed in the door Four men were dead in less than than many seconds, but there were still six others left all inside the dugout low and all firing at him at a range of three feet. It was almost a miracle that under such circumstances, the man was not killed Bill now was crowded too much to use firearms and took to the bowie thrusting at one man and another as best he might

In this chance melley the knife wounds inflicted by Bill and his swarming foes did not at first drop their men so that it must have been several minutes that all seven of them were mixed in a mass of slooting panting and gasping humanity Then Jack McCandlas swung his rifle barrel and struck Bill over the head springing upon him with his knife as well Bill got his hand on a six shooter and killed him just as he would have struck After that no one knew what happened not even Bill himself who got his name then and there I just got sort of wild he said describing it I thought my heart was on fire I went out to the pump to get a drink and I was all cut and shot to pieces

'They called him Wild Bill after that and he had earned the name There were six dead men on the floor of the dugout He had fairly whipped the ten of them and the four remaining had enough and fled from that awful hole in the ground Two of these were badly wounded Bill followed them to the door His own weapons were exhausted or not at hand by this time but his tableman came up just then with a rifle in his hands. Bill caught it up from him and cut as he was fired and killed one of the desparadoes as he tried to mount his horse The other wounded man later died Eight men were killed by one

After a year he had recovered sufficiently from his injuries to take service as a wagon master under General Fremont and while near Scudalia was attacked by a force of confederates In a running fight he killed four more He then joined the army as an independent sharpshooter and in four hours at the Battle of Pea Ridge he killed 35 men one of them the confederate General McCullough

After he had enlisted in the army as a sharpshooting experiencer and with General Curtis as a spy the dangerous work of going in and out of Price's lines among the hoodlum Arkansans and Missouri among the confederate ranks He actually enlisted as a trooper in a company of Price's rangers and secured much valuable information Then he escaped after killing a confederate sergeant Once more he penetrated the confederate lines here he again enlisted This time he escaped after killing two men He fled each time in a personal fight A third time in the confederates he was arrested by Price's rangers as a spy and sentenced to be shot He took his life in his hands escaped killed his guards and escaped

For some time he served as a scout in free lance with General Davis command Riding by himself one day he was stopped by three confederates All had revolvers in their hands but Wild Bill killed two of them and the third ran Not long before they had killed and sent out his scalps in his belt a report that a band of Indians were about to join the confederate forces In getting the information he fought a knife duel with a Sioux Chief Conquering Bear, killed his man but emerging from the fight badly cut up

One day after the war Wild Bill found himself in Springfield Mo, where he was insulted by a noted pistol shot Dave Tutt Bill tried to avoid trouble but the Missourian not only called him a coward but threatened to kill him on sight Bill offered to meet Tutt in the town square by appointment and in a fair fight killed his man at the first shot

Another notable fight took place in Nebraska, where four men started to make a joint attack on him He dared the four to go into the street and fight him with pistols—the four to fire at the word and he to do the same His first shot killed one man but he was shot through the right shoulder and disabled in his right arm He killed two more with his left hand and wounded the fourth so badly that he was unable to continue the fight

Wild Bill's next experience was as a scout with Buffalo Bill in the campaign against Black Kettle In the fight in which Black Kettle was killed mostly by Wild Bill's rifle the latter was wounded and it took months for this wound to heal

One of the toughest towns on the border then was Hays City and the better element of the place employed Wild Bill as town marshal and there he killed three men in a single combat He joined Buffalo Bill in the latter's Wild West show for a time in the '70s but not liking this life he became marshal of Abilene and two days later killed a desperado who was shooting up the town Enemies on the cattle range offered a reward of $5,000 to the men who would kill Wild Bill and eight men started for Abilene on a train to get his heart' Bill heard of it and met the train killing one of the eight as they leaped from the train to escape from him He established respect for the law in Hays City and Abilene after killing all who opposed his authority

The rest of his life was spent at Deadwood in the Black Hills where he married after a few more battles in which he added to the toll of his victims—all killed in fair fight and either in self defense or in the line of duty He now decided to settle down to a peaceful life after having been a popular marshal of cities He did however still time to enjoy a life of quiet for on the 2nd day of August 1876 while sitting at a game of cards a gambler Jack McCall shot him dead from behind for no other reason than that he had a grude against Bill McCall was turned loose by a miners court but on being arrested by state officers a few days later was tried, convicted of murder and hanged

Wild Bill was buried at Deadwood and a handsome monument erected over his grave, which has since attracted the attention of tourists to the story of the greatest gunman the west ever knew.

ONE of the problems faced by the natural gas industry of Texas is peculiar to this state—the sudden drop of temperature, almost without warning, known as a "norther."

When that happens, everybody in our whole territory wants gas, wants lots of it, and wants it quickly. As it takes many hours for the gas to move from the wells to this community, this sudden demand makes it extremely difficult to keep the supply up to the city gates.

Higher Pressure

For this reason our pipe lines carry a high pressure always—much higher than in many other gas fields, as high as good operating practice allows. But this might not always be sufficient to meet the universally increased use.

Therefore, when the weather man gives us warning, all wells are turned on to their full capacity. For this purpose men visit the wells at any hour of the day or night, through any kind of country.

Quadruple the Supply

Then the gigantic compressors pick up this gas and force it in ever increasing quantity on to the consumers One by one these enormous engines are put onto the job, and when all are working the volume of gas forced through the pipe lines is quadrupled over the ordinary amount in summer weather. Where the local distributing system and your home piping and appliances are able to care for this increased volume, consumers may never notice the difference, despite the strenuous activity called out by cold weather.

METHODISTS MEET FRIDAY NIGHT AND MAKE YEAR'S PLANS

According to Dr H D Knickerbocker some good substantial Methodist parents stayed away from the Methodist Men's club banquet just because they were giving babies away But this fact didn't phase W W Silk and 300 other guests at the Methodist church Friday night Mr Silk was the lucky man and assumed the new duties of parenthood with the proper dignity

With Dr Knickerbocker acting as toastmaster the banquet served by the ladies of the church, passed off in true Methodist style and was a very enjoyable occasion Stanley Raub entertained the guests with several violin selections. After the business session of the club and the election of officers for the coming year, C E Huckabee limbered up the guests with his gymnastic version of 'Lil Liza Jane"

With the banquet and business disposed of the men went to the church auditorium for the baby drawing Ben Neal took charge and presided over what he insisted was the most solemn occasion of his life After the drawing, when it was discovered that Mr. Silk was the lucky man, Dr Knickerbocker announced that friends of the new parent had prepared a baby shower Much merriment was caused when Mr Neal presented the gifts and explained the use of each in a child's life Paregoric by the gallon safety pins shoes, pacifier and in fact everything mentionable that is necessary to the child's happiness the first few years of his life Mr Silk was then instructed as to how to raise a child and given vocal lessons with special attention to lullabies. After all the necessary instructions in rearing a child, Thomas Moody, in a touching speech of presentation, offered to Mr Silk a squealing red pig Mr. Silk immediately administered the paregoric, much to the amusement of the audience

Officers elected for the coming year were J M McFall, president, R D Kennedy, vice president, W. J Daugherty secretary, and O. A. Jones, treasurer In addition to these officers the club elected the following board of governors Thos Reese, Thos Moody, L M Creagor, N H Martin and C W. Gilliland.

"We are living in a rocking chair, swinging hammock, ostermoor mattress, palace car, shock absorber age, in which it is regarded an unpardonable sin to be uncomfortable Too much ease and luxury do away with ruggedness of character and superior personalities" Dr C C Selecman, pastor of the First Methodist church south of Dallas, made this statement in his plea to the Methodist Men's club Friday night to build their entire lives around a good personality

Dr. Selecman said that this age was often characterized as the age of machinery and that some argued that manhood was about to be eclipsed by the modern mechanisms but that behind every great mechanism and accomplishment there was a master mind and guiding personality Nations, states, newspapers, educational systems, department stores, Dr. Selecman said, have each an outstanding personality In illustration of this he cited the personality of the world powers and made a plea for an agreement that would lead to an understanding among the nations until the day of the great "Brotherhood of Man" as taught by Christ

The speaker pointed out three things that a strong personality would accomplish

"It will determine the standard which you set for yourself in your career or life task If your standard is too low you are apt to make the fatal mistake of selling out too cheap on the bargain counter of the world Unless your standard is high, clothes or some similar hobby is likely to become the sum and end of your existence Multiply yourself by 100 and set your standard high"

"Second a good personality will enable you to overcome the difficulties that stand in the way of your success" In bringing out this point the speaker quoted the famous and appropriate poem of Joaquin Miller "Columbus" and urged that his audience cultivate the kind of personality that will let nothing stand in the way

"A good personality will help you to stand unconquered and undismayed in the hour of seeming failure and distress when everything is swept away except your personality Dr Selecman strengthened this final claim for personality by recalling the famous statement of Edison the inventor which his laboratories were destroyed by fire

"If you develop the right kind of personality you may stand with Edison among the charred ruins and say 'It didn't touch me'"

The Kind of Service We Believe In

We'd rather have a customer tell us we're short on battery knowledge than that we've failed in courtesy, thoroughness or keeping our promises.

Skill is mighty necessary in this business—so is knowledge—but it isn't on these alone that we build up our trade. It's through these things plus courteous, businesslike treatment.

Never mind what make of battery yours is. We care for all according to the Willard Standards of Battery Service.

District Deputy Grand Master E V Friborg Worshipful Master J A Elder of Wichita Falls Lodge 635, and Worshipful Master P B Curd of Faith Lodge, No 1158, will have charge of the special entertainment of the Grand Master while he is visiting in this city. Many of the Masons in this section are acquainted with Mr Johnson, having met him at the Bowie homecoming meeting last spring, which was given in his honor and that of Grand Commander Hawkins of Vernon, both of whom are old time residents of Bowie

Mrs Ernest Scannell has returned from a three months stay in Los Angeles and other western coast cities.

ANOTHER MILE TO PAVE BEFORE ALL ROADS COMPLETED

Potts and Prestice, general road contractors are just a mile from the finishing point in the paving of the roads in Wichita county.

During the past week a total of 4500 feet of concrete was laid on the Burkburnett-Clara road and Saturday evening a total of one mile remained to be paved.

All the material necessary to complete the road has been shipped with exception of 25 cars of stone. If there is no delay occasioned in the receipt of the materials, the road will be completed by October 10

Work on the gravelling of the Iowa Park-Kemp City road is progressing favorably, it was reported Saturday morning

Sees New York—"Give Me Oklahoma," Says Indian Heiress

Miss Vivian Simpkins, a Very Modern Indian, Bobbed and College Educated, Who Says of the Metropolis: "The Whole Place Looks Artificial to Me."

Because the Men of the East Look Pale and Worried, She's Gone Back to Pawhuska, Where She's Sure of an Out-of-Doors Prince Charming

SHE took a look at Broadway and yawned; she examined with appraising eye the roaring "subs" and rattling "L's"; she watched those immense vertical hives disgorging their workers at 5 o'clock; she rode through Central Park in a taxi and compared it unconsciously with her own back yard; she took in without surprise the fancy-shod flappers on Fifth Avenue.

In brief, she gave New York a thorough going over. She is now back in Oklahoma—and is thoroughly contented to stay there.

The heroine of this thumbnail travelogue is Miss Vivian Simpkins, an Indian belle of Pawhuska, Oklahoma. Her tribes and her parents are rich—they struck oil—and she is the active manager of 10,000 acres of pasture land. She is thoroughly modern. She went to college. She bobs her hair. And for a long time she nursed the thoroughly modern hope that she might find an Eastern man who would satisfy her conception of a latter-day Prince Charming. That was before she went East.

She went to New York with a woman friend, a buyer for one of the stores in Pawhuska. She lost no time in getting a good look at New York and she paid particular attention to the men.

They looked a bit pale to this Indian belle, pale and worried. They looked to her as if they had been doing one thing too long. Gradually the vision of an Eastern Prince Charming faded out. She began to think about those tall, vigorous men of her own race and her own region. She wasn't particularly kind to New York when the newspaper reporters went to see her.

"The whole place seems artificial to me," she said. "But then I have never found any place as beautiful as the Osage country. People rave about California and Colorado, but they can't compare with my country. There the scenery is always changing. You can ride a few miles through the timber lands and suddenly find yourself in rolling prairies.

"I do not see what New York does with its children. At home most of the yards take up half a block. Back in the case of our family, if that's not big enough we turn them loose on the farm. There were seven children in our family and many neighboring children used our yards as a gathering place. I don't see what we would have done in an apartment. I feel sorry for New York children."

Asked about flappers she said:

"Of course we have flappers in Pawhuska. I have a flapper sister. They dress just like the girls do here. Their clothes very likely come from the same wholesale houses. The only difference I can see is that the girls do not drink and smoke. Some girls do smoke in private, but they are ones who have learned it at Eastern boarding schools.

"I am past the flapper stage. I am business manager for my family. I have charge of grazing lands and I run my mother's house. My cook left just before I did and I did the cooking for the family and company. I love to do it and I am ready to get back to it."

She spoke feelingly and with pride of her tribe's people.

"The Osage Indians are fine specimens of manhood," she said. "Their women are small but the men are big, strapping fellows. You never see a full-blood Indian who hasn't a fine physique. While they do not live out of doors now any more than your next-door neighbor does, they have a sturdy line of ancestors that makes them almost perfect.

"The Osage Indians are trying to keep the traditions of the tribe and seldom intermarry now. There are full-blooded children in the tribe and I hope there always will be.

"The oil lands of the Osage country have made the tribe the richest one in the country, and they have much grazing and farming lands, too. The Indians are all educated, but they cling to the blanket costume, while few other tribes do.

"Yes, I like the out-of-doors. That must come with my Indian blood. I love to camp, though I haven't done much of it lately. I do not go in much for athletics, golf being my main form of exercise. I like baseball. I did not have a chance to see a big league game in New York, but they couldn't be any more exciting than our games at home."

Three Great Personalities that Will Never Die

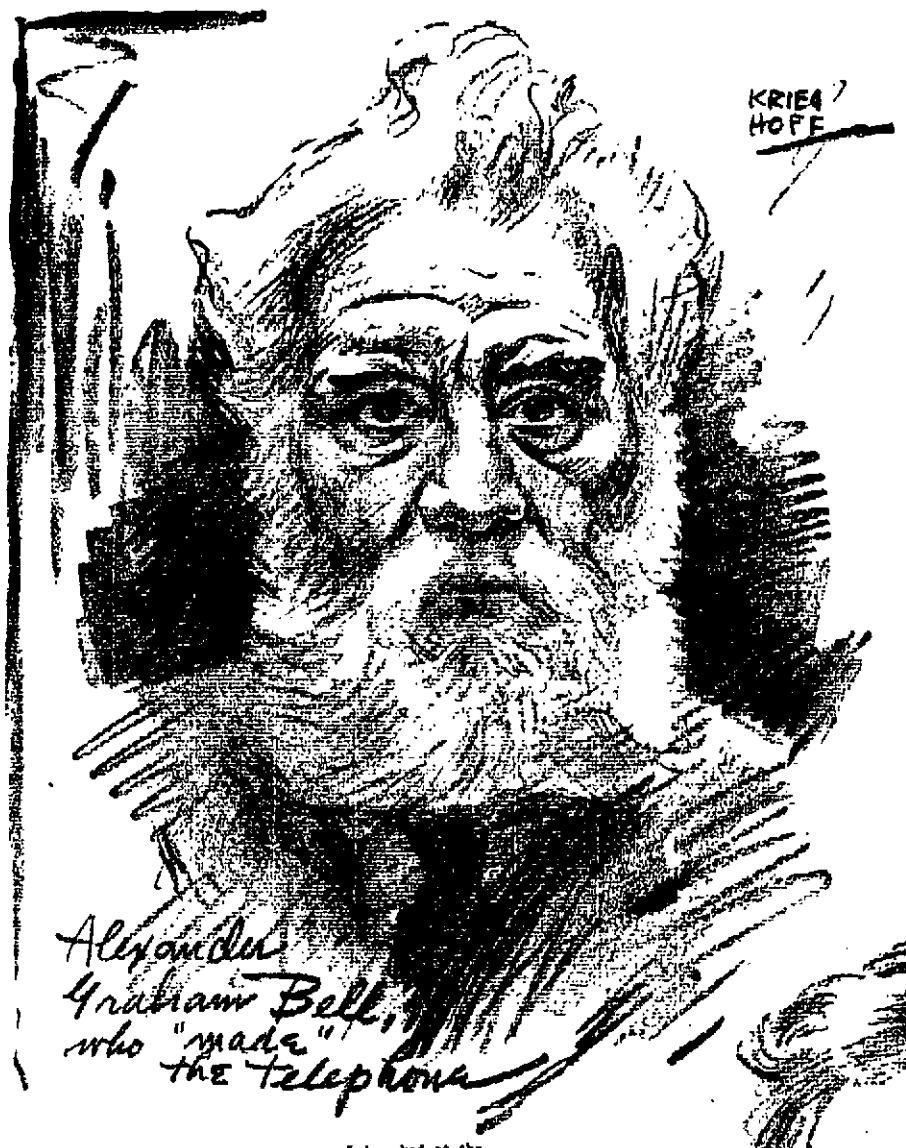
Copyright, 1922, by Public Ledger Company

Alexander Graham Bell Made the Phone Ring, Theodore Vail Switchboarded the Continent, "Marse Henry" Talked Across the World, and Robert Lincoln, Host, Got Only a Sniff of Mr. Watterson's Pullman Omelet on a Hot Kentucky Morning



IN THE night, some ten or so years ago, I knocked at the door of Alexander Graham Bell in Washington. Knocked and waited. I was about to knock again, when the unseemliness of the hour, which had been troubling me, made me forebear.

To be sure, the occasion was important. Something had happened or threatened to happen, I do not remember which, and the Associated Press desired an expression from Mr. Bell.

Then, as I stood "armed in hesitance," the door opened. Without sound, without any light. And a thickset man wrapped in a gray bath-robe, whom I but dimly perceived, said—

"Yes?"

I remember that he said it from the bottom of his chest, and the deep-toned hearty friendliness of the word has lingered with me.

We went together into the library, he retying the cord of the great, rumpled bathrobe. And we talked of what I had come about, and disposed of that. And I said, being entranced by the man and loath to go away: "Isn't it true that transportation is the one big force back of every stride civilization has taken?"

He looked at me, his great eyes under their shaggy cliff-brows kindled as the windows of a lighthouse look out into the sea. "Let us have some coffee," he said. "And we will talk."

We went into the kitchen. And he made coffee, and not too quickly, that was very black, I remember, and very good. And we carried our cups which he got from a cupboard, and the coffee-pot, into the dining-room, and drew up chairs at a great table, and sat down.

HE SIPPED greedily. I had to make pretense; it was so scalding hot.

"Transportation," he said. And I shall not ever forget his eyes, the deepness of his voice. "I know what you mean—communication. Transportation is only the larger word. It is the greatest word in the lexicon. It is the label on the very paper that science is wrapped in. Transportation! Communication is only its immediate fraction. Have some coffee."

"It is good," I said.

"I have had to learn to make it well, because it is my dissipation. I love it." His eyes fastened into distance. "Transportation," he said. "It may be the beating of a drum across an African wilderness. It may be the magical circle which is a cart-wheel. It may be a ship at sea with letters for some port. It may be the taking down of a telephone receiver to speak and be heard across the invisible. Transportation! Communication! It is man laughing at the elements! And we have only begun to learn how to laugh! We shall sail like the birds into far places or near, and be there swiftly. We shall run races with the fishes and nose out the secrets of the oceans. Transportation! Communication!

"There can be no society without contact. There can be no civilization without society. There can be no community without intercourse. Why, communication is the very blood-stream of life! We will make some fresh coffee. * * *

"Where shall you look for savagery and find it? Where there is no intercourse with States or tribes or groups which have progressed. And how can there be intercourse without transportation? It is impossible. Archæology and ethnology are no more, in the final word, than the record of peoples' efforts to communicate. The muck-drowned villages of the Florida Everglades have given up to science the evidence of trade contacts which make us wonder how far, in God's name, could a canoe travel or a runner endure?"

"And these ancientries that science digs up," I said, "do they mean to you that we are just learning over again, in a bigger way?"

"Or should we say in a small way?" he laughed at me. "Ask me that when I have died.

"This I know. That in human existence, isolation is death, communication is life. Transportation? We are only fingering the tips of its wings. We are only just catching the beat of its breath. We are getting ready to begin to 'travel'!

"Have some coffee."

Some time in the dead hours of the night I came away, filled high up with good coffee and great thoughts. And as I walked through the silent streets of the Nation's capital—than which no streets of a big city are more utterly silent before the dawn—I would have been reminded, could I have looked a few years ahead, of another doorway, another huge-chested man of magic affairs, in another city.

YOU knew he would be a great figure of a man before you swung open the door of his hotel room and entered. You knew it possible, by hearsay; you knew it certainly by the timbre that still revealed, in response to the rap-rap on the panel.

There had been no appointment. Yet Theodore N. Vail, rising, rising, rising (like some mighty-chested forebear of Kipling's Little Mildred in "The Man Who Came Back"), at the writing table dragged to the light of a window, said at once with outstretched hand:

"You are of the press. I am glad to see you. Sit down."

One observes, in going hither and yon about the world asking other people things about other people's business and thereby making a living, that there are several kinds of big men ranging loose, and that a limited number of them are of the bigness of the fourth dimension—a measurement which through all the sentient ages has been abroad in our midst while scientists have been barrying the flanks of the universe, like persistent fleas, to discover it.

YET the thing is so absurdly apparent—when you set to measuring an all-and-all big man. He is high, he is wide, he is thick; and for the fourth dimension his brain and heart and soul are of a bigness that finite instruments cannot measure. And there's your fourth dimension right under your nose. It's so simple even Einstein might have thought of it—relatively.

Now there was, as well I recall it on that sunny-wind Texas afternoon beside a Gulf shore—there was, I say, a certain personal space in this fourth dimension of Theodore N. Vail, and by the grace of what gods there be it was filled with something thicker than ether. By his hearty invitation we at once investigated it.

"It is of the best, sir," I said, setting down my glass reluctantly. "Do you, may I ask, carry it with you?" (He was upon one of his long and rather frequent trips required of him as president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.)

"I did this time," he twinkled. His dark, brilliant eyes—gleaming black at times—shone with a whimsical friendliness through the polished lenses of his spectacles. "I no more believe, and I speak for myself, not having sufficient wisdom to speak in such matters for the rest of mankind, I no more believe in total abstinence than I believe in excess," he said. "I enjoy good liquor just as I enjoy a well prepared meal and a properly selected cigar. Now these——" he said, pushing forward on the table a partly emptied box of exceedingly fragrant Havanas, "these may be to your liking."

They were. "You are too polite," I said, "to think that I came only to partake of your fine hospitality. Aside from wishing the privilege of meeting you, shall I tell you what I did come for?"

"Now that," beamed Theodore Vail, "would be quite in order; though I am content to enjoy the pleasure of this companionship."

"I believe that important men, very busy men, do not say such things so readily without rather meaning them," I retorted, "and I thank you. I came to ask you, sir, what you would do if you were a telephone girl and some delayed male at the other end of the line lost his temper and swore at you completely?"

"I'd swear back at him like hell!" snapped Theodore Vail. Then he leaned back until the hotel chair creaked, and laughed his great, reverberating laugh. "No," he said, slipping off his spectacles to polish them because the quick mist of fun had quite blurred the bright lenses; "no, being a lady, I couldn't do that, could I?"

"And being a company employe you couldn't either, because you'd be fired," I suggested.

"As to that part," twinkled the big man, "I might forget and take a chance. But you did put your finger on something there. It affords me an opportunity I'm glad of to pay tribute to the almost universal patience of the telephone operator, her remarkable self-control in the matter of civility under hours-long strain which the public but faintly comprehends, if the public thinks about it at all. More and more, each year it is coming to be a tradition of the telephone service that efficiency wherever mechanically possible, and politeness always, are to prevail on 'Central's' part as something bigger, broader, finer than mere rules whose violation justifies discipline.

"There are times when delay, unexplained or explained, is almost maddening to the party calling—I say that not as a telephone official but as one of the millions of the public who frequently use the phone; but I say, too, as a telephone official now, that in the very large majority of such annoyances the cause is mechanical rather than human, due to some technicality of the elements or of the mechanical instrumentality, rather than to indifference upon the part of an employe. And in both fields, conditions are improving yearly, I believe. Now, a little of this——?"

"By all means," I said. "If you had not asked me I might have been tempted to do what you said you would-but-would-not do if you were a hello girl. You know."

I had wanted to hear that deep, timbred laugh again, and it came.

"THIS afternoon reminds me," I said, standing and looking out the hotel window and down upon the scraggly bit of shore that did duty below the sea-wall as "beach," "of a certain occasion some years ago very much farther north but still very much in the South."

"What was that occasion?" he demanded, with the quick, interested curiosity which was a very part of the man's life—he handled huge things, thought immense thoughts, but details, passing observations—were not, to him, petty because by chance they might be small. I have always considered that was one of the unhidden secrets of Theodore Vail's greatness in life.

"It is about Henry Watterson and Robert T. Lincoln and a private car of the Pullman Company and a breakfast and an unspeakably hot summer day in mid-Kentucky and a flag-draped village square where the sun blazed and——"

"But," he interrupted eagerly, motioning to the cigars and helping himself, "why does such an occasion remind you of this?"

"Because," I said, daring to look a great man in the eyes and tell him an honest compliment, "because the setting was so different and the momentary companionship holds so much in common." He looked at me very steadily, very inspectingly through the bright spectacles in whose lens I caught by a freak of the window-light a reflection of his white hair that was far whiter and finer than spun white-gold. And then very slightly, very understandingly, I thought, he bowed. "Will you tell me about—Mr. Watterson and—the rest?" he asked.

"The train," I said, accepting the offered match, "was bound from Louisville to Hodgenville, and at Hodgenville was to be unveiled in the early afternoon Gutzon Borglum's heroic statue of Abraham Lincoln. The train carried the private car of Mr. Robert Lincoln, then president of the Pullman Company——"

"That was 'Tad' of the President's days," said Mr. Vail.

"That was 'Tad,'" I answered. "Marse Henry was to deliver the oration, and he was Mr. Lincoln's guest. I went to their car to get the possible manuscript of the speech—which, as a thorough newspaperman, the editor had with him in manifold; and I was invited to come in."

"Don't stop," said Mr. Vail. "I want it all—I like contact with these intimate things. Go on!"

"IT WAS early forenoon, and breakfast was being served in the car. Marse Henry, I remember, had just begun to remove into himself his portion of a Spanish omelet. I can see that omelet yet—though it was disappearing with precision. It was the largest, most gorgeously bedecked funeral meat of yellow eggs I ever up to that time had looked upon. I think not fewer than six of the best hens must have contributed at least two offerings apiece to it. There was that faint wedded odor of garlic and onions which can arise only when there has been on the immediate job some 'delicate, white-handed, dilettante priest' of a chef to bless the breaking of egg-shells with incantations. There were other——"

The big president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company leaned back again, and again the hotel chair creaked its anguish, and boomed again like a chime of chimes, that deep laugh, this time muted to something like a cathedral chuckle. "Now just a bit of——"

"Surely. Thank you," I said. "I thought by the tale to whet your appetite; in return, you are excellently wetting mine."

"Now I want to ask you something—in strictest confidence," said Mr. Vail, and bent upon me through his spectacles a tell-the-truth gaze that brought the answer at once, unhesitant: "No, sir," I said, "to the best of my recollection and belief Mr. Robert Lincoln did not get any of that omelet—if I recall, he preferred to breakfast on fruit."

Again the chimes struck. "I guessed it!" laughed Theodore Vail. "Marse Henry was as great a feeder as he was a writer—that's one of the reasons he wrote so mightily."

"There's food for thought in that," I reflected.

"There was for Marse Henry," twinkled my host. "Well, you got to Hodgenville?—and——?"

"We got to Hodgenville, and no caterpillar tank traversing a piece of many ruins ever made faster time than that Kentucky train getting there. That is, that's truth on a hot day.

"And then—the statue.

"The image—struggling village within ridgepole of the log cabin birth-roof, the scores upon scores of hitched buggies and saddle horses around the four sides of the square; the simple country square itself, aflutter with uncounted flags lapping listlessly at the hot breeze that barely blew; the rude and rustic crowds; the ribboned, blossom-strewing school children in white; the gray and weather-sunken roofs about—all, all faded alike into one background of simple dignity when the lanyards were twitched, and there sat looking out beyond the scene in all the mighty majesty of bronze the great and humble Lincoln. Looking, as it were, into that inscrutable eternity into which his soul, which he ever captained, had gone. Metal breathed into by genius, as though the dead had returned again to his own lowly birthplace, to live.

"Huge, colossal, brooding in the majestic but kindly thoughtfulness of one whose life had been garlanded with so little of happiness and heaped upon with so much of bitter care, yet played upon from within by a grace of humor rare and undismayed; in its vast chair the Figure sat, and gazed against the hills. I do not know how any man can ever pass it without baring his head in simple, homely salute."

There was a silence.

"Man!" said the deep voice of Theodore Vail. "I wish I could have been there. * * * What did Watterson—say?"

I could not tell him; I had forgot. But Marse Henry can tell him, now.

* * * * *

THE mighty Kentuckian went out upon the long, long way, from the lovely city of Jacksonville, in Florida, just before the Christmas chimes of 1921 rang beside the sea.

I had gone down into the South on an editorial interview trip and was to cut his trail in the metropolis of the palms. He had arrived at the Seminole a few days before me, and they told me at the hotel desk he was very ill.

And when breakfast was served in my room the next day, there came with the tray the Times-Union. I opened to the first page to scan. And Marse Henry was dead.

It was the passing of a great soul; the taking from the world of a warrior spirit the world could not afford to lose. I thought of Tennyson's lines:

"Sad as the pipe of half-awakened birds to dying ears, when unto dying eyes the casement slowly grows a glimmering square." Poe has cited that passage, with one from "The Faerie Queen," as among the most perfect expressions of poetic imagery in the language. And it is.

I thought too of the massive Blaine standing beside the bier of Garfield in the dimness of the vast rotunda in the Capitol at Washington, and closing his almost matchless eulogy with these words:

"With wan, fevered face uplifted to the cooling breeze he gazed out wistfully upon the ocean's changing wonders; on its fay sails whitening in the morning light; on the great waves rushing shoreward to break and die beneath the noonday sun; on the red clouds of evening arching low to the horizon; on the serene and solemn pathway of the stars. Let us think that his dying eyes read a mystic meaning which only the rapt and parting soul may know. Let us believe that in the silence of the receding world he heard the great waves breaking on a farther shore, and felt already on his wasted brow the breath of the eternal morning."

THE WORLD OUTSIDE

By Harold Mac Grath

THE STORY THUS FAR.

AN adventure for $10,000—this is the bizarre offer made to Collingswood Jeremiah Bancroft, who has just inherited his father's $7,000,000, by Daniel Stewart, an eccentric stranger who represents the Great Adventure company. Jerry, failing to note the stranger's malevolent glances, scoffs and then ponders, remembering his own 24 humdrum years and his father's mysterious death—of fright, according to reports. Later, as Jerry is recalling a memorandum in his father's effects reading, "Paid Kennedy in full," out of the storm comes beautiful Nancy Bowman, a Broadway stage favorite, rain drenched and lost. Jerry escorts her to the nearest railroad station and the next day, trailed by agents of Stewart, goes to New York, where he learns the girl's identity. The Shadow and George Bellman, two crooks in the employ of Stewart, reveal that he served fourteen years in prison for killing a policeman. Jenny Malloy, Nancy's chum, tells Nancy her opera ambitions are vain and urges her to be more kind to Arthur Craig, backer of her musical comedy. Jerry makes up his mind to pose as a poor young man, taking the name Jeremiah Collingswood.

The young women vied with each other in their efforts to please Bancroft.

SIXTH INSTALLMENT.

Bancroft in New York.

THE clerk knocked at the middle door, and a brisk voice bade him enter.

"Mr. Bancroft, sir."

"Well, well," began Snell, withered but peppery, for all that he had spent the major portion of his days in this semi-tomb. "Sit down. Glad you're so prompt." He pressed a button. "Bancroft," he said in answer to the clerk's inquiry. "Well, how does it feel to be a millionaire?"

"Some day I'll be able to tell you; just now there are other things in my forehead."

"Ah, yes, I see. The Johnson matter. Well, I don't know."

"Mr. Snell, I'm going to ask you a question which may startle you. Was my father an honest man?"

"Come with me," said Snell. "We'll go into the office your father occupied all these years." On the way Snell was given the tin box which held the Bancroft papers. Once within the elder Bancroft's room the lawyer turned and laid his hands upon the young man's shoulders. "Here in this room, where the spirit of your father may sometimes return, I say to you solemnly that under God's heaven there lived no honester man than your father."

"Then every dollar is clean?"

"As the sunshine is in your part of the world."

"But why live as he did? Why did he treat me so?" cried the son passionately.

"God only knows. What your father's motives were for acting the misanthrope and pretending to be a miser I have no knowledge. But so far as honesty is concerned, I can declare that. You know nothing about rents in New York at the present time; but you'll get a glimmer when I tell you that all your rents are the same as pre-war times. He had all the chance in the world to gouge, but he didn't. Now, observe this slip."

Upon this slip Bancroft read about twenty names, with addresses. Against each name was a sum of money.

"People who owe him?"

"No. Your father was not only an honest man, my boy, but a kindly one. On December 20th, year after year, I made out these sums into checks and mailed them. I doubt if, even at this day, the beneficiaries know where the money comes from. Nearly ten thousand a year to men and women who had in some way, at some time, performed an act in his service disinterestedly."

"Charity!"

"Precisely."

"I don't understand. He never gave me any money."

"But today you are only twenty-four and the absolute master of nearly seven millions. That seems answer enough. The day you went to camp he said he was making his will in your favor; every dollar, stick, and stone. I vaguely protested about the looseness and suggested a trust. He said no; and went on to say that all the money you had ever had you had earned by the sweat of your brow, that you would know what a dollar was and how far it would go. So that part of the riddle seems clear enough. He taught you the pleasure of honest work."

"But not a line of advice!" said Bancroft. "As if he were absolutely indifferent what I did with this money. Not a legacy of any kind. Supposing I had grown up illiterate—what then?"

"Ah, but you didn't," countered Snell. "Your father knew what you were about, but he said nothing. Supposing he had admitted his wealth and sent you to college, would you be as well off as you are today? Would you be half so well educated? Wait a minute." Snell dug into the box and produced a bundle of receipts. "Whose signature is that?"

"Miller's!—the academy principal! Fifteen hundred a year!" Bancroft's bewilderment was rocking him painfully. "But he kept me at arm's length, Mr. Snell, always at arm's length." There was a break in the young man's voice.

"I know no reason for that. But one day Miller came in. In some manner he had learned that your father had his office here. He came to suggest that you be sent to college. Your father asked Miller if he couldn't give you the equivalent of a college education, and Miller answered that he could. So for seven years Miller drew a salary of fifteen hundred. He proved himself to be something more than a tutor, a teacher; he became your moral guide as well, because he was fond of you. You aren't merely educated; you are a scholar."

"Yes, yes! But my youth—where is that? All those lonely years!"

"Your youth! You have just entered upon it, equipped beyond ordinary, a fortune and the brains with which to enjoy it. Or you can dissipate it all, youth and fortune, in forty months"—dryly.

Bancroft picked up the list of his father's pensioners. "I can destroy this."

"Certainly. But will you?"

"There were no instructions regarding it."

"But you are going to tell me to go on sending those checks so long as any of the beneficiaries continue to live."

"You're right."

"Don't ever be afraid of growing too rich. An honorable rich man is always a human benefactor. It is not only a great responsibility but a great trust. Spend if you will, but wisely. If you throw it away indiscriminately you take the strength out of those who receive it. Out of what might eventually become a man you will make a parasite. Do you want a little fatherly advice?"

"Yes. I never had any."

"Then go by instinct. Do that which instinct urges you to do, and you'll come out all right."

"But why did he never refute the term of miser?"

"I know no more about that than you do. There's that date on the calendar. Any idea what it means"

Bancroft studied the calendar for a minute. "Why, it's the anniversary of my mother's death."

"Then that explains the bills for flowers."

"My father never visited that grave."

"He must have had good reasons."

"Had he an enemy?"

"None that I ever encountered. If your father had an enemy, it appears rather incredible that I shouldn't have heard something about it. But I am forced to admit that there was a side to his life of which I knew nothing. I'll call in Johnson."

But in answer to Bancroft's question, Johnson could add nothing to the suppositions in Snell's letter. The clerk had heard high voices and the death cry of Silas Bancroft; nothing explanatory. The clerk was dismissed.

"Anything else before we visit the bank?" asked Snell.

"Yes. Have one of the clerks call up the rooming house I own and see if there is a room to let. I am going to spend several months in town under the name of Jeremiah Collingswood. I wish to make some real friends. I shall drop in on you occasionally. I want you to take charge of the estate as you did during my father's time."

"We agree to shoulder all the responsibility we can. I am going to leave you alone for a few minutes, as I've a will to correct."

"Just a moment, Mr Snell. I shall need three certified checks this morning for fifty thousand each"

He set himself for the violent protest which he expected to follow this astounding declaration, but no protest followed. Mr. Snell nodded benignly.

"There are ample funds," was all he said.

"Aren't you curious?" demanded Bancroft.

"Why should I be? It is your money. Anything else?"

"There's a mortgage on the First Presbyterian Church, home, that I want canceled."

"Ah."

"Conditionally"

"And what are the conditions?"

"That the church shall permit me to offer a window in memory of my father."

"By gad, young man, that's the best thing I've heard in years! Your father will chuckle over that. Well, I'm blessed! Anything more?"

"Nothing more that I can think of"

"I'll be back in ten minutes," said Snell.

Left to himself, Bancroft inspected the room. A film of dust lay upon everything. He saw a small bookcase, and he went to it eagerly. The Bible, Shakespeare, Dante, Emerson, Lamb, and Dickens; all well thumbed. He understood now why he had never seen his father take down a book at home; he had done his reading here.

"Why?" he said aloud, without being conscious of it. "An honest man. My father! . . . Why did you never take me into your life? Why did you never try to make a friend of me I don't understand!" His throat became stuffy, and his eyes filled. "I would have been happy with only you! You were interested in me; but why, in God's name, didn't you let me know it?"

He sat down in the desk chair, and there came into his mind a vision of his father, sitting on the porch in the afterglow of day, always with that unchangeable serenity of countenance. Bancroft bent his head in his hands; and so Snell found him.

"We'll do the banks and have lunch together. Now," went on Snell, "don't fall into any moods. Some day all this puzzle is sure to smooth out."

"But it seems so useless! Mr. Snell, did my father ever mention to you a man by the name of Kennedy?"

Snell, after some deliberation, shook his head. "No. If he ever did, I have no recollection. Why?"

"I found a slip among his papers, announcing that he had paid Kennedy in full. It was heavily and emphatically underscored; so I judge that the settlement was something out of the ordinary."

"I can't recollect the name as associated with your father. It might have been something before he came to this office."

"There is a water mark in the paper, dated 1912."

"As I have already informed you, there were chapters in your father's life of which I knew nothing."

"Do you know where he was born?"

"In this city."

"Has he any kin?"

"None other than yourself. But if your father wrote paid, you can rest assured that this Kennedy was paid—whatever the debt."

"Battle, murder, and sudden death," said Bancroft, to no one in particular.

"What's that?"

"I was thinking out loud, Mr. Snell."

Bancroft discovered that he was, for the first time in his life, contentedly happy. There was no urge to violent expressions, to sing, dance, shout. He was more inclined toward a bench seat in Union Square park, in the sunshine, with the brown leaves pleasantly dancing in the fresh breeze. He had come upon a great truth in life, that the only possible way to become happy is to make others so.

To see Mrs. Horne's face, when she opened the letter and beheld the check! Bancroft would have given much to stand invisibly at her elbow.

Bancroft observed a clock in the distance; it was three. He must arrive in Ninth Street at four, or he would lose his chance to engage the one room vacant; for in this instance he was not the owner but Jeremiah Collingswood. So he rose from the bench and started across town, The Shadow following at a respectable distance.

He noted with pleasure the well scrubbed marble and the fresh surface of the ruddy bricks, the genteel quality of the neighborhood. It was quiet, too, such noises as he heard came from a distance. He would do very well here. He mounted the steps and rang the janitor's bell. That person appeared shortly and even grumpily.

"My name is Collingswood. I was advised that you had a room vacant, furnished. May I inspect it?"

"How long do you expect to stay?"

"Five or six months."

"Well, come along. The room was vacated this morning for lack of rent. We toe the line here. Pay day is every Monday. We don't gouge you as they do elsewhere in the street, but you settle on the nail Mondays, or hoof it."

"Who owns the house?"

"Don't know. I'm hired by Snell & Pride, attorneys for the estate."

"That's odd—for a janitor not to know the name of the owner"

"So it is; but my pay comes in regular, so I ain't making no complaints. I'll show you the room. No general cooking; but you can cook an egg and boil coffee on an alcohol burner, if you want to. No children or dogs allowed."

The room faced the street, and contained a fairly decent bed, a bureau, a washstand, and an old black walnut clothes press. Worn linoleum covered the floor. At one side of the bed was a worn machine made rug.

"There's nothing against my refurnishing the room, is there."

"No; but it won't make any difference in the rent; that's fixed. This is the only furnished room we have."

"How much the week?"

"Twelve, fifteen, if you want my wife to make the bed and clean up every morning."

"That's pretty stiff for a room without board"

"Try some other houses along the street if you think we're harpooning you," was the callous advice. "You save enough to buy a meal ticket at Doblin's across the way"

"All right. I'll take the room. Do I give the extra three now, or at the end of the week?"

"Same as the rent—in advance."

"What did you say your name was—Scrooge?"

"Jansen. When'll you move in?"

"About six. My belongings are at a hotel"

Bancroft went into the street, musing. So the janitor had never heard of Silas Bancroft? That was unusual. Had it any significance?

At seven o'clock that evening The Shadow reported to his employer that Bancroft was domiciled, and calculated upon remaining in his new quarters for several months. Also, that the young man had visited his lawyers, made the rounds of the banks, and had, later, entered the offices of Brown & Co., investigators, late of the Department of Justice.

"Good work, Shadow. From now on you will have a little more freedom. But keep in touch with him, particularly where he goes at night. See if he makes friends, and with whom. He is moving exactly the way I expected. He will have the emerald company investigated and will be thoroughly convinced that that side of it is no fairy story. Result his puzzlement will be magnified many diameters. In a few days he will be interviewing George. I can't anticipate that. If he approaches George as Bancroft, everything is arranged for his reception; but if he advances under his assumed name George will have to use his wits, which is my reason for employing him.

After The Shadow had gone his way the Professor fell to pacing the room. Ironies! They came up as thickly as the fabled dragon teeth of Jason. That boy, now in that house!

"Root and branch!" he cried, his fingers closing convulsively. "Root and branch!"

Unaware of this menace, or rather of the exterminating quality of it, Bancroft pursued his affairs to a happy conclusion. He found himself more or less comfortably situated. He would have his meals across the way, beginning with tomorrow. Tonight he would not have time to dine, dress, and get uptown in time to avoid standing during the performance, for he knew that for the next half a dozen nights his particular amusement would consist in listening to and watching Nancy Bowman. He reasoned that by familiarizing his eyes and ears, his pulse would be less likely to jump when the inevitable meeting came.

Thus, dinnerless, the young analyst arrived at the box office in time to purchase a single chair in O, behind a supporting post. He was happy, but he could not analyze this happiness.

He studied the men in the audience, particularly those who were young and dressed as he was. Did this one know her? Had that one the freedom of her conversation? He fell to reconsidering his resolution not to seek the stage entrance, and finally decided that there could be no harm in watching to see if she walked or rode away with any one after the performance.

With much diffidence, to which was added a meed of self-scorn, he stationed himself at one side of the stage door and waited. Several closed cars stood invitingly at the curb. When he arrived there was no one about; the stage door remained shut.

By and by women come out, in pairs and trios. Some of them walked away, some of them entered the cars and were driven away. There followed another period of inaction; then Nancy Bowman appeared. She immediately turned toward Broadway, alone and afoot. Bancroft was delighted, but he was also puzzled. The most attractive young woman in the operetta, and none offered to see her home! Perhaps by this time they knew the futility of approaching her; she was the butterfly on the stage, nowhere else.

He gave her three minutes' headway, then he followed, all the way across town to the Elevated. As she ran up the stairs and vanished he recollected that he was hungry. He entered the first restaurant he came to and ordered an oyster stew.

When the stew came on The Shadow bade Bancroft a mocking good-night through the window.

Bancroft walked from the restaurant all the way down to Ninth street. He was conscious of weariness only when he arrived at the marble steps. Phew! He entered the silent house and went up the first flight.

At the end of the hall was a bathroom. He remembered seeing a typewritten slip of paper tacked at one side of the door, and he approached inquisitively. Some rules to be observed probably. Instead he was informed that the bathroom was "divided up" for the mornings, that each tenant on this floor had priority rights at a certain hour. Thus, No. 3 had the boathroom at eleven, No. 1 at eight, and so on. His own number, being 4, was followed by six o'clock. That was satisfactory. No names appeared on the slip; simply the room numbers and the allotments of time.

He heard an automobile in the street, heard it semi-detachedly, but when the hall door below opened and closed he rushed to the stairhead. Why? Not if his head had depended upon it could he have explained his action. For the present he had no interest or curiosity in the comings and goings of his tenants. Still, with the impetuosity of a doubtful husband, he had dashed to the stairhead. He arrived just as a young woman blonde, handsome, turned the elbow of the banisters. Tableau, denoting mutual astonishment. Almost at once Bancroft's turned into horror, while the young women's expression became cold and determined. She caught hold of the banister rail, not for support, however. She was making a barrier against this unknown young man's departure. His presence here had to be explained.

Too late Bancroft started to turn back.

"Just a minute, please!" said Jenny Malloy. "Who are you an' what are you doin' in this hall after one o'clock? Shoot it quick, or I'll holler!"

By the look of her the evidence was conclusive that she would do exactly as she threatened.

". . . I beg your pardon!" he stammered.

"No old stuff!" Jenny interrupted. "Come across. I never saw you before, an' I live here. Who are you?"

"My name is . . . Collingswood. I came late this afternoon."

"Is that so! Why th' hurry when you heard me?"

"I was going for a walk." He knew the moment the defense was uttered how infernally lame it was.

Jenny laughed contemptuously. "I'll say you was goin' for a walk . . . a I tin' was t' Troy! I don't know, I guess I'll holler."

"I'm the new tenant in No. 4," he said desperately.

"That listens good. If you're all right you'll have th' key. So toddle over an' unlock th' door. An' if you don't unlock it I'll let out a yell you'll remember 'a long's they keep you in th' hoos-gow!"

Bancroft had never before encountered a woman—young and handsome—with such rough and ready diction, and perhaps that added to his confusion. But as he unlocked the door and flung it open he began to laugh at himself. In all his life he had never felt so like a fool, for it was in his nature to lend dignity to all his acts. He did not blame the young woman. Indeed, he found her worthy to admire. She was as brave as she was handsome.

At the sound of the laughter a twinkle popped into Jenny's eyes. She realized that she had had her scare for nothing.

"But you looked as if you was just about t' do th' Fairbanks down th' stairs. Honest! by, now, was you goin' for a walk?"

"I was not. I ran to the head of the stairs for no reason that I can explain. Will you accept my apologies for scaring you?"

"Well, well; no harm done. What did you say th' name was?"

"Collingswood. Jeremiah Collingswood."

"Jeremiah? That settles it!"

"Settles what?" asked Bancroft, who was beginning to enjoy himself.

"Why, no crook in th' world'd ever admit havin' that tied to him."

"Bad as all that! But Jerry sounds all right."

"Of course, that'll help. My name is Jenny Malloy, an' I live in three."

"Jenny. That's the diminutive of Joanna."

"Are you guyin' me?"

"O, no, just happened to recall. Jenny is a beautiful name." It was astonishing how easy it was to talk to this odd young woman. "Leigh Hunt wrote a charming poem about a girl named Jenny."

"Never heard o' him."

"It runs like this——

"'Jenny kissed me when we met, Jumping . . .'"

"She did not!" But Jenny was smiling. After all, this boy might turn out to be regular.

Bubbling with mischief—now that he was sure of himself—he went on with the verse:

"'Jumping from the chair she sat in
Time, you thief, who love to get Sweets upon your list, put that in.
Say I'm weary, say I'm sad,
Say that health and wealth have missed me,
Say I'm growing old, but add—
Jenny kissed me!'"

"Hey, you!" bawled a voice through one of the doors. "Forget it, and beat it into the hay!"

So much for the introduction of Jenny Malloy, show girl and manikin, to Jeremiah Collingswood, nee Bancroft.

No matter how seriously bent the human mind may become upon a project, there will be diversions. It is unimaginable that any human being should proceed unalterably toward an end, as it is unimaginable for a tree to grow without branches. The seller of adventures was never wholly out of Bancroft's thought; nor was Bancroft ever wholly out of the seller's; but there were many diversions more to Bancroft's account because he was younger.

For five nights running he vociferously beat his palms together as Nancy Bowman came upon the stage to enliven the operetta; which wasn't so bad as Nancy thought it, nor so good as Jeremiah believed it to be. It may sound incredible, but he never once recognized Jenny Malloy in the chorus. Why should he?

On the morning of the sixth day there was a letter under Bancroft's door. He recognized Lawyer Snell's hand, but Lawyer Snell had in this instance nothing to relate. The envelope contained another, addressed to Collingswood Jeremiah Bancroft, in the sober patronymic. The joy the transcendental happiness which emanated from that letter, a mixture of ink and tears! It was from Mrs Horne. Professor Miller and Miss Hewitt had spent the afternoon with her; and they all had acted like mad, cried and laughed together. Her darling boy, to remember in that way those who had always loved him! "But, Jerry boy, I shan't touch mine. What in the world should I do with it when the interest—two thousand!—would smother me! So I am going to keep it for you, against the day when you may need it. The village is stunned no! only over what you have given us, but about the church mortgage and the memorial window. O my boy, supposing we should learn some day that your father had been a saint, and that we'd all misjudged him."

Bancroft decided to keep this letter so long as he lived; and whenever the world went wrong, he would reread it and draw a tonic therefrom. What a stuff to lean on, the knowledge that he had made three people happy and put them beyond want forever. But that his father might some day be proven a saint, he had his doubts.

As he was returning to his room from the restaurant, he encountered in the hallway the queerest, funniest little dog he had ever seen. The animal, dancing with joy at the prospect of unexpected freedom dashed for the stairs; but Bancroft blocked the passage. The dog turned and romped back, circled and pranced. He was so happy. Then out of the door diagonally opposite came rushing a young woman in a blue kimono with trailing white cherry blossoms.

"Ling Foo!" she called in a desperate whisper.

The dog raced about, dodging this way and that. Bancroft joined the chase. The dog himself dark against a dark floor had considerable sport before Bancroft succeeded in catching hold of his plumey tail. As he held out the dog toward its mistress, he almost dropped the animal so great was his astonishment.

"Why . . . it's you," he stammered.

Her astonishment was for the moment beyond speech, so she missed the compliment in his confusion, missed the delight on his face and the honest admiration in his pleasant gray eyes. But when the fact was established in her mind that this was really the young man of the adventure in the country, her distrust rose up in arms. He had followed her. She snatched the dog out of his hands, almost rudely.

"It seems impossible!" Jerry said, unaware of the angle from which Nancy viewed his presence. "I've been living here for six days, and to discover you only now!"

"You are living here?"

"Yes. You see, I couldn't stand the country any longer, so I came to New York to work. I'm not curious; I mean, about neighbors. So that's why . . ."

"I'm a cat," she replied, offering a hand; and he saw once more than irresistible smile of hers. "Your name I forget."

"You never asked for it. Jeremiah Collingswood."

"And mine is Bowman."

"Yes, I know."

"You know?"

"Yes. I accidentally discovered your photograph in the lobby of the theater, and I have watched you for five nights running."

"Was it you who followed me to the elevated two or three times?"

"Yes. I hope you're not offended."

"Not now. But why didn't you speak?"

"I was afraid to. So there was a dog!"

"You doubted it?"

"Well . . . what kind of a dog is it?"

"Pekinese; toy dog. It's against the rules; but I love him so I can't give him up, and it's give him up or leave if I'm caught." This is the first time he ever escaped."

She cuddled the puppy to her throat, and there was something in the act that sent a new and troublesome stab into Bancroft's heart.

"It's wonderful!" he said, with a thousand meanings.

"You must have thought me ungrateful. I don't know what I should have done but for that dear old lady's shoes and stockings. What a night it was!"

"Wasn't it, though?"

"I must be running back. The janitor or his wife will be coming along. Come over and have tea with me at four"—impulsively; which was the highest compliment she had paid to any man, young or old, since entering this house of another régime two years ago.

She hurried into her room and closed the door, and could not say whether she was vexed or pleased at the impulse which had led her to invite the young man in for tea, thus breaking a rule she had vowed never to break. Of course, Jenny would have to help her out, or Miss Mallam, the illustrator, if Jenny could not get away from her manikin's job.

After she dressed she went to Jenny's door and knocked. There was no answer. She knocked again. Presently the door opened wide enough for Jenny's face to appear.

"What you mean, hauling me out o' my beauty sleep at this hour? Come on in. What's on your mind?" Jenny demanded, getting back into bed and making a prop of her pillows.

"Can you come in for tea at four?"

"Who's goin' t' be there?"—astonished.

"Whom do you suppose?"

"Craig?"

"Always Craig!" cried Nancy, with impatience. "No. You remember the young countryman who helped me the other night?"

"Sure. You mean t' tell me he's found you?"

"Yes," said Nancy; "he found me, but in the queerest way! Would you believe it? He's the new roomer in No. 4."

"What?" Jenny sat up. "Say, you lay off that young man. He's mine. I saw him first."

"Where in the world did you meet him?"

"In th' hall th' other night. I thought he was a burglar, an' I made him unlock his door. An' then he began t' spout poetry."

"Why, I heard that! I thought it was some friend of yours"

"Well, he is some friend o' mine; an' you lay off."

Nancy laughed. "Will you come? I can't receive him alone."

"You bet I'll come. Th' madame 'll let me off after three. I'm worth a hundred a week t' that dame, an' she's wise. I have a way of makin th' husbands amiable. She wants t' put me in lingerie, but I gave her th' nix on that. I'm not showin' my legs anywhere but behind th' lights. So that guy is from the country! Well, believe me, it must be some village. You should have heard him spoutin' somethin' about 'Jenny kissed me'?"

"Had he been drinking?"

"That boy? Not with those red cheeks an' clear eyes. There you go! When you pass St. Peter you'll sniff. Men have always drunk th' stuff an' always will. Did I tell you some guy is callin' it Prohiboshion—with th' accent on th' bosh? They don't all of 'em get squiffy, as they say in dear ol' Lunnon. A souse is th' easiest thing in th' world t' get rid of you get up an' walk away. If you don't want t' go you say, 'Hire a hall!' That quiets 'em down. There's a hundred ways o' squelchin' 'em. Gee, kid, old Daddy Bowman's stuffed your head with a lot o' junk. Look at me. I go everywhere an' have good times, an' ain't headed for th' reformatory none. Of course, there's a lot o' hard boiled eggs; but you simply give 'em th' gate after th' first round. Say, I ain't heard th' jewel song lately."

Nancy frowned and looked away. "I haven't had the heart," she said. "You've made me lose some of my confidence."

"Aw, kid, I'm sorry! I didn't want t' hurt you, but you was givin' up everythin' for somethin' you wasn't sure of. Cheatin' yourself outa good times, an' all that. Your Daddy Bowman was a good scout; but what'd he know about a girl's heart?"

"He only wanted to save me from unhappiness."

"An' piled it on t' you a mile high!"

Nancy turned upon her friend with a species of fury so new and unexpected that Jenny stared at her dumfounded.

"Do you want to know? I am what I am by sheer force of will. Every drop of blood in me cries out for good times and more good times! That is why I have buried myself in study, study. I am afraid of myself. Who am I? I don't know. My name isn't Bowman. Only God knows what it is. And the knowledge sometimes fills me with the wildest recklessness, and if I ever let myself go in those moments I dare not picture the end! That is why I act like a snob and a prude!"

She flung herself into Jenny's arms and Jenny held her close with infinite tenderness and understanding, until the storm passed.

The Famous Creator of Fashions

JEWELS, jewels everywhere! It matters not whether they be real or paste. In these days of jeweled garments they are most often the latter. Then when one does have a string of real pearls or a string of real emeralds, one locks them in the safe and wears paste anyway—and the effect is just as gorgeous.

The fall evening gowns are glittering examples of the present-day rage for beauty and richness of effect.

They understand the subtlety of shimmering, jewel-embroidered bands used against plain heavy satins and crepes, and the charming results are shown in the four evening modes above.

They are bound to lose much when the color is omitted, for one cannot tell at a glance that this one uses diamonds, pearls and emeralds against pale gray, and that one sapphires against hydrangea blue.

The present period in fashions is an interesting one. Like recent periods it goes back to former times for its inspiration. It plucks one charming detail here and another there and blends them into a mode which puts across its own distinct individuality.

Many things in the present season take us back to the Venetian period. There are the interesting tricornes with their long, slanting sides just as they were worn by the boatmen of Venice. For variety there are interesting versions, not in the regulation type, but with points unevenly spaced and bent up at the front, side or back to avoid monotony.

The first quarter of the 16th century in Venice was one of the most lavish periods in dress. Luxury and elegance abounded everywhere and the gorgeousness of fabrics was unrivalled. Gem-embroidered velvets and satins were worn by all who could possibly afford them.

This had brought dissension some quarter-century before, as the aristocracy could hardly be distinguished from those below them who could afford to dress as well. Laws had been passed regulating the cost of robes, jewels and furs. But when the laws came gradually to be ignored, extravagance was more reckless than ever.

This regulation of dress by law occurs in other instances. When lace first ascended to greatest beauty laws were passed in Italy, Belgium and France regulating the wearing of this exquisite trimming. Gold and silver lace could be worn only by those of high degree, while the lower classes could not wear lace costing over certain set amounts.

However this may be, the Venetian period furnishes inspiration for the modish tricorne, and is also reflected in the jewel-trimmed gowns for winter evenings.

Strange to say, the ecclesiastical influence is also here. Just as the quaint lines of the monk's robe found expression in apparel of last winter, so the jeweled band trimming suggests the priest's vestments.

Straight from this source comes the inspiration for the diamond, pearl and emerald-embroidered strips that swing from the girdle of the pale gray charmeuse on the enlarged figure. For added interest, the skirt is made with its shiny side out, while the bodice turns its crepe surface to the outside. Notice the huge emeralds that serve as weights on the end of each strip, and find answering flickers of light in the necklace, earrings and the large emerald that centres the girdle. This use of one large stone where the girdle clasps takes us directly back to the days of Cleopatra.

A smart client appeared recently in a daytime costume which bespoke direct inspiration from the self-same source. Her simple frock was of black and white printed silk, patterned after the ancient printed cottons, and girdled by a round silver snake that used its fangs for a clasp at the front.

Silver leaves in empire design embroider narrow strips against the lovely hydrangea blue background of the frock at the left. It is extremely simple, being cut at the blouse so that two narrow strips fall over the arm in lieu of sleeves and finish their length with gorgeous bands thickly studded in sapphire beads.

Shimmering black charmeuse clothes the seated figure. The beaded treatment use with the black is stunning, for it alternates diamonds and beads of red. These are called "satin beads" and match the brilliant red charmeuse which lines the model and shows at the curved opening of the skirt. The long slim line is a feature of the surplice blouse which fastens diagonally across the front and is held by a diamond and satin bead clasp placed low over the left hip.

Orchid crepe with silver and diamonds makes the other frock. The sparkle of the embroidery and of the tiny jewelled fringe is lovely against the pale cool tint of the orchid crepe.

It will be noted that very fancy slippers are much in vogue with evening frocks of this more exquisite type. Lovely brocaded and jeweled slippers are made to order, many of them matching the bandeau or turban worn over the hair.

Coiffures, too, come in for their share of interest. The new simple coiffure is very lovely and is becoming to many types. It preaches simplicity in effect, merely drawing the hair back from the face and knotting it low at the back. It may be parted at the side or in the middle or not at all, but it should reveal a bit of the ears and lie flat over the crown of the head.

Bandeaux and turbans, it will be seen, are still very much in vogue for evening. The latter twists soft metal cloth about the head after the fashion of the Shah of Persia, while the simpler bandeaux show direct inspiration from the Greek.

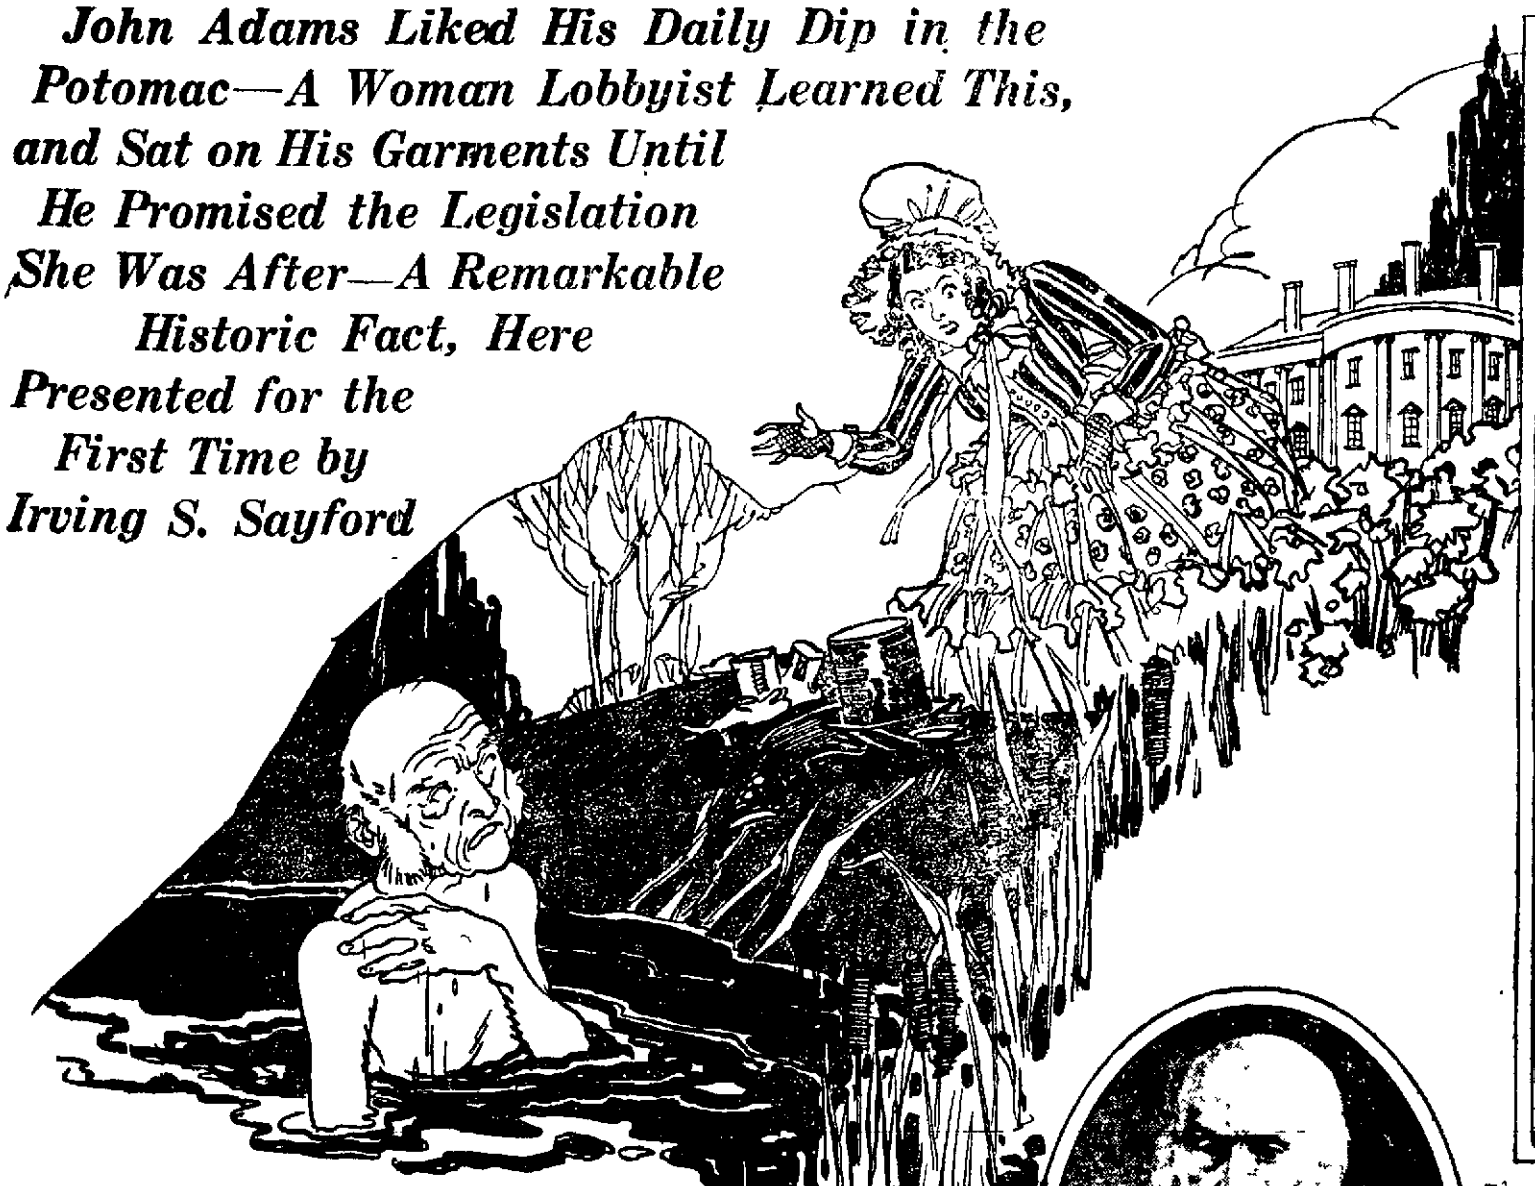
When a U.S. President, in Swimming Had His Clothes "Pinched" by a Lady

Copyright, 1923, by Public Ledger Company

John Adams Liked His Daily Dip in the Potomac—A Woman Lobbyist Learned This, and Sat on His Garments Until He Promised the Legislation She Was After—A Remarkable Historic Fact, Here Presented for the First Time by Irving S. Sayford



Mrs Margaret Eaton (Peggy O'Neill) late in life. President Jackson's advocacy of her in the celebrated national social war caused the disruption of his Cabinet

"DON'T you do it! Don't! If you do, Mr. President, I'll scream!"

The President of the United States was no fool. He knew things about Anne Royall. He knew she would scream if——

So the President of the United States played safe. And it is sure that throughout the ensuing hour, while the unhurrying river swathed him to the chin, John Quincy Adams felt as lonely as ever he had in the Senate of the United States; and knew himself to be far more hopelessly a minority against the unbeatable majority of a woman in possession of his personal clothes. She was putting it all over Great Britain in the game of "making words do the work of warships." The former plenipotentiary to the court of the Russias—this representative of "the best element in the politics and society of the United States"—gazed terrifiedly (he who never had been made to acknowledge fear) upon that brief intervening space of the Potomac, which made himself and his garments so uncontaminous; and it was borne in upon him that he did not love this female apostle of yellow journalism who sat possessively upon his dressing gown and slippers on the White House shore and threatened to scream if he advanced in the shallowing water and who cheerfully promised to keep him there the rest of his life unless he yielded to an interview on the State Bank question. Her terms—unconditional surrender—were indeed "such as are inflicted only upon a crushed adversary" and the victimized gentleman from Boston had been, all through a fightful career, uncrushable. He looked upon the lady's self assertion as ill bred and it soothed him not at all that it was five of the morning assignation was time of his making. To borrow Mr Adams own words spoken against another lady's conditions were peremptory, and their language overbearing. A gentleman of the Old School he was fussed of his modesty he desired to be restored to the dignity of his status ante bellum. But he had no clothes.

Had it been 100 years later Anne would go into national annals as retorting serenely "Nothing on me Mr President not one darn thing. You've got no clothes, I've got no interview—yet. When do we swap?"

What Anne did say and what John Quincy did do, and how it all came about and fell out, are secret lore dug up and charmingly displayed by Edna M. Colman in a chapter of her forthcoming book "Tenants of the White House, from Washington to Lincoln."

For upon a sunny morning in the early nineteenth century, the Chief Magistrate of this country, wholly without benefit of trunks while swimming in the Potomac River, was held up by the pioneer of American newspaper women, and to save his face and in general his person chin deep in his chosen bath-place, he dictated to her the granddaddy of all the presidential interviews in payment for surrender of his clothes.

By Edna M. Colman

JOHN ADAMS' life up to the time he became President was rich in experiences of travel and foreign service, most of which were shared by Mrs. Adams.

As United States Senator in Jefferson's times, filling a six year mission to Russia during Madison's reign; another mission to Paris until the Treaty of Ghent was signed—he saw the rise and fall of Napoleon and the exile to Elba.

About 1815 he was sent as Minister to the Court of St James and was recalled to fill the post of Secretary of State to Monroe.

In all of his adventures which were many and varied, none ever confronted him of a more unique or disturbing nature than his treatment, when President, at the hands of Anne Royall, dubbed "Mother of Yellow Journalism," one of the peculiarly picturesque figures of American history. Many titles both derisive and abusive have been heaped upon the memory of this remarkable woman, who was really a century ahead of her day in her conception of what a newspaper should be and in her methods of gathering news.

She started her journalistic career at the age of sixty, alone and impoverished, after a most eventful life of wealth, luxury and adventure. Introducing the personal interview, she gathered her news first hand and it is said that during her career as editor and chief reporter of Paul Pry and The Huntress, her two newspapers, she interviewed fully 500 of the most prominent men of the land.

Her dealings with President Adams were characteristic and drastic, and doubtless gave him the worst shock of his orderly, conservative life.

Discovering or surmising that the President held views on the State Bank question which he was not making public, Mrs Royall endeavored for months to gain admittance to the White House and speak with the Chief Executive. Meeting rebuff upon rebuff, this indomitable old lady set herself to watch the movements of the Nation's chief. Soon she became aware of his fondness for an early morning swim in the Potomac, and then she bided her time. And one morning while Mr Adams was enjoying the most perfect combination of weather and water he was hailed from the pebbly shore where he had hidden his clothes in some bushes, prepared to wade into the stream. In his quaternaries he strode toward the shore behind Anne Royall's stare upon his gown and slippers, all he had worn from the White House a few rods away—with her goose quill and ink bottle beside her, ready for action.

"Come here!" she ordered. Adams knew her and knowing her realized his doom. He waded toward her until he was only chin deep.

IT WAS at this physiologically moment Anne decided to threaten to scream.

"What do you want," asked the bewildered President.

"I'm Anne Royall," snapped the old lady. "I've been trying to see you to get an interview out of you for months on the State Bank question. I have hammered at the White House and they wouldn't let me in. So I watched your movements and this morning I stalked you from the mansion down here. I'm sitting on your clothes—as you see, and you don't get them until I get the interview. Will you give it to me now or do you want to stay in there the rest of your life?

"Let me out and dress," choked the President, "and I'll promise to give you the interview. Have the kindness to go behind those bushes while I make my toilet."

"No you don't," said Anne. "You are President of the United States and there are a good many millions of people who want to know and ought to know your attitude on this bank question. I'm here to get it. I SAID—if you come out any further I'll scream. And I just saw three fishermen around the bend."

Adams was a statesman and a diplomat he knew when retreat was the better part of valor. So he sat down to his waist in the placid water and submitted to the rapid battery of questions until he had given the first interview ever given by a Chief Executive of the United States. In the ordeal Anne wrung from him what no one of the papers of New York or Philadelphia had been able to get, the Administration's ideas regarding the long drawn and bitterly fought bank question.

Anne Royall's resourcefulness and energy were always at height when she was in search of news. She fought all of her life for the entire separation of church and state, for the exposure and punishment of corrupt officials, for sound money, the establishment of public schools everywhere, free of religious restrictions, for Freemasonry, justice to the Indians, liberal immigration laws, Sunday mail, transportation, internal improvements, territorial expansion, just tariff laws, the abolition of flogging in the Navy, for nullification, states rights regarding slavery, and free speech. She was no an infidel. She believed in the divinity of God and sought to free religious worship of sectarian lines.

ON JULY 2, 1854, she issued her last number. Her office was in a room over her desk and she slept in a few square feet of living space behind the press. Her last editorial was written in which she spoke of the passage of the Kansas Nebraska Bill, which she called the Kansas Nebraska Bill, which she called "a stinking message in the tariff" and among other comments made these:

'We trust to Heaven for these things: First that members may give us means to pay for this paper, perhaps three or four cents a member—a few of them are behind hand in their subscriptions—Our printer is a good man. We have only thirty one cents in the world, and for the first time since we resided in this city—thirty one years—we were unable to pay our last month's rent—six dollars. Had not our landlord been one of the best of men we should have been strict by this time. But we shall get that from our humble friends.

"Second we pray that Washington may escape the dreadful scourge, the cholera.

"Our third prayer (these were her last prayers, I wrote) is that the Union of these States may be eternal.

"And I [illegible] life from infancy to the day of her death at the age of eighty five was adventurous and adventurous. She was born in Maryland in 1769. Her father William Newport reported to be the illegitimate son of a [illegible] was an unusually well educated man and he gave to his daughter a good deal of instruction in reading and general instruction in the schools. She was superior to most of her neighbor's children. During her life she lived in bitter poverty and hardships, her neighbors [illegible] and finally with means from an unknown source. But after her death Anne and her mother and sister were in constant flight from the Indians.

"Mrs Newport married again and shortly afterward became again widowed. With her [illegible] and Anne she wandered always in the Pennsylvania woods until finally she reached Sweet Springs, Va. There they fell in with Captain William Royall, elder veteran of the Revolution and of the Anglo American War. He was so attracted to the bright little pioneer maid Anne that he made her education his task and in a later year he wedded her in Botetourt County, Va.

AFTER sixteen years of sheltered luxury [illegible] relying on her pen for her support, relations contracting her world, she left [illegible] ten years in litigation, contested and he case was finally decided against her and she was deprived of all her property possessed, despite the legality of her marriage, from the point of requirement. While [illegible] was fighting Mrs Royall [illegible] three years a traveled [illegible] through the South and [illegible] Washington in the view of applying for a pension, she got as far as Alexandria when her funds gave out. There an old friend M. H. Clagett, proprietor of the City Hotel—a building still stands a landmark—took her in and installed her as an honored guest of the house for the winter. During this hospitality she wrote her book, The History and Manner in the United States by a Traveler. In this and further books she mercilessly flayed the manners and habits of her visiting and their citizens for their sins of omission and commission as they led by the examples of her own rural standards and by their differing reactions to her in colonies recount her experiences, [illegible] relations and their [illegible] reputation as a clever [illegible] hustle writer.

"She spice [illegible] the University and the hospitals [illegible] bitter scoring. A [illegible] note.

"I NEVER left a place with less regret. Not that I was disliked, see with Philadelphia—I was pleased that I had seen it (she had traveled forty hours by fast stage from Washington to Baltimore, thence come by boat to the foot of Arch street and secured lodging with a Mrs Burns 14 Arch st. In the ensuing days was called upon more than once to soak off Anne's aches with hot gin, because Anne was low in funds and her feet swelled and blistered with walking to and from interviews she being a stranger. I was pleased with it for its own sake and above all I was pleased with a [illegible] what [illegible] a [illegible] that capacity [illegible] cities. The world [illegible] of the human race [illegible] but few of those courtesies which fasten upon the heart of the stranger.

ANNE ROYALL [illegible] the press [illegible] Francis Scott Key, Anne Kendall, John Rives, Duff Green, [illegible] and William Beaton. Her methods annoyed and irritated them, but she waked them from their sleepy mortality statistics, prosy editorials and third hand political opinions to a realization that they were not filling the requirements of the reading public at a time when a four-cornered election had thrown John Quincy Adams into the presidency through the House of Representatives, when old Andrew Jackson was waging his Peggy O'Neill social war on his Cabinet and on society in general * * * and when all of the political and economic elements of the young Republic were forcing its emergence from swaddling clothes into the growth of a Nation by the most painful and eruptive means.

A whirlwind of invective, a firebrand of indignation, a torrent of abuse, Anne Royall was keen on the scent of every bit of news * * * she kept prodding at the big issues with her nagging stinging little sheet, hitting alike friend and foe * * * when her beloved land and its safety were involved. In the course of her remarkable career she met and talked with every man who held the presidency from Washington to Lincoln and as author and editor she interviewed every man and woman of consequence in the United States.

She called down upon her head unlimited abuse for her friendship for and defense of Mrs Margaret Eaton (Peggy O'Neill). The [illegible] in this famous case was attributed the bitterness of the clergy toward Anne as it is the fact that several of them were instrumental in bringing about her arrest and trial on three counts—as a public nuisance, as a common brawler and as a common scold. This trial a great farce, was the first of its kind to be held in an Anglo Saxon court in nearly 300 years. Senators of the United States and the Judiciary of Congress were among the witnesses called.

THE learned judges unearthed an ancient [illegible] common law statute which appeared to fit the case but even after the jury had found Washington men had brought in the verdict of guilty the court had not the courage to administer the prescribed ducking stool punishment in the capital. But she must be punished, so she was fined ten dollars, two hard up newspapermen raised the sum and required to give peace bond in $200 for one year. During the course of the trial a ducking stool was constructed at the Washington Navy Yard by order of Chief Justice Cranch of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia—so strong was the feeling of her conviction and the [illegible] necessity for its use. Hosts of folk were disappointed upon learning they were not to see Anne dipped.

How much Anne did not love her enemies may be inferred by this printed comment of [illegible] Cranch has a face with a good deal [illegible] in it. Judge Thurston is [illegible] but if possible harder [illegible]. He is laughter proof. He looks like [illegible] set upon the rack and [illegible] red on coal apples. The [illegible] sweet morsel of a judge who looks as though he is always sitting for his picture. In a face that resembles a country road after a passage of a troop of hogs."

And when the jury gave its verdict Anne [illegible] the United States marshal and [illegible]
